WILL ILLEGAL BASEBALL CONTRACTS GUARANTEE SUCCESS OF THIRD MAJOR LEAGUE?

JOHN KLING

JIMMY CALLAHAN

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Are we to have three major leagues next season?

Or, if not next year, then in 1911?

Base ball men are asking these questions. And the major leagues are preparing for war.

Another big league means another base ball war. It means invasion. This spells "fight" until the invaders are put out of business or taken into organized base ball.

Chicago will be the hot bed. With National and American league teams now dividing the city's business, organized base ball will wage desperate war against an organization which tried to get a portion of the kale.

There has been "a third league" talk for two or three years. No one has paid much attention to it, but developments indicate that the idea is crystallizing. At the bottom is discovered Jimmy Callahan and John Kling, the latest victim of the blacklist.

It was some days ago that Callahan, who owns the Logan Squares of Chicago, dared Charlie Murphy, owner of the Cubs to execute his threat and enjoin Kling from playing with his independent team here.

Said Callahan, "If you do, I'll drop a bomb into organized base ball that will make the panic of '73 look like a bridge whist party."

Murphy didn't enjoin.

But Callahan, who says he has an acre in the hole, told an Examiner correspondent a few things, upon which he and Kling and the men behind them base their hope of a successful invasion of organized ball territory and the organization of another big league.

"Base ball," said Callahan, "is the finest little trust in the world. Its players are slaves just as were the redemptioners, who mortgaged their lives to escape British rule.

"It is this knowledge which caused Kling and I to organize teams which may be the nucleus of a third major league. Base ball is a commercial monopoly and Kling has been blacklisted, contrary to common and statutory law.

"If you think base ball as now conducted isn't a trust, glance over these arbitrary laws:

"The game shall be owned and controlled by the trust for profit.

"Players must enter voluntary servitude for the term of their base ball lives.

"No rival organizations of private capitalists, clubs owned by cities or co-operative teams shall exist in competition with trust clubs.

"All players shall be bought and sold in the base ball market as trust chattels.

"Defiance of this rule by any one shall rally members of the trust to war against the rebellious."

"Isn't that lovely? Players may be bought and sold like horses. Of course, the dominion of the owners is limited to the ball field, but as that is where the player's asset is saleable, this means unlimited power.

"The National league did not become a trust asset until the American league became powerful enough to force an alliance. And as is the case when monopoly is smashed, the big fellows got together and formed the trust.

"The rules adopted provide for the sale of the national sport without respect to the liberty of the players, the right of fans, the constitution of the United States, of common law or of the statutes.

"An unknown player takes the salary offered him. Once signed to a contract, he is subject to ownership by the magnates as the price of his privilege to earn a living. He belongs to his club as a horse to his owner. If he shows class enough to bring a big price, the club gets the money, not the player. He doesn't see any of it.

"Let a player object to being bartered as an animal chattel, or demand a portion of the price he brings, and he goes to a base ball death.

"When the American league took Lajoie and others from the National, the latter enjoined the American from interfering with its 'property rights.' The court held no injunction could be issued save in Lajoie's case, because supposed right in players could not exist, being contrary to liberty, freedom of trade and natural justice.

"The American league got the players, but the right of players to freedom of contract was established. This decision now proves a boomerang, because it defined the rights of American league players to the same freedom of contract.

"But to protect itself, the trust recognizes contracts as binding and refuses to admit the rights of players. Having the power of economic life and death over players, the latter are virtually slaves.

"When the new league goes through this will be obliterated. Players will recognize and grasp the opportunity to secure freedom, and while the tactics of other days may be indulged in, it will in the end prove better for the public and the players."

Callahan did not mention the cities which he will invade, but it is generally understood that Chicago, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Toledo, Buffalo, Columbus, Indianapolis and Louisville will form the circuit.

This means the territory of the American association will be invaded in six cities. The Eastern league in one, while in Chicago, both the National and American leagues will be bucked.

COLLEGIATE WILL MEET T.C.S. TO-MORROW

Fast Game on Riverside Park Saturday Afternoon.

The followers of the P.C.I. Rugby team will see their favourites in action to-morrow afternoon at Riverside Park against the fast Senior team from Trinity College School, Port Hope. Billie Gibson and his clansmen have put in a good week's practice and their game with the Rough Riders last Saturday helped a whole lot with the result that they are now going strong and should give the boys from the Lake Shore School a hard battle. T.C.S. have a strong line up and fast experienced backs are coming to Peterborough as an opening game to put them into shape for the opening of their scholastic league. A large crowd is expected to see Principal Kenner's boys in action. They play a clean gentlemanly game and deserve the interest of the sporting fraternity of the city.

RUGBY

The T.A.S. junior Rugbyists will practice to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock on the Riverside Park.

TIGERS AGAIN RETURN TO THEIR LAIR WITH AMERICAN PENNANT

Hughey Jennings Triumphs Over Connie Mack—First Game for World's Championship to be Played in Pittsburg, Friday, October 8th.

A SERIES OF SIX GAMES

Boston, Sept. 30.—The fight for the American League pennant is over and Detroit is the victor. Thrice she has won the championship in succession, which is the record for the league. The champions lost their game here to-day, 9 to 7, but when they learned that Philadelphia had fallen down twice their spirits rose. To-day's game was hard fought, both teams using two pitchers. Mullin was batted hard in the first inning and in a part of the second. Willett also was hammered hard. Detroit drove Wood from the box, but Hall had the visitors scoreless. Three runs tallied in each of the first two innings by the home team made it look as though Boston was going to win easily. Detroit was not long in getting started and by fast work on the bases and timely hitting was soon leading by one run. Boston won in the eighth inning. With two out and with men on second and third French singled, scoring two runs. Another hit followed, giving Boston a total of nine. Detroit got one man to first in the ninth, but he was left on second base. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Boston	9	12	3

Batteries—Mullin, Willett and Schmidt; Wood, Hall and Donohue Umpires—Connolly and Dineen.

Athletics Dow and Out.

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—The American championship season was decided in favour of Detroit when Chicago defeated Philadelphia in both games of a double-header here this afternoon by the scores of 8 to 5 and 6 to 4. Philadelphia played poorly in both games. Scores:

	R.	H.	E.
Philadelphia	3	7	5
Chicago	8	9	3

Batteries—Dygert and Lapp; Scott, and Payne. Umpires—Sheridan and Kerin.

Second game	R.	H.	E.
Chicago	6	12	3

Batteries —, Krause, Coombs and Lapp; Burns and Owens. Umpires—Sheridan and Kerin.

Championship Games.

The National Baseball Commission in session at Cincinnati yesterday drafted a schedule of dates for the world's championship games between Pittsburg (National) and Detroit (American), as follows:

Friday, Oct. 8, at Pittsburg.
Saturday, Oct. 9, at Pittsburg.
Monday, Oct. 11, Detroit.
Tuesday, Oct. 12, at Detroit.
Wednesday, Oct. 13, at Pittsburg.
Thursday, Oct. 14, at Detroit.

In case either one or both of the games scheduled for Pittsburg on Friday, Oct. 8, or Saturday, Oct. 9, are not played on account of rain or any other cause, the postponed games shall be played on return Pittsburg Club returns from Detroit, provided, however, that the Pittsburg Club shall be required to remain in Detroit until the first two games scheduled shall be played.

In case it becomes necessary to play the seventh game, the city in which it is to be played will be determined by the commission, as is provided for by supplemental rule No. 4.

In case 4½ innings of any scheduled games are not played tickets held for such game will be good for the day on which such postponed game will be played, as announced in the public press.

Prices of admission to the games are fixed to range from 50 cents to the bleachers to $2 for a reserved seat.

The National League umpires will be J. E. Johnstone and Wm. Klem. The American League, Frank (Silk) O'Loughlin and Wm. O. Evans.

HAVELOCK'S CHANCE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Will Play Home-and-Home Games With Brussels.

Galt, Oct. 1—Green River and Brussels visited here yesterday and played the semi-final for the intermediate championship of Ontario, the former winning by 1 goal to 0. Jimmy Strachan scored the winning goal near the close of time in the second half. For Green River, Capt. Neiswater, at centre half, and Rowley, on the forward line, played skilful soccer. Brussels will meet Havelock for the championship next Tuesday at Brussels, and next Thursday at Havelock.

This is the Mark!

Every good work is preceded by a dream which most folks think will never come true.

In 1897 the Semi-ready system of tailoring was "predicted" to failure by its many critics—yet 190 merchant tailors applied for Semi-ready agencies in Canada during the past year. Every city of size has its Semi-ready tailoring store—the centre of correct fashion for men.

Semi-ready Tailoring is not the "ready-to-wear" system of selling good clothes—"Semi-ready" is now "the way of to-day" with all men who know good dress.

CRESSMAN'S ON GEORGE STREET

RECITAL BY MR. ASTLEY

The season of dramatic recitals at the Margaret Eaton School of Expression opened last Thursday evening, with an extremely interesting reading of Charles Rahn Kennedy's much-discussed ethical play, "The Servant in the House," by Mr. John Astley. He gave a sincere and well-sustained interpretation of the several parts of a drama, which, even when staged, taxes the powers of a company. Mr. Astley has a flexible and sympathetic voice, with a wide emotional range. He exhibited a higher degree of verisimilitude from the fact that the recital was given entirely without the book. It is not easy to distinguish between parts, all of which were well conceived, but beyond doubt he did the 'Vicar' justice, and the 'Draingman,' too, portraying in each instance with much delicacy the progress of a spiritual illumination. Mr. Astley was assisted in his programme by Miss Amelia B. Warnock (Katherine Hale), who sang two groups of lyrics very charmingly. In the first group were 'A Birthday,' by Cowan, and 'Bluebird Song,' by Watson; in the second group two graver songs, the first of lines entitled 'Dead Leaves,' by Ethelwyn Wetherald, with a lovely musical setting by Mr. J. W. Garvin, and the second a 'Valley Song,' the words by the singer herself, and the music by Mr. Garvin. Miss Warnock was warmly received on this, her first appearance for the season.

PROF. TURNER TAKES UP THE CHALLENGE

Will Meet Mr. Genno at the Auditorium Roller Rink—In Centre Exhibition.

Prof. A. T. Turner, who is giving an exhibition of fancy and trick Roller Skating at the Auditorium Roller Rink during the last three nights of this week made his first appearance last night and delighted a large audience besides the many skaters who were present. He will be seen again to-night and to-morrow night and those who visit the rink will be pleased by his clever acts. Prof. Turner has accepted the challenge issued by Mr. G. A. Genno, of the Brock street rink and combes it in the following terms.

"I, the undersigned, Prof. T. A. Turner, of New York City, hereby accept the challenge issued by Mr. G. A. Genno and will skate him on any terms for trick and fancy skating on four wheels for $100 a side, or more, or for a series of three nights to skate at the Auditorium Roller Rink of the City of Peterborough and will sign articles and post forfeit at any time before October 2nd. Will be ready mention."

Prof. Turner contends that as Mr. Genno hurled the challenge he should be agreeable to meeting Prof. Turner at the rink where the latter is appearing, which he states is the general sporting rule.

A PRESENTATION

Made by Choir of St. Luke's to Mr. H. Kilpack.

Last evening, at the conclusion of the Harvest Festival at St. Luke's Church, the choir presented Mr. Kilpack, who is resigning, with a copy of the new Church of England hymnal, set to music. The presentation was made by Ald. J. J. Turner, Jr., who expressed regret at Mr. Kilpack's departure. Mr. Kilpack left to-day for Mitchell, where he has accepted a position.

ELOPES WITH HIS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

Philadelphia Lifer the New Yorker's Widow Named Her Father-in-law.

Examiner Special.

Philadelphia, Oct. 1.—That Walter R. Peterson, a contractor with offices in the Land Title Building, recently eloped to New York with Mrs. A. W. Peterson, widow of his son, who died about two years ago, she told to-day by their friends.

After her husband's death Mrs. Peterson made her home with her parents-in-law at No. 1930 Spring Garden Street. During the final illness of the elder Mrs. Peterson, about two years ago, the daughter-in-law was most attentive to her. This devotion is said to have touched the old lady's heart.

When the elder woman died Mrs. Peterson, it is said, was one of the bereaved household most prostrated by grief at the loss of her father-in-law. To those who knew the family intimately the wedding did not come as a surprise.

To a neighbour, Mrs. William Trimble, they intimated the fact that they were going to be married. She was also who opened the announcement to be made that the [illegible] was solemnized at [illegible] New York.

"THE FISHERMEN"
This is one of the Vitagraph Co's latest and best Dramas. Its biggest fault is that it is too short. You see the Fishermen and his little boy put out to sea in a small boat; you see the storm and then the boat upset, and then you see the Mother go to their rescue. It is a most pathetic picture and will bring tears to the eyes of most people who see it.
HE THIRD ON HANDCUFFS
A spirited comedy picture with abundant action and many new complications. It is Fred Tyson's wedding day and while waiting for his license he foolishly tries on a pair of handcuffs and you should see the fun before Fred gets to the church to be married.
"THE OLD ORGAN"
A most pathetic drama showing the great love of a husband for his wife and child. How he loses his wife in a drowning accident, and how years afterward he returns as a blind man and finds his little daughter by the playing of the "Old Organ" by his mother.
"AN AFFAIR OF HONOUR"
This is one of Pathe's very funny comedies. It shows how two fellows in love with the same girl get rehsed up and try to fight a duel. If you want to see fun come to the Royal and see "An Affair of Honour".

Held on Saturday and Was Largely Attended by Friends.

Keene, Sept. 30th.—On Saturday, 25th September, 1909, the remains of the late Mrs. Hastie were placed in the family plot in Keene cemetery. The lady was highly and widely respected as was shown by the large attendance of friends and sympathizers at the house and grave.

Mrs. Hastie was quiet in manner and life making strong and permanent friendships.

In case of sickness in her neighbourhood she was always a ready and willing helpmate to be depended on. Her life began in Scotland, being born at Riccarton, in Ayrshire, on Oct. 15, 1833. In 1855 she married William Hastie, of the same parish. Two years later the young people heard the call of the west, to which they responded, bringing with them rosy cheeks, stout hearts, good health and with high hopes for success in the land of their adoption. Crossing the Atlantic with their first born, Mrs. Geo. Smith, of Harvey, a mother of strong men and bright women, the first Canadian home of the Hasties was in Keene, but in 1864 the roof tree was moved to Lang, where it still lives and flourishes.

Some years ago Mr. Hastie retired from active business, which is still successfully carried on by his son David.

Mrs. Hastie's children are William of New Ontario; Joseph, of Villiers James, of Edmonton; Mrs. Smith, of Harvey; Mrs. Steel, of Montana; Mrs. Graham, of Otonabee and Miss Kate at home.

The service at the house and grave was conducted by her pastor, Rev. D. McDonald, of Keene Presbyterian church.

Among the flowers sent was a beautiful wreath by members of the family at home, and across it was that most potent word in human language "Mother." Also an anchor was sent by her son James, from Edmonton.

The last tokens of respect were contributed by her sons and grandsons as bearers.

The family, and especially Mr. Hastie, have the sympathy of the community, where he is respected as a man and a citizen of worth and integrity.—Com.

French Jury Has Justified Killing Of Suffering Wife

In Agony From Asthma She Had Begged Her Husband to Prove His Love by Ending Her Life, and He, in Compassion, Yielded.

COURT WAS IN TEARS

Examiner Special.

Paris, Sept. 30.—"A man whose wife is dying o fan agonizing disease is justified in killing her to put an end to her suffering if she implores him to do so."

So a jury, perhaps rather emotional, decided in the Court of Assizes here yesterday and acquitted Edmond Baudin, who, at her prayer, shot and killed his wife on January 31 last.

Mme. Baudin had been afflicted with asthma for years. It gripped her throat, it was a weight on her lungs, it stopped her breath. She begged her husband to end her by killing her quickly of the affection that was slowly throttling her.

Baudin, a mechanic, 39 years old, a rough and plain spoken man, sought to justify his act with words as straightforward as they were dramatic.

Tears streamed from his eyes while he testified. The jurors also wept, and the women in the courtroom were semi-hysterical.

The presiding judge, who disapproved of the jury's verdict, remarked:

"For the moment the bandage on the eyes of justice was a handkerchief."

"My wife, who I loved dearly, had suffered fearfully from asthma," Baudin testified. "She could not sleep. If she laid her head on the pillow she would cry, 'I am choking! In the name of the good God, end my misery! Let me die!'

"On the night she—she died she was suffering intensely," Baudin went on between sobs. "The medicine she was taking was nearly exhausted.

"'I will go and get you some more medicine,' I said.

"'No,' she said, 'buy no more medicine. You know we are poor. I am gone. Medicine will do me no good. I suffer! Oh, how I suffer!

"'But pay no more for medicine. I have cost you too much money already.

"'If you love me, put me out of my misery. Prove your love and let me leave you. Kill me! If you were a determined man you would not see me suffer as I do.'

"I was maddened by the sight of her agony," Baudin ended. "I seized a revolver with which I intended to defend our home; I shot her in the head; she died instantly.

"I determined then to kill myself, but I thought of my sister, the only other being who depends on me. I went to see my sister. She wept, but told me I should surrender myself to the police, which I did at once."

When Beaudin finished his testimony, given with unaffected emotion, every person in the court was in tears.

Following him, Dr. Dupre, a distinguished alienist, testified that Baudin is perfectly sane. But, said Dupre, he was incited to his fatal act by the stronger will of his wife. Pity for her, directed by her will, led him to shoot her.

As Baudin left the courtroom a free man the crowd applauded him.

COPY OF AN 18th CENTURY JAMAICAN PLANTER'S WILL

For the following copy of a Jamaican planter's will we are indebted to Mr. T. E. B. Yeats of the Bank of Montreal staff, of this city. The document has been for many years in the possession of Mr. Yeats' family in Ireland. It will, no doubt, be perused with interest by our readers, as giving very eloquent testimony to the monetary value of slaves in the early years of the 18th century. The wording has been followed as closely as possible, and several terms, now obsolete, will be found embodied therein:

In the name of God, Amen, I Nicholas Gore, of the parish of St. Davids, in the Island of Jamaica, planter, being at present in health and in sound and perfect mind and memory, praise be therefore given to the Almighty God and seriously calling to mind the certainty of death and the uncertainty of the time, therefore do make and ordain this my last will and testament in manner and form following, first, I commend y soul into the hands of Almighty God, hoping through the Merits, Mercy, Death and Passion of our Saviour and Redeemer, Jesus Christ to obtain full pardon for all my sins and enjoy eternal happiness in the world to come. Secondly, I commit my body to the earth to be decently interred, according to the directions of my Heirs Hereinafter named and as for what worldly substance it hath pleased Almighty God to bestow on me, I give and bequeath in manner and form following, viz., Imprimis I give and bequeath to my loving brothers and sisters—all my whole estate, both real and personal, their names as follows: my loving brothers, Christopher and Henry Gore and my sisters, Mable, Ann and Diana Gore to be equally divided among them and in case of either of their deaths to go to the heirs of their body lawfully begotten and in case of no heirs of their bodies to be equally divided among the survivors. Item, I will and order that all the debts which I shall really owe any person or persons at the time of my decease be first paid and satisfied by my heirs hereinafter named, so soon as conveniently they can. Lastly, I do hereby revoke, disannul and make void all former wills by me heretofore made and do declare this present instrument to be my last will and testament according to my true intent and meaning. And therefore do hereby nominate and appoint my well beloved friends, Andrew Archdeacon, John Norris, George Bennett, Esq., Richard Barnwall, executors of this, my last will and testament, and do empower them after my decease to sell all my lands, negroes, cattle, household stuff, etc., and to remit it home to my brothers and sisters as before mentioned, living in the County of Meath, in Dublin, and the town of Trimer or elsewhere in the Kingdom of Ireland.

SHAFTS OF WISDOM

A good turn in the kitchen is as good as a prayer in the chapel.

There are only two things a woman can do if a man proposes, but there are more than 2,000,000 if he doesn't.

Our happiness depends on the affections we inspire.

Though there be little in a woman's advice, yet he that won't take it is not overwise.

A man should take for a wife the woman he would choose as a friend if she were a man.

Women write things they would never dare say. Men say things to a woman they would never dare to write.

"That's what a man wants in a wife, mostly; he wants to make sure o' one fool as 'ull tell him he's wise."—George Elliot.

We can sometimes love what we do not understand, but never completely understand what we do not love.

Man conceived fortune, but woman conducts it.

Where there is a little sympathy, or too much, the splitting of a straw is plot enough for a domestic tragedy.

Once let a woman know the worst, and she will be at her best.

SIR NIGEL

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Copyright 1906, 1909, by A. Conan Doyle.

The three archers at once ranged themselves on the same side as their comrade. They were bronzed, bearded men, short in stature, as were most Englishmen of that day, but hardy, strong and skilled with their weapons.

"Now, master, we are at your back," said they as they pulled and tightened their sword-belts.

But ready Cock Badding had been carried away by the hot lust of battle and had thrown aside every fear and doubt which had clouded him. To see a fight and not to be in it was more than he could bear.

"Nay, have it your own way!" he cried, "and may Saint Leonard help us, for a madder venture I have never seen! And yet it may be worth the trial. But if it be done let me have the handling of it, little master, for you know no more of a boat than I do of a war-horse. The skiff can bear five and not a man more. Now, who will come?"

Badding picked up his hammer. "I will come myself," said he, "and you also, little master, since it is your hot head that has planned it. Then there is Black Simon, the best sword of all Cinque Ports. Two archers can pull on the oars, and it may be that they can pick off two or three of these Frenchmen before we close with them. Hugh Baddlesmere, and you, Dicon of Rye—into the boat with you!"

"What!" cried Aylward. "Am I to be left behind? I, who am the Squire's own man? I'll fare the bowman who comes betwixt me and yonder boat!"

"Nay, Aylward," said his master, "I order that you stay, for indeed you are a sick man."

"But now that the waves have sunk I am myself again. Nay, fair sir, I pray that you will not leave me behind."

"You must needs take the space of a better man; for what do you know of the handling of a boat?" said Badding. Hush shortly. "No more fool's talk, I pray you, for the night will soon fall. Stand aside!"

Aylward looked hard at the French boat. "I could swim ten times up and down Frensham pond," said he, "and it will be strange if I cannot go as far as that. By these fingerbones, Samkin Aylward may be there as soon as you!"

The little boat with its five occupants pushed off from the side of the schooner, and dipping and rising, made its slow way toward the Frenchman. Badding and the archer took the single oars, the second archer was in the prow, while Black Simon and Nigel huddled into the stern with the water lapping and hissing at their very elbows. A shout of defiance rose from the Frenchmen, and they stood in a line along the side of their vessel shaking their fists and waving their weapons. Already the sun was level with Dungeness, and the gray of evening was blurring sky and water into one dim haze. A great silence hung over the broad expanse of nature, and no sound broke it save the dip and splash of the oars and the slow deep surge of the boat upon the swell. Behind them their comrades of the Marie Rose stood motionless and silent, watching their progress with eager eyes.

They were near enough now to have a good look at the Frenchmen. One was a big swarthy man with a long black beard. He had a red cap and an axe over his shoulder. There were ten other hardy-looking fellows, all of them well armed, and there were three who seemed to be boys.

"Shall we try a shaft upon them?" asked Hugh Baddlesmere. "They are well within our bowshot."

"Only one of you can shoot at a time, for you have no footing," said Badding. "With one foot in the prow and one over the thwart you will get your stakes. Do what you may, and then we will close in upon them."

The archer balanced himself in the rolling boat with the deftness of a man who has been trained upon the sea, for he was born and bred in the Cinque Ports. Carefully he nocked his arrow, strongly he drew it, steadily he loosed it, but the boat swooped at the instant, and it buried itself in the waves. The second passed over the little skiff, and the third struck in her black side. Then in quick succession—so quick that two shafts were often in the air at the same instant—he discharged a dozen arrows, most of which just cleared the bulwarks and dropped upon the deck. There was a cry on the Frenchman, and the heads vanished from the side.

"Enough!" cried Badding. "One is down, and it may be two. Close in, close in, in God's name, before they rally!"

He and the other bent to their oars; but at the same instant there was a sharp zip in the air and a hard clear sound like a stone striking a wall. Baddlesmere clapped his hand to his head, groaned and fell forward out of the boat, leaving a swirl of blood upon the surface. A moment later the same fierce hiss ended in a loud wooden crash, and a short, thick crossbow-bolt was buried deep in the side of their boat. "Close in, close in!" roared Badding, tugging at his oar. "Saint George for England! Saint Leonard for Winchelsea! Close in!"

But again that fatal crossbow twanged. Dicon of Rye fell back with a shaft through his shoulder. "God help me, I can no more!" said he.

Badding seized the oar from his hand; but it was only to sweep the boat's head round and pull her back to the Marie Rose. The attack had failed.

"What now, master-shipman?" cried Nigel. "What has befallen to stop us? Surely the master does not end here?"

"Two down out of five," said Badding, "and twelve at the least against us. The odds are too long, little master. Let us at least go back, fill up once more, and raise a mantelet against the bolts, for they have an arbalist which shoots both straight and hard. But what we do we must do quickly, for the darkness falls apace."

Their repulse had been hailed by wild yells of delight from the Frenchmen, who danced with joy and waved their weapons madly over their heads. But before their rejoicings had finished they saw the little boat creeping out once more from the shadow of the Marie Rose, a great wooden screen in her bows to protect her from the arrows. Without a pause she came straight and fast for her enemy. The wounded archer had been put on board, and Aylward would have had his place had Nigel been able to see him upon the deck. The third archer, Hal Masters, had sprung in, and one of the seamen, Wat Finnis of Hythe. Wild their hearts hardened to combat or to die, the five ran alongside the Frenchman and sprang upon her deck. At the same instant a great iron weight crashed through the bottom of their skiff, and their feet had hardly left her before she was gone. There was no hope and no escape save victory.

The crossbowman stood under the mast, his terrible weapon at his shoulder, the steel string stretched taut, the heavy bolt shining upon the nut. One life at least he would claim out of this little band. Just for one instant too long did he dwell upon his aim, shifting from the seaman to Cock Badding, whose formidable appearance showed him to be the better prize. In that second of time Hal Masters' string twanged and his long arrow sped through the arbalister's throat. He dropped on the deck, with blood and curses pouring from his mouth.

A moment later Nigel's sword and Badding's hammer had each claimed a victim and driven back the rush of assailants. The five were safe upon the deck, but it was hard for them to keep a footing there. The French seamen with axes and swords, fierce fighters and brave men. They swarmed round the little band, attacking them from all sides. Black Simon felled the black-bearded French Captain, and at the same instant was cut over the head and lay with his scalp open upon the deck. The seaman Wat of Hythe was killed by a crashing blow from an axe. Nigel was struck down, but was up again like a flash, and drove his sword through the man who had felled him.

But Badding, Masters the archer and he had been hustled back to the bulwark and were barely holding their own from minute to minute against the fierce crowd who assailed them, when an arrow coming apparently from the sea struck the foremost Frenchman to the heart. A moment later a boat dashed up alongside and four more men from the Marie Rose scrambled on to the blood-stained deck. With one fierce rush the remaining Frenchmen were struck down or were seized by their assailants. Nine prostrate men upon the deck showed how fierce had been the attack, how desperate the resistance.

Badding leaned panting upon his blood-clotted hammer. "By Saint Leonard!" he cried, "I thought that this little master had been the death of us all. God wot you were but just in time, and how you came I know not. The archer has had a hand in it, by the look of him."

Aylward, still pale from his seasickness and dripping from head to foot with water, had been the first man in the rescue party.

Nigel looked at him in amazement. "I sought you aboard the ship, Aylward, but I could not lay eyes on you," said he.

"It was because I was in the water, fair sir, and by my hilt! it suits my stomach better than being on it," he answered. "When you first set forth I swam behind you, for I saw that the Frenchman's boat hung by a rope, and I thought that while you kept him in play I might gain it. I had reached it when you were driven back, so I hid behind it in the water and said my prayers as I have not said them for many a day. Then you came again, and no one had an eye for me, so I clambered into it, cut the rope, took the oars which I found there and brought her back for more."

"By Saint Paul! you have acted very wisely and well," said Nigel, "and I think that of all of us it is you who have won most honor this day. But of all these men dead and alive I see none who resembles that Red Ferret whom my Lord Chandos has described and who has worked such despite upon us in the past. It would indeed be an evil chance if he has in spite of all our pains made his way to France in some other boat."

"That we shall soon find out," said Badding. "Come with me and we will search the ship from truck to keel ere he escapes us."

There was a scuttle at the base of the mast which led down into the body of the vessel, and the Englishmen were approaching this when a strange sight brought them to a stand. A round brazen head had appeared in the square dark opening. An instant afterward a pair of shining shoulders followed. Then slowly the whole figure of a man in complete plate-armor emerged on the deck. In his gauntleted hand he carried a heavy steel mace. With this uplifted he moved toward his enemies, silent save for the ponderous clank of his footfall. It was an inhuman, machine-like figure, menacing and terrible, devoid of all expression, slow-moving, inexorable and awesome.

A sudden wave of terror passed over the English seamen. One of them tried to pass and get behind the brazen man, but he was pinned against the side by a quick movement and his brains dashed out by a smashing blow from the heavy mace. Wild panic seized the others, and they rushed back to the boat. Aylward strung an arrow, but his bowstring was damp and the shaft rang loudly upon the shining breast-plate and glanced off into the sea. Masters struck the brazen head with a sword, but the blade snapped without injuring the helmet, and an instant later the bowman was stretched senseless on the deck. The seamen shrank from this terrible silent creature and huddled in the stern, all the fight gone out of them.

Again he raised his mace and was advancing on the helpless crowd where the brave were encumbered and hampered by the weaklings, when Nigel shook himself clear and bounded forward into the open, his sword in his hand and a smile of welcome upon his lips.

The sun had set, and one long mauve gash across the western Channel was closing swiftly into the dull grays of early night. Above, a few stars began to faintly twinkle; yet the twilight was still bright enough for an observer to see every detail of the scene: the Marie Rose, dipping and rising on the long rollers astern; the broad French boat with its white deck blotched with blood and littered with bodies; the group of men in the stern, some trying to advance and some seeking to escape—all a confused, disorderly, struggling rabble.

Then betwixt them and the mast the two figures: the armed shining man of metal, with hand uprised, watchful, silent, motionless, and Nigel, bareheaded and crouching, with quick foot, eager eyes and fearless happy face, moving this way and that, in and out, his sword flashing like a gleam of light as he sought at all points for some opening in the brazen shell before him.

It was clear to the man in armor that if he could but pen his antagonist in a corner he would beat him down without fail. But it was not to be done. The unhampered man had the advantage of speed. With a few quick steps he could always glide to either side and escape the clumsy rush. Aylward and Badding had sprung out to Nigel's assistance; but he shouted to them to stand back, with such authority and anger in his voice that their weapons dropped to their sides. With staring eyes and set features they stood watching that unequal fight.

Once it seemed that all was over with the Squire, for in springing back from his enemy he tripped over one of the bodies which strewed the deck and fell flat upon his back, but with a swift wriggle he escaped the heavy blow which thundered down upon him, and springing to his feet he bit deeply into the Frenchman's helmet with a screaming cut in return. Again the mace fell, and this time Nigel had not quite cleared himself. His sword was beaten down and the blow fell partly upon his left shoulder. He staggered, and once more the iron club whirled upward to dash him to the ground.

Quick as a flash it passed through his mind that he could not leap beyond its reach. But he might get within it. In an instant he had dropped his sword, and springing in he had seized the brazen man round the waist. The mace was shortened and the handle jobbed down once upon the bare flaxen head. Then, with a sonorous clang, and a yell of delight from the spectators, Nigel with one mighty wrench tore his enemy from the deck and hurled him down upon his back. His own head was whirling and he felt that his senses were slipping away, but already his hunting-knife was out and pointing through the slit in the brazen helmet.

"Give yourself up, fair sir!" said he.

"Woe to fishermen and to archers! I am a gentleman of cost-armor. Kill me!"

"I also am a gentleman of cost-armor. I promise you quarter."

"Then, sir, I surrender myself to you."

The dagger tinkled down upon the deck. Seamen and archers ran forward, to find Nigel half senseless upon his foes. They drew him off, and a few deft blows struck off the helmet of his enemy. A head, sharp-featured, freckled and foxy-head, disclosed itself beneath it. Nigel raised himself on his elbow for an instant.

"You are the Red Ferret!" said he.

"So my enemies call me," said the Frenchman, with a smile. "I rejoice, sir, that I have fallen to so valiant and honorable a gentleman."

"I thank you, fair sir," said Nigel feebly. "I also rejoice that I have encountered so debonair a person, and I shall ever bear in mind the pleasure which I have had from our meeting."

So saying, he laid his bleeding head upon his enemy's brazen front and sank into a dead faint.

CHAPTER XV.

The old chronicler in his "Gesten du Sieur Nigel" has bewailed his broken narrative, which rose from the fact that out of thirty-one years of warfare no less than seven were spent by his hero at one time or another in the recovery from his wounds or from those illnesses which arose from privation and fatigue. Here at the very threshold of his career, on the eve of a great enterprise, this very fate befell him.

Stretched upon a couch in a low-roofed, and ill-furnished chamber, which looks down from under the machicolated corner turret upon the inner court of the Castle of Calais, he lay half-unconscious and impotent, while great deeds were doing under his window. Wounded in three places, and with his head splintered by the sharp pommel of the Ferret's mace, he hovered betwixt life and death, his shattered body drawing him downward, his youthful spirit plucking him up.

As in some strange dream he was aware of that deed of arms within the courtyard below. Dimly it came back to his memory afterwards the sudden startled shout, the crash of metal, the slamming of great gates, the roar of many voices, the clang, clang, clang, as of fifty lusty smiths upon their anvils, and then at last the dwindling of the hubbub, the low groans and sudden shrill cries to the saints, the measured murmur of many voices, the heavy clanking of armored feet.

Sometime in that fell struggle he must have drawn his weakened body as far as the narrow window, and hanging to the iron bars have looked down on the wild scene beneath him. In the red glare of torches held from windows and from roof he saw the rush and swirl of men below, the ruddy light shining back from glowing brass and gleaming steel. As a wild vision it came to him afterward, the beauty and the splendor, the flying lambrequins, the jeweled crests, the blazonry and richness of surcoat and of shield, where sable and gules, argent and vair, in every pattern of saltire, bend or chevron, glowed beneath him like a drift of many-colored blossoms, tossing, sinking, stooping into shadow, springing into light. There glared the blood-red gules of Chandos, and he saw the tall figure of his master, a thunderbolt of war, raging in the van. There too were the three black chevrons on the golden shield which marked the noble Manny. That strong swordsman must surely be the royal Edward himself, since only he and the black-armored swift-footed youth at his side were marked by no symbol of heraldry. "Mailly! Manny! George for England!" rose the deep-throated bay, and over the gallant counter-cry: "A Chargny! A Charemy! Saint Denis for France!" thundered amid the clash and thudding of the battle.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

HER DEATH WAS HOURLY EXPECTED

Enterprise, Ont., Oct. 1st, 1908.
"For seven years I suffered with what physicians called a "Water Tumor." I could neither sit, stand, nor lie down. Hypodermics of morphia had to be given me to ease the pain.

MRS. JAMES FENWICK

My case seemed hopeless, and my friends hourly expected my death. I was so bad that I wanted to die, and it was during one of these very bad spells that a family friend brought a box of "Fruit-a-tives" to the house. After much persuation I commenced to take them, but I was so bad that it was only when I had taken nearly two boxes that I commenced to experience relief. I kept up the treatment, however, and after taking five boxes I was cured, and when I appeared on the street my friends said, "The dead has come to life," and this seemed literally true, because I certainly was at death's door."

(Signed) MRS. JAMES FENWICK.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box—6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c, or sent post-paid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

DO NOT BE HUMBUGGED.

MORE THAN EVER

Dishonorable and disreputable pharmaceutical concerns are flooding the market with cheap and worthless preparations designed to be imitations of "Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry."

Some of these are even labelled "Extract of Wild Strawberry," "Wild Strawberry Compound," etc., in the hope that the public may be deceived and led to purchase them, thinking they are getting the genuine "Dr. Fowler's."

Are you willing to risk your health—perhaps your life, to these no name, no reputation, likely dangerous, so-called Strawberry Extracts?

For sixty-five years "Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry" has been used in thousands of families for Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Colic, Cramps, Summer Complaint, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum and all Bowel Complaints.

Do not let the statement or unscrupulous dealer humbug you into accepting one of these cheap substitutes, to the detriment of your health and gain to his pocket.

Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on getting what you ask for. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 35 cents.

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indigestion and nervousness in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Confusion in the fingers led to add the doctor told me the feared paralysis. ON THE WINGS OF THE STORM.

There Came a Change In Her Views on the Question of Love.

By PHILIP KEAN.

(Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.)

The manager of the Bear Lake stock farm watched the storm from the window of his bungalow. It was a typical western hurricane, coming after a dry spell, with pink lightning and tempestuous winds and the continuous roll of thunder.

To the unaccustomed eye it was terrifying, but Alexander gazed undisturbed. He was young and strong.

But something very like fear gripped him now as he saw between the swaying trees a wraithlike figure running toward the house.

He went to the door and opened it. He dragged her over the threshold—a little, gasping, frightened girl.

"I'm so afraid," was all she could say at first.

"How does it happen that you are out?" He put her in a big chair by the side of the fireplace. "It's so late and such an awful night."

She looked at him with startled eyes as she tried to pin up the thick brown locks that had fallen about her shoulders.

"I—I was running away," she confessed.

"Oh." Alexander said as he sat down opposite her. "You look a bit old for that. I was nine when I decided to take to cave dwelling and a man Friday."

A dimple showed in the corner of her mouth. "But—but I wasn't running away to live in a cave. I was running away to get married."

"But," Alexander said presently, "you—you don't look quite old enough for that."

"I am eighteen," was the explanation, "and he is twenty-one."

"He?" murmured Alexander. "Where is he?"

Her lip quivered. "I think the storm must have kept him home. You wouldn't think a storm would matter to a man, would you?"

"Not a man who was going to marry you," Alexander found himself saying.

"Oh"—the warmth in his tone brought a rosy flush to her face—"of course something may have kept him."

"Where was he to meet you?" Alexander asked.

"Over there by the church. We are stopping at one of the cottages just beyond."

"And when you didn't find him there you ran to the nearest house?"

"I saw your light and ran toward it."

"And now," he told her, "if you are rested a bit I'll take you home."

"But I can't go back!" she cried. "The door locks with a spring, and I haven't a key."

"Ye gods!" Alexander's brows were knit.

And then, because he could think of nothing else to say, he asked, "Are you hungry?"

"Starved," she said.

He brought out crackers and cheese and sardines and olives and marmalade and all the dainties that a bachelor manager who elects to eat at meals the coarse food that is given his men keeps for private consumption.

"If—if I only knew where Bobbie was," she said, "I should be almost happy."

"So his name is Bobbie?" Alexander asked.

She nodded. "We went to school together, and he is at college now, and he hasn't anything to marry on, and that's why mother objected, and that's why we ran away."

"Do you love him?" Alexander asked slowly.

"Of course," she said quickly, "only I'm not so sure right now. It seems as if he couldn't have let me come out in the storm alone—if he had loved me."

"He couldn't," said Alexander briefly.

And then, after a moment, he said slowly, "I wonder if you know what love is really like—love for which one suffers, for which one dies, if need be?"

She caught her breath. "No one ever said such things to me of love before," she said. "Bobbie and I just thought of fun—and—of having our own way."

She was such a little innocent thing, but with such purity in her eyes, such a foreshadowing in her face of the woman that she might be, that Alexander said impulsively, "Dear little girl, wait until love—real love—comes to you before you marry."

She held out her hand to him. "I will," she whispered. "I will wait." And even as she promised there came a knock at the door.

Alexander opened it, and Bobbie stumbled over the threshold.

"Why didn't you wait?" he complained at once. "Why didn't you wait, Mollie?"

"It was such an awful storm, and you weren't there, Bobbie."

"You might have known I'd have come," he fumed. "I don't see why you came here. I looked everywhere for you, and then I saw this light, and I came over and looked through the window."

Alexander interposed. "She could not stay out in the night and storm. You were late."

The boy turned on him. "Well, what if I was?" he demanded. "Is it any of your business?"

"Yes"—the older man's tone was quiet—"it is always a man's business to see that a young and helpless girl is protected."

"But I"—

"I think you should take her home at once," Alexander advised, "and wait until you and she are old enough to know your own minds."

"Oh, don't preach," the boy flung out.

But Alexander's eyes were on the girl. "When a woman loves a man it is such a wonderful thing that we ought to give her all our chivalry. Wait until you are older, Bobbie, and you'll know."

"Oh, come on, Mollie," the boy interrupted rudely. "I've got the horses outside, and we can get away in a minute."

But she stood very still in the middle of the room. "No," she said.

"Why not?"

"Because I know now that I—I don't love you as I ought to marry you, Bobbie," she faltered. "I—I want to go home."

"Well, you can't go home," Bobbie told her—"not now. You haven't a key."

"She shall go home," Alexander said suddenly, "if she wishes."

They faced each other, the boy and the man, and then before the stern glance of the other Bobbie dropped his eyes.

"Oh, well, how will you manage it?" he said.

"I shall get her mother to the telephone," Alexander said, "and she can open the door for us."

The boy turned to the door. "I'll leave you to arrange it," he said to Alexander. "I don't seem to be in this." And he was gone.

"I'm afraid his feelings are hurt," Alexander said, "but it was best, wasn't it?"

He took Mollie's hand and stood looking down at her, and presently she said: "Yes, it was best. And now will you call up mother, please?"

When he had given the message over the wire he took Mollie home. On the way they said little, but just before they reached her porch she whispered: "I—I want to thank you for what you said to me about—love. I shall think of it differently—now. I shall never marry Bobbie."

"Perhaps Bobbie will be different," Alexander said.

"No; I couldn't marry him—now." She held out her hand. "Will you come and see us some time? Mother will want to thank you."

"Will I come?" Great joy ran through his veins. "Will I come?" Then he bent down over her. "Are you sure there isn't any chance for Bobbie?"

"Yes," very low.

"Then I'll come," he said, and he knew in his heart that some day he would teach her the things that Bobbie had not known how to teach—things of love and life and of happiness.

The Romance of Quinine.

How many of those who fully realize the value of quinine are familiar with the pretty story connected with the drug?

In the year 1639 Donna Ana, the beautiful wife of Don Luis Geronimo Fernandes de Cabrera Bobadilla y Mendoza, fourth count of Chinchona and governor of the Spanish province of Peru, lay sick and, it was feared, dying of an intermittent fever in her palace at Lima. Her physician, Juan de Vega, was at his wits' end. Her husband was in despair, when the corregidor of Loxa, a neighboring state, sent to the former a small packet of powdered quinquina bark, which he knew the Indians prized highly as a febrifuge.

Two years later, in 1640, the much named Count of Chinchona and his wife returned to Spain, and as the Countess Ana brought with her a quantity of the healing bark the distinction is claimed for her of being the first person to introduce it into Europe.

Her physician, we are told, made a large fortune by selling it in Seville at 100 reals the pound. It was this famous cure of the Countess Chinchona that induced the great Swedish botanist Linnaeus long afterward to rename the whole genus of quinine yielding tree "cinchona" in her honor.

Task of the West.

Is there any wonder that the people of the west are too busy to worry about politics; there will be lots of time for politics later on. Their present task is to garner the harvest, first everybody in the east, realizing how much depends upon that task, will club them God-speed in their work. Cure Neuralgic Agony

No affliction is so painful, so hard to bear as Neuralgia. It may strike any organ—one nerve, or, perhaps, a whole set of nerves may be affected. Physicians who have had large experience with this malady say local applications are best.

Protection against relapse is best secured by wearing a Nerviline Porous Plaster over the weak spot. No greater healer than a Nerviline Plaster is known. —it draws out congestion, absorbs deleterious secretions through relaxed pores, acts as a sure preventive against muscular aches, rheumatism, sciatica, stiffness, lumbago, and neuralgia.

Remember this: Nerviline treatment has for nearly fifty years been curing chronic cases—it will cure you, too—give it the chance: 25c bottles of Nerviline and Nerviline Porous Plaster 25c each. Sold all dealers.

O'HIGGINS IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Canadian Writer Is In Centre of Political Storm In Denver.

Mr. Harvey J. O'Higgins, formerly of Toronto, who has become one of the best known writers in New York, is very far from being a man who courts sensational publicity for himself or his work. But he is getting it just the same. His name is at present being mentioned in the newspapers of Denver, Colorado, almost as frequently as the name Beresford was mentioned in the pages of Toronto during fair week. It is, in fact, appearing constantly in papers all over the Western States; and it is just possible that before this article appears, Mr. O'Higgins may have been sandbagged or kidnapped, or possibly the fingers of his writing hand may have been shot away. Now, what on earth, you ask, has modest, quiet Harvey O'Higgins been up to that he should be in the thick of such a storm? Well, this is the way of it, and the story will be interesting to his many Canadian friends and admirers.

Most people who read the papers at all carefully have heard something of Benjamin Barr Lindsey, judge of the juvenile court in Denver. They call him "de kids' judge." He is the friend of all children, and believes that it is the duty of the state to be very, very careful in the handling of boys and girls who, standing unguarded and unadvised at the threshold of life, are in danger of becoming criminals instead of useful citizens. He believes in trying by every conceivable method that is practicable to set children on the right path before sentencing them to jail to herd with confirmed criminals. He has devised many ways of doing this, and children's society agents and Government officials from all over the world go to his court to observe the results of his juvenile parole system and other methods of dealing with youthful offenders. But he has not been content to fight for the children. For years he has been fighting against the rotten methods of machine politicians and dishonest corporations and combinations in the city and the state in which he lives. Some time ago Everybody's Magazine concluded that the publication of an autobiography of Judge Ben. B. Lindsey would be, in the language of Kid Burns, the "big noise" of a season in magazine features. So they arrange with the judge for the material, and sent Harvey O'Higgins to Denver to edit it—meaning that the latter would write the story, concisely and strikingly. Mr. O'Higgins says that Lindsey, who is a tiny ninety-eight pound man, but a lion in courage, has done wonders in the way of reform in Denver, although he has neither money, personal magnetism, nor strong friends. His enemies are legion, including all the gamblers and hard cases, male and female, of the city. He has been offered big bribes to quit his fight for the honest administration of honest laws. He has been threatened. Attempts have been made to discredit him and blacken his character, but he keeps on fighting.

Recently it became known in Denver that Judge Lindsey's real story containing "real names," and written by the skilful hand of Mr. O'Higgins was about ready for publication—a ripping story of 75,000 words. And during the past two weeks it is said that lawyers and detectives, representing powerful influences and men whose "real names" were likely to be heralded to a continent as crooks, have been busy trying to induce the magazine not to print the story. It is only to be hoped that no extreme western vengeance will fall upon Mr. O'Higgins for his part in promised sensational exposure, although such newspapers headings as "Gangs Plotted His Murder" are employed by friendly newspapers in describing the danger in which Lindsey himself stands. In this connection, however, it is reassuring to note that even the papers most strongly antagonistic to the judge are free in their praise of "the famous magazine writer and novelist" and "gentleman of charming personality" who is writing the sinister "autobiography."

The Boy Collector.

One day recently the front doorbell of a certain Toronto house rang and the mistress of the home, answering the summons, found on the threshold a diminutive Irish lad.

"Well," she queried, "what is it?"

"I've come for the money," was the laconic but cryptic response.

The lady had no idea what the boy meant, but finally the latter made it clear that he had come to collect a small sum owing on a parcel which had been delivered to a visitor in the house. The lady paid the money and then suggested that she be given a receipt.

"Receipt—what's that?" asked the small but determined collector.

The lady explained that as they were each acting the part of agent in the transaction it would be advisable for him to give her something in the shape of a vouchee.

The lad's education evidently did not include a knowledge of the technicalities of any such formal proceeding as this, but he was bright—and Irish. So, with the remark, "Aw, I know what you want now," he wrote on the back of the memorandum he had brought with him:

A Mackenzie Philippic.

Gratifying offers are being received daily from private individuals, who are ready to donate old and historic volumes and documents to the new Ontario legislative library now being formed to replace that which was destroyed by fire. Only this morning a letter was received from a Toronto gentleman offering a relic of the rebellion days of 1837. It is a pamphlet by William Lyon Mackenzie entitled the "Legislative Black List of Upper Canada, or Official Corruption and Hypocrisy Unmasked." This is a pamphlet which was not in the collection of the destroyed library.

National Defence.

It is not to be expected that in Canada the sea would be as much in evidence as in England or in Australia. Our eyes have been fixed rather upon the land than on the sea; our energy and enterprise have been devoted to developing our great areas of land, just as the energy and enterprise of the people of the United Kingdom led them to explore the seas and to open up new avenues of trade by sea. Much misunderstanding and wrangling would be avoided if allowance were made for geography and history, and if movements for defence were carried on along and not against the natural lines of historical development.—Star, Toronto.

The DAY of the DUEL

THE ARBITRAMENT OF ARMS

(A TRUE STORY)

THE SURGEONS RAN TO HIM.

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

WEAVING of brilliant colors, laughing faces and bright eyes began through Rue les Droits de l'Homme when the late afternoon sun flooded Valetta in orange and gold. The massive, brooding battlements of the Maltese citadel took warmth to their sombre surfaces. Curtains were drawn aside in balcony windows. Venders began to cry their wares. The hum of stirring street life rose in pitch and volume as a tempering breeze circled through the purple shadows, bringing the city to its real awakening for the day.

The two midshipmen from the American war vessel that had been lying for two weeks past in the harbor below drifted leisurely through the throng. Malta had not ceased to be a source of utter new wonder and delight to them, and as they walked they were alert to note every quaint detail of color, form and sound.

"Why do you bear to the right, Bainbridge?" asked O'Connor, the elder of the two, suddenly, as the other edged into the press. "It is more comfortable to stay with the procession on this side."

"You forget," said Bainbridge, with a laugh. "I must have the daily boutonnière from 'Neste, my little flower girl—mine, I said, O'Connor." O'Connor frowned but offered no further objection. They pushed through the crowd and reached the outer fringe of the traffic to the right, close to the row of booths, where graceful, dark skinned Maltese lassitudes offered fruits, flowers, sweets and shells for sale.

Many drew up at one of these booths, piled high with vivid and fragrant blossoms of the islands, a wild riot of hues and scents. At the side of the stand stood 'Neste, who greeted them gayly, waving a slim hand at O'Connor and nodding with more familiarity to Bainbridge. Hers was the purest type of Maltese beauty, with soft, pleading Oriental eyes, delicate features and trim figure. With light, caressing touch she began to select their flowers herself, drolling the two young men in her broken phrases of English.

"No, Captain," she said, shaking her head decidedly at O'Connor, who sought to do his own selecting despite her protest, "I will give what shall be for you. Perhaps, now, a prickly pear, eh?" It was 'Neste's invariable plan, and not a bad one, to address all naval men as captain. She triumphed with it once more, for O'Connor gave over his clumsy effort with a short laugh.

"There is for you, Captain Bainbridge," she went on, and held out a single white rosebud twined with a sprig of green.

"But what Am I to do with it, 'Neste?" asked the boy in mock despair. "Carry it in my hands? I swear, for I have no skill in wearing it."

It was the daily comedy. He would not hear her protests and so she must leave her booth and fasten the flower in his lapel herself, while he made no attempts of his admiration for her, and her olive cheeks took just the faintest flush. She wore three pomades, almost velvet black, for O'Connor.

"Because you look dark at me," she said, trying to translate his disapproving mien. But he made no other that she fasten his flowers into place, and she finished them to him with a little toss. As O'Connor moved away, after paying her, Bainbridge leaned toward the stand and whispered a phrase. Then he hurried after his companion. O'Connor had turned in time to see the incident.

They walked in silence through the city's busiest thoroughfare for some minutes. O'Connor was occupied with thoughts that made his the only serious face in all that bewildering, shifting kaleidoscope. Bainbridge, with a smile upon his lips, paid no attention to the other's obstruction, finding employment in eager observation of costumes, houses and the throngs of the streets. O'Connor's words came without warning.

"You've been meeting that girl," he said, and his voice was not for opposition. The younger man turned to him, quick color sweeping to his handsome face.

"What's that to you?" he asked sharply.

"Nothing, to me, so far as she is concerned. But [illegible] you are."

"Confound your impudence—"

"Perhaps you haven't heard that Cochran, the English secretary, had filed a prior claim," said O'Connor.

"Perhaps all nonsense," returned Bainbridge, impatiently.

O'Connor took him up readily, as one who has planned for his speech. "Now look here, Joe. I'm not going to quarrel with you, but you ought to know that [illegible] report that Cochran is [illegible] with this woman in some way. For Heaven's sake don't go and start a flirtation with her. What do you know about these people? They're three-quarters Arab, and you can't understand them, nor they you. Cochran is here. If he wants to make a fool of himself over a flower girl he knows how to manage it. Let him. I know you mean no harm, but he won't. You'll have trouble if you go on."

"What business is it of Cochran's, or yours either?" returned the boy, hotly. "And she's not Arab, she's half Italian."

O'Connor could have smiled at the inconsequential defence had the affair not seemed too weighty. Meanwhile he was not exactly sure of the ground he stood upon. Joseph Bainbridge was to him as a brother and he meant to give advice whether or not it was asked or desired.

"Answer me plainly, Joe. You don't think you're in love with the girl, do you?"

"No, of course not."

"Well, then, don't you see what a fight you're getting yourself in? There's only one construction these people will put upon your actions, and only one Cochran will put upon it. Don't go any further with it, Joe. I don't quite understand myself what Cochran's interest is, but probably it's not much to his credit. It's no place for you, Joe."

"I'm quite capable of attending to my own affairs," said Bainbridge stiffly.

"Oh, very well. If you feel that way there's nothing more to say. I think I'll return to the landing."

The Charm of 'Neste.

They parted with salutes and Bainbridge went on alone. The boy was a little uncomfortable. He had met the girl, had strolled among the shops and along the harbor with her. She attracted him and he saw no reason why he could not meet and admire a young woman here on the same footing that he would at a home port. 'Neste had the prettiest face and the neatest ankle in Malta, and if he chose to play sentiment before her, according to the ancient privilege of the mariner, why, what harm and whose affair? He decided that O'Connor was merely presuming on his two years' advantage in age. As for Cochran, a thin faced, arrogant person, whom he had met once or twice, he refused to believe that this or any other man had a right to say who should and who should not be the flower girl's admirer. But how had O'Connor learned so much? That puzzled him a little, for, while not ashamed of his attention to 'Neste, he had certainly not advertised it.

An hour after dark he waited for her on one of the narrow, precipitate streets down near the harbor. She was a little late, but presently she glided toward him, wrapped in a shawl or mantle of dark shade. He could not quite see her face in the faint light from a lamp over a doorway, but there was an air of uneasiness in her manner and her voice as she answered his gallant welcome. She glanced back over the way she had come.

"One would think you were afraid of something," he said, ruffled a little at her preoccupation. She spoke softly and he missed the usual tone of banter.

"And if I am, Captain?"

"Oh, if you are it does not become you."

"We cannot meet again here," she began hurriedly. "Even now somebody sees us. Come, there is a house I know."

"But why should you be afraid?" he said, surprised and uneasy.

"I tell you, some one comes after me in the street here; I feel him."

He did not relish the situation; it seemed artificial, overstrained, to him. He sought to pass it off. "You are dreaming, 'Neste. Who would follow? Come let us climb to the Rue les Droits de l'Homme, where the lights are and every one can see us if they want to. Let them look. There's too much mystery about this to suit me."

She shrank back in terror when he caught her arm. "No, no, Captain! You do not know. It would be bad, very bad, for me and for you."

"What is it all about, 'Neste?" he cried, quite losing his patience. It was strange enough that O'Connor should have seen fit to warn him about the way people would take his flirtation now the girl herself was acting as if they were engaged in some dark intrigue, minding watchful and jealous guardians, like the figures in some penny romance. The boy's healthy mind resented the introduction of such a note into his relations with her.

She was peering at his vexed face intently. She did not answer for some minutes. "It is sure you know, Captain, what you have done, coming here, many times," she said, as one stating an evident fact.

"What I have done? No, I don't. What harm was there in it?" He had struck the centre of the matter there. She moved away from him and drew her shawl closer.

"Ah! Then it is true that you are a child," she said, her voice rising mournfully. "Yes, I think so. You not understand. You think 'Neste has not many, many who beg for a smile, a word. Oh no. You think she must be glad only to talk with you, like a child. I tell you some one comes after me, but you not understand. I tell you there are men, not children, who follow 'Neste. You cannot play with her like a boy."

Her fierce, tense words shocked him, revealing an attitude wholly foreign and strange. It was true that he could not understand all. But he saw, dimly, that his position was a false one, that he had taken steps which, to this girl's Eastern mind, meant things he had not dreamed of. It was his error. He knew now what O'Connor had meant.

Ordinarily the boy would have been angered by a taunt as to his youth. But from her it merely served to measure the distance between her point of view and his own. Hers was an atmosphere of intrigue, of mystery, of passions alien to him. He had merely treated her as he would some laughing, friendly, sensible fair one at home. His impulse was to drop the affair instantly. But one thing detained him. If it should chance to be true, as she had intimated, that she had run some danger in meeting him in this harmless way he must stand by her. It was absurd, of course, but he must clear that point.

Did Not Understand Her.

"You are right, 'Neste," he said, slowly. I was a child, as you mean it. I thought only to pass a pleasant hour with you, nothing more. Still, if there has been a misunderstanding somewhere that may make trouble I will offer all necessary explanations."

Her laugh was still sharper this time, but it did not sting him as she meant it should. If he did not understand her neither did she understand him. She had no conception of his motives.

"Run away, little child," she said. "It is goodby, then, eh! I think you better go first; there is a big man coming now." And with this last thrust before he could detain her she glided away into one of the alleys that opened near at hand. He looked up the street, following her parting gesture. There was a figure moving there. It stopped under a light for a second, then it, too, passed out of sight into an alley.

The officers from the war vessel had purchased seats in the little theatre for the operatic performance the next evening. They were rowed ashore at dusk, resplendent in their glittering, close fitting uniforms, and climbed the endless stone stairs toward the upper town in chatting groups. Bainbridge was with O'Connor. He had found occasion to restore his old relations with the older man.

O'Connor had welcomed the move, though nothing had passed between them as to the cause of their difference, accepting the other's advances as a tacit admission that he had been right in his interference the day before.

They occupied adjoining seats in the theatre and at the close of the first act passed out into the miniature lobby for a breath of air. As they came through the doors a group of men at the left parted suddenly and a tall, thin featured man moved toward them. They did not notice him until, in passing, he jostled roughly against Bainbridge. The midshipman looked up quickly and recognized Cochran. He was about to protest, but the Englishman did not look back. Bainbridge was indignant.

"Did you see him?" he asked O'Connor.

"Yes; but it was probably an accident."

They walked slowly back and forth on the short promenade, falling into a discussion of political affairs at home. They did not see that Cochran was approaching again. Once more the Englishman jostled Bainbridge, thrusting him savagely with his shoulder and spinning the boy half way around. There was no possible explanation for it this time other than deliberate intention. There had been ample space for Cochran's passage. To make his purpose still plainer he stood sneering at Bainbridge openly.

Seasoned for a Scrimmage.

The boy, for all his slight weight, was clean muscled. The hard training of the sea had seasoned and toned him, and he was as light on his feet as some lithe wild animal of the woods. Before O'Connor could catch his arm he stepped directly in front of Cochran and drove his right fist into the Englishman's face. Cochran staggered back and fell awkwardly. Bainbridge stood ready to renew the attack when the other should rise, mouth firm set and eyes aglow with battle. But O'Connor and others of the officers who had been attracted by the uproar swept upon him and hustled him to one side.

Cochran rose slowly with the assistance of friends who had thronged about him. The crowd in the lobby had parted, some were pressing about one, some about the other of the antagonists. Across the open space toward the Americans presently walked a tall, elderly man of dignified appearance. His mission was obvious and O'Connor, after a few words with Bainbridge, went into the auditorium and returned with Stephen Decatur, who was then a lieutenant. Bainbridge had expressed the desire that Decatur act for him in the affair, and after a few words of explanation with Decatur he consented. He approached the elderly man and bowed. His bow was returned and the two walked to the street door, where they engaged in conversation.

There was no further disturbance during the evening, and on the way to the landing Decatur informed Bainbridge that he would meet Cochran's second for final arrangements on the following day. On the vessel once more O'Connor drew Decatur aside and gave him the history of the affair as he understood it.

"I've heard from some of the English officers here that Cochran has been almost out of his senses about the girl for months. He keeps a watch upon her at her flower stand, and several men who have been friendly with 'Neste have been warned to keep away. I don't know what the relations are between him and the girl, nor does it matter. But this I do know—Joe quit her last night. I think he saw the truth in what I told him. And from early this morning until late this afternoon Lieutenant Cochran has been practising with a pistol on the shore east of the harbor."

"Is Joe handy with firearms?" asked Decatur.

"Never shot at a mark in his life, sir."

"That explains a few things," said Decatur, pacing the deck. "This accident of Cochran's put in a subtle suggestion that I fix the distance at twelve paces. Probably Cochran supposed that Joe would challenge him on the spot when he jostled him. That would have left him free to set the own distance, which, as I gather from the wily second, is twelve paces. How did you learn this?"

"Two of the men on shore leave saw him when they walked out in the morning and again in the afternoon."

Decatur met Cochran's second, Captain Overly, by appointment, at one of the hotels the following afternoon. They exchanged formal greetings and began at once a discussion of the preliminaries.

"My principal will fight with pistols, sir," Decatur. Overly bowed and rubbed his hands

"That is satisfactory, Lieutenant. At the usu tance, I suppose."

"I hardly know whether you would call it the distance, sir, but he will fight at four paces." other started up in amazement and alarm.

"Four paces! Four! Why, my dear sir, t nothing short of murder. Does your principal nothing of these affairs? The meeting is to point of honor, I take it, and the purpose butchery."

"My principal has been advised in this matt me," returned Decatur, coldly. "As to the p of the meeting, my principal, as the challenged has decided that his own interests demand an tunity for full satisfaction."

"But, my dear Lieutenant, I recognize, of that your principal is well within his rights. must insist that four paces leaves little or noth marksmanship or skill and everything to mere ch

"Such is my understanding of it. I am glad that your judgment confirms my own. Now, C as to the word of command"—— And Decat the irritated Overly on to the remaining clauses agreement. It was decided that the duel should place early the following morning at a certain on the shore about five miles from Valetta.

First on the Ground.

Bainbridge, with O'Connor, Decatur and a su left the vessel just at dawn. They were rowed o the harbor and along the coast to a small bay, they were able to make a landing. They found selves the first on the ground, and during the in of waiting Decatur talked with his midshi principal.

"I did the best I could for you, Joe, in the dis If you were further apart he would pick you o you'd stand not the slightest chance. At four you are as good as he is."

"All I want is some kind of a fair chance sir," said Bainbridge. He was cool, and his smooth face was set resolutely. Decatur looke over approvingly.

"You'll do. I might have named cutlasses, has inches over you in reach, besides a tougher With your nerve as steady as it is now you c him. Here they come."

Cochran appeared overland with Overly and a tary surgeon. The group halted near a clum prickly pears a short distance off and the two s advanced to the middle of the ground. After s tions they proceeded to pace the distance with care. When the marks were fixed the we furnished by Decatur, were loaded. They were heavy weapons of large calibre, carrying a quarter of an ounce ball. The barrels were shorter than was usual, a feature appropriate to quarters.

As the principals moved toward their mark members of both parties watched their action appearance closely. Cochran's face was its dead white, his eyes were steady and his ste liberate. "A dangerous opponent," was O'Co quick comment to Decatur. Bainbridge app confident and at ease. His eyes flashed for a m as they met those of his antagonist, and his f knew that he would give a good account of h that day.

"Now, gentlemen," said Decatur, when both in position, "the word will be, 'One, two, fire, stop.' You will be at liberty to discharge weapons at any time during the utterance o fire or bullets. No shot may be fired after the 'stop.' It is understood that a blow having p the meeting shall continue until one is unable t times, or both are disabled."

The weapons were handed to the duellists the seconds stood aside. Decatur, who had the right by lots, was to give the signal.

"Are you ready?" he asked. The sun was rising and its rays cut sharply along the vegetation of the stretch on which they stood, t ing long shadows from each figure. There w tree to break the simple setting of sea and sk sweeping hill. A light breeze made its gentle felt. Joseph Bainbridge took one swift, co hensive glance about him. There was no fear only the tribute from youth to life that had sweet.

"Ready," he said.

"Ready," echoed Cochran, more loudly. H was drawn back a little into the fullest sh of a smile.

"One——"

"Two"——" At the first word both men had their pistols on a level. At the second Cochran and the fifth report set the gulls to circlin down the shore. Bainbridge did not move.

Bainbridge walked for the last time through Rue les Droits de l'Homme three days later just before vessel was to leave. He looked for 'Neste, another girl stood back of her little flower stand, hesitated a moment, then addressed her in Ita She shook her head. He tried French with results.

FERNIE'S COKE OVENS

GREAT PLANT IS ONE OF THE FEATURES OF THE WEST.

Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. Has Four Hundred and Fifty Ovens Where Coal Dust or Slack is Turned Into Valuable Coke—Russians and Slavs Attend to the Furnaces and Manage to Get Rich on Their Wages.

As the eastern-bound flier, with clanging bell and snorting smokestack, glides swiftly round the tortuous curve up the incline into Fernie, B. C., the passengers on the observation car see stretching away to their left a long, low line of compact stone buildings, surrounded with a general lurid glow which seems to permeate the atmosphere and partially dispel the murky clouds that hang heavily overhead.

These are the coke ovens owned by the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., Ltd., and there are four hundred and fifty of them, in three solid, substantial rows, numbered 1, 2, and 3. Each row contains ovens on either side, and to distinguish these they are referred to as east and west ovens, respectively, the ovens themselves being numbered individually.

To-day, when nothing is wasted, least of all precious coal dust, it is interesting to follow the process which converts this coal dust, or "slack," as it is called, into marketable coke, and incidentally gives employment to many foreigners in this district.

The coal is mined at Coal Creek, a mining town situated in a deep valley some five miles from Fernie on the Morrissey, Fernie & Michel Railway—the property of the Coal Company—and after being screened on the "tipples," the "slack," or fine stuff, is loaded into special iron cars called slack cars, and which are made with a centre dump and hold thirty tons of slack. A train of some twelve to fourteen cars is then run up the line to the rails over the storage bins, and the dump being opened, the slack drops down into the "larry" beneath; these larries are constructed of iron, and are capable of holding nine to ten tons, if required. The larries are then run from under the storage bins by a circular line right on top of the coke oven between the circular opening of each oven, some fourteen inches across, and, arrived in position, the lever being moved, the slack pours into the oven beneath through the aperture either to the east or west, as required.

About six and a half tons of slack is put into each oven at a time, and ignites, of course, spontaneously from the great latent heat, and after 72 hours' burning yields four and a quarter tons of coke, the loss being approximately about 35 per cent., the resultant coke making up the balance of 65 per cent.

When the time arrives for the ovens to be drawn, the Russian "drawer" partially breaks open the dried loam and brick door of his oven, and a fierce, blinding heat blares forth into the darkness, silhouetting his stalwart figure as he stands there, water pipe in hand, playing on the fiery mass within, and which, when sufficiently cooled off, he presently rakes out with a huge iron rake some twelve feet in length and weighing 60 to 70 pounds.

This is hard work, but seems admirably suited to the men who undertake it, mostly Russians and Slavs unable to speak a word of English, but quite happy with their job. For clearing an oven the men get paid $1, and as when in full work they clear out two and three ovens a night, working six days a week will net them anything from twelve to eighteen dollars. Living as they do in their own style on from fifteen to sixteen dollars a month, they are soon able to afford a bank account.

The coke is now loaded into cars holding from 35 to 37 tons each, and it is quite a sight to see one of these gigantic cars being filled by the perspiring workmen — Italians now — with their broad sixteen-pronged forks, shovelling away with a steady swing. When full, the cars are despatched to Trail and Grand Forks, B.C., where the smelters of the Consolidated Smelting & Mining Co. and the Granby Mining & Smelting Co., respectively, await their daily arrival.

There have been rumors from time to time of smelters being established in Fernie itself, but at present, and until sufficient ore is found adjacent to the ovens, it is more profitable to ship the coke to the existing smelters than the ore to the coke ovens.

The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., Ltd., have other coke ovens besides those at Fernie. At Michel there are 488, and at Carbonado 250, making a total of 1,188 ovens at the three places.

Standing between the rails on top of the ovens calls to mind Dore's picture—the Torture of the Simonists in Purgatory — with the flickering flames lustily licking up and around the sides of the aperture through which the ovens are fed, whilst, again, from the mountainside a most weird theatrical effect is obtained as the dull-red smoke floats in a thick pall over the dark buildings beneath. Except for repairs from time to time, the ovens are never out, and burn with a blood-red heat that would have appalled Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, through the bitter winter weather equally as well as through the horrid days of August, the only difference in the working being that during the summer they are drawn at 9 o'clock at night, whereas in the winter this is done during the day.

Built about nine years ago at a cost of a thousand dollars apiece, the ovens are practically as good to-day as when first constructed. About 100 men are employed at Fernie alone, the loadings being accomplished by Italians, and in the history of the ovens it is gratifying to learn that there has never been a serious accident.

Built Town in a Night.

There was a westerner in Toronto recently who built a "town in a night." The man is Mr. C. L. Fisher, and the name of the western site is Stirling, Alberta. Now, of course, Mr. Fisher didn't really build Stirling in a night, but last April it was a wheat field with the horizon of prairie and to-day it is well settled and there are wide streets and pretentious stores and buildings. And even for western progress Stirling has made a record.

Mr. Fisher has principally populated his new town from the eastern cities. He says people from Ontario and Quebec make the best pioneers, for the Alberta air to them is the richest sort of stimulant; that they can see quickly what big chances there are and realise on them with little delay.

Stirling was created by the junction of three railways and is now the shipping and entraining point for southern Alberta. It has to-day the best hotel accommodation in Alberta.

A Family of Heavyweights.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Roach celebrated their golden wedding in Cornwall recently. Mr. Roach is 79 years of age, and Mrs. Roach 75. They have resided in Cornwall for over two score years. The six sons and four daughters, along with their parents, weigh over 2,500 pounds, which is perhaps a record. They are Donald Roach, father, 209; Mrs. Roach, mother, 210; Wm. Roach, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., 275; Daniel Roach, representing Swift's Packing Co., Liverpool, England, 250; Samuel Roach, Desborats, Ont., 255; Lawrence Roach, Kenora, 200; Cornelius (Tony) Roach, Cornwall, 170; Guy R. Roach, Cornwall, 220; Mrs. H. Barrett, Desborats, Ont., 210; Mrs. J. P. John, Rupse, Mont., 225; Mrs. A. F. Quig, Joliette, Que., 215; and Miss Catharine Roach, Cornwall, 165. Total, 2,545, an average of over 212.

Ontario Also.

Ontario does not make much noise as compared with the great western wheat country, but the agricultural products of this province, as compared with the combined output of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, represent $1.50 for every $1 those provinces yield. Of course, they are young yet, with great vacant spaces. But so is Ontario young with great possibilities of growth.—Toronto Star.

Are Not Worrying.

With at least 50 per cent. of the harvest cut, the people of Alberta are rapidly reaching a state of mind where the prognostications of the weather man are not taken any more seriously than those of any other man who goes into the prophecy business.—Calgary Herald.

Bear Barrels For Bridge.

The empty barrels—165 in number—whose contents of 7 per cent. beer and porter were emptied into the Montreal River a few days ago by the inspectors, are being used as bridges to support the floating bridge which joins the two towns of Smyth and Elk Lake.

Neglected Colds Lead to Consumption

Unless a complete cure is effected the inflammation passes rapidly to the throat's bronchial tubes and then to the lungs.

You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or a new nose—hence consumption is practically incurable.

In using Catarrhozone you don't take medicine into the stomach—you just breathe a healing piney vapor direct to the lungs and air passages.

Catarrhozone Guaranteed to Cure

The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal trouble exists—germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed, nature is given a chance and cure comes quickly.

Colds and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed—sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is removed.

Use Catarrhozone to prevent—use it to cure your winter ills—it's pleasant, safe, and guaranteed in every case. 25c., 50c., and $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers. By mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

LIFE AT BELLA COOLA.

British Columbia Town Is a Paradise For Fertility.

Bella Coola, B.C., is a paradise of fertility where man may live amidst scenic beauty in a veritable land of milk and honey at a minimum expenditure of the sweat of his brow. There the waters teem with fish and there venison, bear-meat and wildfowl of all descriptions are easy spoil to the hunter and trapper.

It lies four hundred miles north of Vancouver by steamship, then sixty miles inland through Burke's Channel, from where the Channel touches tidewater. It is a valley, stretching far into the great ranch lands of the interior—a gateway into the latter, over "The Slide," one of the easiest passes through the heights. A new and easier grade in "The Slide," for pack-trains, has lately superseded the old one, made under the supervision of Mr. J. R. Morrison, to whose personal knowledge of and faith in the Ootsa Lake district and surrounding country is largely due the revealing of its wonderful possibilities to the settlers that are pouring in.

Bella Coola is an old Hudson Bay trading post, and it has been for years a rendezvous for fur-traders of all nationalities; also the base of supply for the country within a radius of several hundred miles. And as the company, by its rectitude and fair-dealing, won and kept the confidence of the redman, who is ever the quickest to appreciate a "square deal," so has its late employe and present owner of the wife and selfsame store, and withal chief magistrate of the place, kept that confidence and gained an abiding influence over the morals of the Bella Coola and allied tribes by his strict integrity and uprightness during his forty-five years of residence amongst them.

The old wharf road extends for several miles to the cannery and it is joined by the bridge across the ravine to the Government trail, that cuts through the Indian Reserve at the foot of the valley. Fifteen years ago the road up the valley was built by the Norwegians, a colony of whom had received a Government grant of land and along with it enormous grants of money for road-making. Indeed, eighty-six thousand dollars have been so expended, of which only thirteen thousand have as yet been collected in taxes.

Fort William to Wabigoon.

In describing a trip over the National Transcontinental Railway Mr. T. St. Pierre writes in The Manitoba Free Press: "As Superior Junction is reached there are marked signs of an influx of population. Three hotels are open at the Junction itself, besides a couple of stores and a private bank. The floating population is around 200. Wako, two miles to the south, is also showing signs of becoming a prosperous village, it being now the head of navigation to Sturgeon Lake where gold mines are said to be plentiful. These mines are also within ten miles of the Transcontinental grade.

By no stretch of the imagination can the country extending northwest of Fort William to the Wabigoon river be classed as sterile. For long distances it is fairly level, well watered and bears every evidence of fertility. Only the forbidding appearance of the north shore of Lake Superior could have so long kept population away from these hundreds of thousands of acres of woodland. There is considerable variety in the character of the soil. Portions of the area are of red or light-colored clay, changing to clay loam. In other sections sandy loam and black loam are the prevailing characteristics. The subsoil is as a rule of a porous nature, which together with the rolling formation of the surface in most localities precludes the necessity of drainage, except low-lying land. Much of the country has been overrun with fire, making clearing comparatively easy. The success which has attended farming along the C.N.R. and C.P.R., where it has been attempted, bespeaks the future of the Hinterland, where the climate is better owing to the absence of the fierce blasts from the Great Lakes.

An Ancient Debt.

Mr. Francis Beale, 209 King street east, Toronto, has a considerable amount of money coming to him. Some time ago he appeared before the Board of Control and claimed that in 1864 he paid $30.40 more on the sewer rates than was necessary. The matter went to the city treasurer's office, and it was discovered that the claim was sound, and that Mr. Beale was entitled to the rebate. The Board of control promptly ordered the amount paid.

Then Controller Geary introduced the subject of interest. "That money has been idle, so far as Mr. Beale is concerned, and I think he should get interest."

The board concurred in this, and it was ordered that the treasurer's department should compute the interest, legally compounded and pay the amount to the old gentleman. As this will bring the sum into the hundreds, Mr. Beale was lucky to have overpaid his account before Confederation.

Green Flag Barred.

Ireland was landed a figurative poke on the solar plexus recently at Toronto by Station Superintendent Beck at the Union depot, who refused to allow the green bunting with harp and all to decorate the train which carried the field battery from the exhibition back to Kingston. A member of the corps on the train had hoisted the Irish colors in the place where the company's flag is usually flown, and Mr. Beck insisted on its removal, much to the chagrin of a number of Irishmen. The train was liberally bedecked with other flags, however.

Special Notice.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Bedwetting does not mean childhood of bedwetting. There is an unfailing cure for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 1001 Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the kidneys are to weak to hold. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine

NO DUST

WHEN YOU SHAKE A "PEASE" FURNACE

ALWAYS INSTAL A

PEASE "ECONOMY" FURNACE

That is another strong point about a "Pease." There is absolutely no dust—none in the ashes when you shake it, because the large ring fire is built up into the Combustion Chamber. None in the air reservoir—because all horizontal joints are "cup" joints, and the cement lies in the "cup"—so the cement cannot fall away, all perpendicular joints are riveted steel plates.

If you are building, or your present heat is not satisfactory—write us. All we want is a chance to tell you about our furnace—and leave the judgment to you.

REMARKABLE CHILDREN WHO HAVE "DONE THINGS."

Landseer, Crane, Marcus Stone, Millais and Watts Were All Academicians in Their Teens—Ellen Terry Started When She Was Eight Years Old — Two Famous Youngsters Were Revivalists.

This is the age of prodigies. In the world of art, on the stage and concert platform, children have been astonishing the world with their genius, and earning incomes calculated to arouse the envy of the most successful business man.

Sir Edwin Landseer was admitted to the Royal Academy at the age of thirteen, Mr. Walter Crane was sixteen and Mr. Marcus Stone, Millais, and Watts seventeen when they secured the coveted honor.

It is to the stage and concert platform, however, to which one must turn to find the most remarkable examples of precocious genius. Whether the numberless child actors and musicians who have made their debut lately will fulfil the promise of their early years remains, of course, to be seen; but the present and past history of acting and music contains some remarkable instances of clever children who have continued to win fame year after year throughout life.

Amongst present-day actresses are many who showed histrionic talent at tender years. Miss Ellen Terry made her debut when she was eight. Mrs. Kendal was appearing at the Marylebone Theatre when she was four, and playing Ophelia at the Haymarket when she was sixteen. Miss Bateman, the famous impersonator of Leah, first appeared on the stage when she was two, and when she was eight was brought to London by the late T. P. Bateman, to appear in a series of Shakespearean revivals. Lady Bancroft was at one time the leading child actress in the country, while Miss Ada Reeve appeared before the public when she was six, and at fourteen was an acknowledged music-hall "star." Miss Vesta Tilley began still earlier. Her stage career started when she was three, and at six she first appeared in men's clothes and was advertised as the "Pocket Sims Reeves."

Two or three years ago quite a number of child-preachers were attracting attention, notably Frances Storr, the twelve-year-old Doncaster girl, who often had audiences numbering close upon 1,000; and Jack Cooke, the Manchester boy, who at a very early age determined to become a second D. L. Moody. He preached his first sermon when he was eleven, and two years later conducted many successful missions.

Who knows but what they may follow in the footsteps of Spurgeon, who was an active member of the Baptist connexion, while he was still in knickerbockers, and preached his first sermon at the age of sixteen? Before he was twenty Exeter Hall was not large enough to hold his congregations. George Fox, the evangelist and founder of the Society of Friends, was quite a little boy when he started preaching at a tavern, and George Whitefield and John Wesley both commenced preaching at a very early age.

It has often been said that the most amazing example of precocious genius on record is furnished by John Stuart Mill, who at three years of age was learning the Greek alphabet, and at eight had read in the original many Greek authors. Then he began to learn Euclid, Algebra, and Latin, and before he was twelve was made to teach the younger members of the family.

The precocity of Sir William Rowan Hamilton, the celebrated mathematician, is often overlooked. He excelled in the study of languages, and is said to have known at least thirteen at the age of twelve. At three years of age he was a very good reader of English and considerably advanced in arithmetic. At four he was a good geographer, and at five able to read and translate Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. Then he added a knowledge of Italian and French to his learning before going on with Arabic and Sanskrit.

The Modest Scot.

Love of country is so fine a virtue that it seems difficult to carry it to excess. A resident of a small village in the north of Scotland paid a business visit to London the other day. He happened to call on a merchant who was unknown to him, but had thus made a stay in his native place. In the course of conversation the visitor made use of an expression that led the other to exclaim: "Surely, you come from Glen McLuskie?" The assertion, however, was denied. Presently, to the merchant's surprise, another Glen McLuskie expression was heard. "My dear Mr. McTavish, I feel convinced that you are a Glen McLuskie man after all," insisted the merchant.

"Weel," returned the other, "I'll no' deny it any longer."

"Then why didn't you say so at first?" demanded the Englishman.

"Weel," was the calm response, "I dinna like to boast o' it in London."

A City of Trees.

The trees in the streets form a special feature of Folkestone, England. About four thousand in number, they include handsome horse-chestnuts, elms, planes, sycamores, and limes. In Castle Hill avenue, a hundred feet wide, with four rows of trees, the horse chestnuts make a fine show, especially at the blossoming period.

Dear Sir.—After having been a stammerer for thirty-five years and then being cured by your course of instructions, you can imagine how much I feel indebted to you. My only regret is that I did not meet you twenty years ago so that many an embarrassing moment and unpleasant experience would never have happened and a great handicap removed from my life.

Your instructions are so simple and easy that I am sure if you make yourself known that your success will certainly be assured.

Yours respectfully,

HAUNTING THE HOUSE.

Things Seen at the Portals of Britain's Parliament.

Thanks to the Parliamentary correspondent, the world and his wife know pretty nearly everything of interest connected with the interior of the House of Commons. With a picturesque wealth of detail, the idiosyncrasies and the personal appearances of hon. and right hon. gentlemen have been described for the edification of the multitude. And even the furniture of the building has not been allowed to escape the lynx-eyed writer, who forms an indispensable adjunct to the assembly which foregathers under the shadow of Big Ben.

But the British House of Commons from the exterior has received but scant treatment at the hands of the scribes.

The country cousin, or whoever it may be who has business at the House, is bound to feel a moment of agonizing suspense. How can he, one of the humblest, perhaps, of the great man's constituents, hope to pass those imposing policemen and those closed doors? But his doubts are soon at rest. The urbanity of the man in blue is overwhelming. He is courteously handed a green card, on which the officer, addressing him as "sir," tells him to write his name and address and the name of the member he desires to see.

Then a messenger, resplendent in evening dress, disappears with the card, and the period of anxiety, now intensified, recommences.

Suddenly, his own name falls on his wandering ears. Startled, he turns round, and there, with a smile on his face, stands the man who has been sent there by his—and other—votes. A hearty handshake, and the two walk away to a secluded corner for a brief chat.

Frequently, a seat in the Strangers' Gallery follows. But, in any case, the country cousin emerges from the House the happiest man in the whole of London.

Another picture. A horny-handed son of toil, a red handkerchief round his neck, a cheap cloth cap on his head, and his trousers clipped just below the knee with straps. Obviously, a navvy. The card is sent in, and in a few minutes the navvy and a distinguished K.C. are chatting easily together.

Then, you should see the look of hopeless misery which settles on the face of the visitor if his pilgrimage is in vain. "Cards returned! Members not in the House!" called out in stentorian tones by the military-looking messenger, is a sentence which constitutes the death-knell of many a country cousin's hopes. Disconsolately, he turns away.

"After comin' all this way, too!" you can hear him mutter.

Observe, too, that aggressive, young gentleman in a knickerbocker suit, who is doubtless a political Hercules in the village which gave him birth. As the minutes go by the frown on his brow deepens. At last his card is returned. "Member not in the House." Visions of a searching inquisition by the local committee at the impertinence of a subaltern daring to be out when so distinguished a personage calls flash into his mind.

"What's the wrapt of having a member who cannot be found!" he growls. "I'll see we have another next time!"

A Real Old Timer.

Chief Spencer, aged 110 years, a Hindoo, recently died on the reservation at Fort Simcoe. In 1848 he saw whites come to the coast across country on settlers. In 1856 he was a guide and spirit for Colonel Wright and Major Haines. He had always been friendly to the whites in spite of the fact that volunteers in 1850 killed every member of his family, who were going down the Columbia river near the Cascades to canoe. Children of Chief Spencer's second family are Walter and Lancaster Spencer of [illegible], prominent business men of that town.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Bengali Tortured.

A Bengalee of Jessore, named Hriday Nath Bose, was admitted some time ago to the Campbell Medical Hospital, suffering from serious injuries. Before his death Hriday made a declaration in the course of which he stated that his injuries were the result of police ill-treatment, violence having been resorted to for the purpose of making him confess in connection with a charge of theft which had been preferred against him. On this declaration being recorded, a police enquiry was ordered, and the official report is to the following effect: Hriday Nath Bose was an inhabitant of the village of Bathaman, in the jurisdiction of Thana Kaligunge, District Jessore. On Feb. 13 last he was arrested on a charge of theft in the house of the Rajah of Nalianga, and was taken to the Rajbari. There the police Daroga ordered a Chowkidar, and a jamadar of the rajah to assault the deceased. They assaulted him first with kicks and fists, and then rolled a bamboo on his chest, whereon he became unconscious. He was detained in the dalan of the rajbari for two days, and then allowed to go home, where he was confined to bed. His wife, Bangini Dasi, complained against the rajah before the Deputy Magistrate of Jhinidah, but the complaint was dismissed. The deceased was then brought to the Medical College Hospital by his relatives for treatment, where he expired after making a dying declaration before Babu Kadar Nath Bose, an honorary magistrate.

Almost Indestructible.

A creeping moss is found in Jamaica, in Barbadoes, and in certain other islands of the West Indies, which is called the "life tree," or more properly the "life plant." The powers of vitality of this strange freak of nature are said to be beyond those of any other known plant. It is absolutely indestructible by any means except immersion in boiling water or by application of a red-hot iron. It may be cut and divided in any manner, and the smallest shreds remaining will throw out roots, grow, and form buds. The leaves of this extraordinary plant have been placed in a closed, air-tight, dark box, without moisture, for the purpose of testing its vitality, but invariably without effect on the plant's duration of life.

A Thrilling Hobby.

A strange hobby is indulged in by Mr. Berizam Wallis, the popular King of Cadonia. This London actor possesses not only a marvelous collection of weapons of every kind, both ancient and modern, but in the course of his travels abroad has been able to pick up many strange and interesting instruments of torture, and owns with pride that he has a probably unrivalled collection of Indian tomahawks, knives, spears, etc. He has also many bows and arrows, and guns of types almost prehistoric, but remarkably interesting.

The Laughter Cure.

It is all very well for a German doctor to prescribe hearty laughter as a remedy for nervous diseases, but perhaps he will also be good enough to tell us where we are to get the ingredients for his prescription.

One cannot well sit down and laugh "till the tears run down the cheeks" at nothing at all, however anxious to cure a severe attack of neuralgia.

When one comes to think of it, few things make one laugh to this extent, and what is one person's meat where hilarity is concerned may prove so poisonous to another as to plunge him to the very depths of depression.

There are people who will double up with merriment when they see some one else fall down a flight of steps, and afterward describe it as "the funniest thing they ever saw," but most nervous patients probably would not laugh at all if in order to effect a cure an attempt were made to excite their hilarity by throwing relatives and servants down stairs. Nerve specialists who adopt the laughter cure will have other to practice clowning or keep trained fools to set their patients "in a roar."—Lady's Pictorial.

A Little Vindictive.

"Do you want the privilege of voting for people of whom you approve?"

"No," answered the suffragette, "I desire the satisfaction of publicly refusing to vote for people whom I don't like."—Washington Star.

A Long Pipe.

The longest pipe in the world is that which extends from the Oklahoma oil wells to New York harbor. At the present time the oil field of Oklahoma is the most active in the United States. It is not likely that the line will be put to immediate use for carrying oil over the whole distance. The completion of the system is regarded rather as constituting the emergency and to meet the future conditions when the Pennsylvania and West Virginia fields shall have been depleted.—Scientific American.

Still Use a Drawbridge.

At Helmingham Hall, Suffolk, Eng. the drawbridge is always raised every night over the historic moat, which is more than seven hundred years old. The moat is not dry, like a many of ancient date; but is filled to the brim. This is the only English castle where the historic right of having the drawbridge has come down from the days of chivalry.

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

TO SELL

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

Boys, figure this proposition out for yourselves. Be ambitious. Good newsboys are always taken care of and recommended for future positions.

LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN.

The matter appearing in this space from time to time is furnished by the Temperance and Moral Reform League of this City, who have arranged for its Publication.

PETERBOROUGH LOCAL OPTIONISTS READY FOR THE FRAY

The local option campaign in Peterborough is nicely started. The temperance workers are well organised and enthusiastic. The supporters of the open bar are not showing their hand. They are, it is understood, going to conduct a "quiet campaign." Should they decide to come out in the open it would make the contest more interesting as it would then be possible to debate the questions at issue on their merits.

During the past three months, local option supporters have been gathering information for use in the campaign this fall. The best methods of organising their forces have been studied. Plans for the prosecution of the work in hand have been laid with care.

Several well attended and enthusiastic meetings of the temperance workers have been held in their rooms, 173 Simcoe street, during the past three weeks. Organization has been practically completed on the most approved lines.

There is a general committee composed of leading citizens, which will have charge of the whole campaign on the temperance side. Citizens who would like to identify themselves with the movement are invited to put themselves in touch with this committee through the secretary, Mr. A. B. Cunningham. There is an extensive committee which will work under the direction of the general committee. The executive committee is composed, for the most part of the chairmen of various sub-committees. These sub-committees will handle matters relating to finances, the press meetings, advertising, the organising of the voters, etc. These sub-committees are each working along definite lines. They are busy drafting their basis of procedure.

A Great Advantage.

The temperance workers have a great advantage in the present campaign. They have scores of able supporters who are willing, anxious, and proud to give their services for nothing for the cause of temperance. This advantage will be used to the utmost, during the next three months, as an effort will be made to find work for all volunteer assistants, no matter how numerous they may become.

Able Speakers Coming.

While the "meetings" committee have not perfected their plans, arrangements are being made for the holding of a series of meetings which will be addressed by well-known men from local option centres in Ontario, and possibly from the States as well. Any person who has any serious doubts about the probable success of local option in Peterborough will be given every opportunity to make his doubts known early so that they can be effectively answered. Care will be taken to guard against unfair methods to stampede the voters a da yor two before the election. Experience having shown that such means as the sending out of alarming and untruthful statements concerning the alleged failure of local option in other centres, have often been employed.

The State of the Finances.

It is recognised that considerable money will be needed to finance the campaign and already a number of generous contributions have been received as well as some rather touching small ones. A farmer, who stated that he lived some twenty miles from Peterborough, in a log house, recently called at the office and made a contribution to help the good cause. A poor woman, whose husband drinks, gave $5.00. Several church organizations have given liberal assistance. Should any person desire to contribute to the funds, they can do so through the treasurer, Mr. A. Brown, Water street. Small, as well as large, donations are invited.

Committee meetings will be held every week, and sometimes several times a week, from now until the contest is over. Further announcements about the progress of the work will be made in these columns from time to time.

The Experience of Other Cities.

"Can local option be enforced successfully in a city the size of Peterborough?" is asked occasionally. In order that all doubts on this score might be set at rest, the press committee wrote recently to the mayors of some 50 cities in the United States, all of which are larger than Peterborough, and which have been under local option for some time. They were asked if local option was proving a success with them. A large number have replied. A few state that a little drinking is still being done on the sly. They practically all claim, however, that the effect of local option has been to reduce drunkenness and crime of all sorts and to improve business conditions. A number of these letters will be published. The following is a copy of the letter received from Mayor Wm. Green, of Topeka, Kansas. He writes: "The prohibitory law in Topeka works splendidly, and it works easily. Last winter the state legislature enacted a new law prohibiting absolutely the sale of intoxicating liquors. Previous to that the law permitted its sale by druggists under prescribed conditions. Violation and prosecutions were frequent under the old law it was well enforced, and was, in a measure, a success. All laws are violated, more or less, governed largely by the sentiment of the people, the opportunities of the law, and the incentive for its violation."

"The new law being more drastic gives less opportunity (and under it it is easier to convict) consequently violations are less frequent. The sale of liquor cannot be absolutely prohibited no more than any other crime, but Topeka and all other cities in Kansas, to-day are living proofs that the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors can be and is as well enforced as any other law against crime."

"The sentiment in favour of prohibition in Kansas grows as the law becomes more settled and is more vigorously enforced. Cities which a few years ago were opposed to its enforcement, and whose officials would not enforce it until compelled to by state law, are now in favour of enforcement."

"If the question of prohibition was resubmitted to the voters of Kansas to-day I do not believe that ten per cent. (10%) of them would vote to reinstate the saloon. Yes, prohibition is a success, not only in Topeka, but in every town, city and county in Kansas."

THE CATHOLIC TOTAL ABSTINENCE UNION.

The Peterborough Total Abstinence Society was represented during the summer, at the annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the United States, which was held in Chicago. This is probably the strongest temperance organization on the continent. It has over 100,000 members.

A feature was an immense procession with bands, automobiles, and floats. It was reviewed by Rt. Rev. P. P. Rhode, assistant Bishop of Chicago.

One of the most stirring addresses at a mass meeting attended by more than three thousand people, was that of Rt. Rev. J. F. Regis Canevin, Bishop of Pittsburg, and some of his declarations, which were received with great enthusiasm, were vehement denunciations of the bar-room system. Here are some samples:

"The Catholic church is unalterably opposed to the liquor industry, and the Sunday saloon looms up as one of the most menacing evils with which the American citizen is confronted. The saloon never elevated any man, but rather its influence for years has tended to drag men down, and there is no man in this country who is better for the open Sunday saloon. Hundreds of thousands of poor wretches have been sacrificed upon the altar of liquor, and the time for a determined fight against the liquor industry has come."

"The saloon stands for nothing good in any community. The saloon has never brought a blessing to a city, to a home, or upon an individual."

ABOUT BREWERIES.

There seems to be prevalent in some places an idea that brewers may sell liquor in a local option district. It is true that a brewery whose brewery is in a local option municipality, may make beer therein and may have a brewer's license, but the law governing the issue of that license contains the following clause:

"Provided, however, that no such sale shall be made either directly or indirectly within any municipality in which a by-law passed under subsection 1 of section 141 of the Liquor License Act is in force."

It is true that a Brewer's Warehouse License authorizes the sale of beer, but the Government does not issue such licenses in Local Option municipalities, and the law governing them contains the following clause:

"Nor shall any beers or spirits be sold or delivered by or on behalf of any holder of a Brewer's Warehouse License within any municipality in which a by-law passed under subsection 1 of section 141 is in force."

IT WORKS IN TWEED.

The North Hastings Review publishes the following extract from a letter received from Dr. A. E. Farrell, of the Town of Tweed, in which a Local Option By-law is in force:

"If anyone asks you how local option has done for Tweed, tell them it has almost entirely cleared our drunks. Last December, in one day, I counted 18, and I was not looking for them. Since May 1st I have been hunting and I only saw three in nearly three months and they came from Stoco and Actinolite. The town is not so busy as it was four or five years ago, neither is Madoc. In the individual family I can show you improvement in at least twenty cases since May 1st. It has not hurt business generally. It has helped certain families very much. That is from some of those opposed to the movement say."

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Before the moods of genius the world must ever bow in awe, for is it not to the wayward wanderings from the normal, that inspiration itself is due? says a writer in the "Lady." The gloomy moods of Beethoven are traditional, but every time they enwrapped his spirit there flowed from his pen the most noble of scores. Turning to Schubert, we find that it was in the gay moods of the German inn that his genius worked. Under their sway the "Serenade" and many other immortal themes were penned on a tavern table, any scraps of paper being used that came to hand. Paganini was so wholly the victim of moods that it was no unusual thing for an audience to wait in vain for his contribution to a concert programme. When due to appear some fantasy o fthe moment would impel him to remain in his poverty-stricken room, grimly toying with the instrument which should have been moving his hearers to tears.

BLYTHE IS UNREPENTANT

Examiner Special.

TORONTO, Oct. 2—Walter Blythe, the wife murderer, who has been granted a new trial deserves little sympathy in the opinion of jail officials. On the night before the Court of Appeal gave out its decision in his case a reporter was told that he spent a number of hours walking about his cell using most profane and abusive language and working himself into a perfect rage. "It's a pity that some of the people who have been so sympathetic about him could not have heard his profanity and his low talk," said the reporter's informant. "Perhaps if they had they would not weep over him as they have. Yesterday at six o'clock, which was the first time since his conviction on the 9th of December last. He will now be treated as one of the ordinary prisoners, awaiting the result of the new trial.

TRUST BUYS UP TOBACCO

Examiner Special:

WINDSOR, Oct. 2—To corner the entire output in Essex and Kent Counties, the Imperial Tobacco Company, otherwise known as the trust, has purchased every available pound in this district, paying record breaking prices, running from ten to fifteen cents, but the normal rate is about eight cents. Over twenty buyers were quietly scattered throughout two counties, and gobbled up the whole crop in two days. The output in this county is estimated at four million pounds, while Kent grows between one and two million. Mr. Gregory, manager, says his company found the crop short, and was willing to pay liberal prices. He denies that a recent is aimed at the independent companies.

CHINA PLANS BIG NAVY

Examiner Special.

LONDON, Oct. 2—Chinese advices from a trustworthy source give interesting facts concerning the plans for the reorganization of the Chinese navy which have been approved by imperial degree and on which work has already begun. On account of the vast expenditure involved the work will be spread over seven years. The most striking items will be carried out from 1911 to 1918, when the government will have built eight first class battleships, twenty cruisers, ten gunboats and three flotillas of torpedo boats. China intends to proceed immediately to develop naval bases, expand the naval schools and enlarge the dockyards. She also plans the creation of an admiralty board and the establishment of a new naval academy, and to recruit a force of marines.

THE ELECTION PROTEST COLLAPSES

Mr. Burnham Abandons The Petition Against Mr. Stratton's Return. This Result Follows Dismissal of a Large Group of Charges. Hopeless of Success Counsel For Petitioner Declines Offering Further Evidence. The Judgment of Justices McMahon And Magee.

This morning saw the, at once inglorious and glorious ending of the trial of the petition in the West Peterborough election case. As was expected, their Lordships on the opening of court gave judgment in a large group of charges, reserved from the evening before dismissing them as entirely unsupported by evidence.

Thereupon, Mr. Du Vernet, counsel for Mr. Burnham, said that in view of their Lordships' ruling, it would be a waste of time of the court and wasting the means of the petitioner to proceed further with the case, and he asked that the petition be dismissed without costs.

Mr. Justice MacMahon, in giving judgment, said: "In regard to the case in which we reserved judgment, as to two of these they were reserved just formally. No. 13, that of Pritchard, who denied getting any money, nor is there any proof offered that he did receive it, and that of Banks, who is in the same position. Which charges will therefore be dismissed.

"I propose dealing first with the cases of Gates and Leary, and I may say that I think the foundation of the petition was furnished by Gates, in the declaration he made, and for which he received the sum of $50.00. The person who received the declaration could not have been aware of the position of the man who receives affidavits from a voter or from any one in which a sum of money was paid. Part of the declaration furnished by Gates, reads as follows: "This declaration is given for $50, for the purposes of the trial of the protest against Mr. Stratton, and is given voluntarily."

The $50 was the voluntary part of it. Gates did not possess the franchise, he was not a voter at this election, and it is impossible to imagine a man who has no interest as far as representation is concerned taking the active part Gates says he did in a case of this character.

"His statement is that he reached the committee rooms at 2 o'clock. He remained around there, he says, and got into the room, i.e., the room in which, he says, Leary was in, and which, it was stated, that Leary had paid out money, as soon as he could get there. He says he did not get into the room until about 4 o'clock, and if the evidence of all the other parties, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Hall, Mr. Stratton, Mr. Gordon, Thomas Hunter, and Leary himself, is considered, Leary could not have been in that room at 4 o'clock. Morgan, who appeared to be a respectable man, giving his evidence in a reliable way, says that he had been driving Mr. Leary around, and that somewhere about 2.30 o'clock he was dismissed from his attendance, and told to be back at a quarter to 4 o'clock, because Mr. Leary wanted to go to Monaghan, and return before the polls closed at five o'clock. Morgan says that he was at the committee rooms at the time stated, that Mr. Leary got in then and drove to North Monaghan. The time is corroborated by Mr. Stratton. He says that when he went up to the committee rooms, somewhere about 4 o'clock, he asked for Mr. Leary, and was told that he had gone to North Monaghan. Mr. Gordon was the outside scrutineer at the North Monaghan poll, and his evidence is that Leary reached there from five to ten minutes after 4 o'clock and remained there ten or fifteen minutes, and drove off. Mr. Hunter, a respectable man, and warden of the county several times, says that he saw Leary at that poll between 4 and 5 o'clock.

All the evidence, including that of Leary himself, that he left for North Monaghan at a quarter to 4 o'clock, and returned at five or ten minutes before 5 o'clock, gives an accurate account of his movements from a quarter to 4 o'clock, and the time he came back to the committee rooms. He therefore could not have paid money to Gates at 4 o'clock, or even a few minutes before or a few minutes after.

Some evidence is given by one or two of the witnesses as to the number of people lining up like a line of people waiting in front of a theatre to get tickets, waiting their turn to get into that room for the purpose of obtaining money. Many witnesses have been called to show that no such line existed, and the majority of these witnesses who were in the committee rooms during the afternoon, and who paid attention to the business being done there, say that the door by which it was said people entered the room, was always open. There was a swing door, which, if it had not been blocked up, would have been closed part of the time, but Mr. Leary says that he propped the door with a stick in order to prevent the door swinging.

"Ashley saw Mr. Stratton a considerable time after the election in the Examiner office, and when Mr. Stratton spoke to him, he did not claim that he had received any money, and did not do so until Gates had seen him and brought him to Mr. Hall's office. Gates says that he met Mr. Stratton in the committee rooms, and did not tell him that he had a vote, or was going to vote, but that he did tell him he could get them. He states that Mr. Stratton told him to get them and bring them in and make his own terms with them. One of these was Jack Curtis, and another Mickie Murray. One of these, he says, got $5.00 from Leary, and the other refused to vote because Mr. Leary wanted to give him only $4.00. Mr. Stratton says that he did not see Gates until the 21st of September, when Gates went to Mr. Hall's office and said that he got $2 from Leary. It is unaccountable to us that a man whom Mr. Straton did not know should be entrusted with the duty of bringing voters to the polls and that he was allowed to pay what he thought proper. Mr. Leary says that he did not know Gates, had no conversation with him that day and that he did not give him any money. Mr. Leary was quite open in his evidence and his statement appears to us to be worthy of credence.

"I think that Gates couldn't be believed for many reasons. In this evidence he stated that on the 21st of September he told Mr. Stratton that he had been paid $2, that Ashley had been paid by Leary $2 and that he himself or Ashley had got from Mr. Davidson in the presence of Mr. Stratton and under his direction the sum of $50. The proposition that he made to Mr. Stratton was that if he received from Mr. Stratton the sum of $400 he would make a declaration that he had not received any money from Davidson and had not been paid any money by Leary. When he was in the witness box he said that $400 was his price or his limit for making affidavits. If he swore to the affidavit that has appeared here for $50 I think his limit is very much under $400. I think that he is a man that from his testimony and his actions in the witness box would perjure himself for

PORFIRIO DIAZ
President of Mexico.

First Meeting In History

Meetings between presidents of the two republics have been attempted before, but without success. President Harrison visited El Paso during his first term, but did not extend a personal invitation to President Diaz and no meeting was accomplished. The plan was discussed again when President McKinley visited the Texas City, but nothing came of it.

President Taft, however, sent a personal invitation to President Diaz as soon as he decided to go to El Paso, and the invitation was promptly accepted.

El Paso, Texas., Sept. 30.—For the first time in history—with the exception of Roosevelt's trip to Panama—a president of the United States is going to invade a foreign country to meet another ruler.

This will happen when Taft and his party are greeted by President Diaz of Mexico, here on October 16. Both presidents will feast and be feted, each in the other's country.

The historic old bridge that spans the Rio Grande, linking Ciudad Juarez and El Paso recalls scenes of strife during the Mexican war. Now it awaits a transformation into a mass of colour, when the coming peaceful invasion of Mexico is made.

And never before in the long picturesque history of the southwest was there such a ceremony planned. There will be three banquets, one for the wives of the presidents. Bands from the Nineteenth infantry at Fort Bliss and from the City of Mexico will play "America" and "La Paloma." And, strangest thing of all, while two cities in different countries are ringing with cheers for the two countries, Taft will slip away and have a game of golf on what is called the hardest links to cover in the United States.

When the sun rises on El Paso's biggest day a scene never seen before on the frontier will unfold itself. The red, white and green standard of Mexico will fly beside the Stars and Stripes; salutes from batteries of bombs and from files of soldiery will wake the city.

At 8 a.m., President Diaz will enter Ciudad Juarez in his own private train, the most sumptuous in the world. This train is fully on a par with all the other appointments of the Diaz retinue, as the Mexican President lives more like a Hindoo rajah than a president.

At 9.40 a.m., the whistle from the president's special will usher in a din seldom heard here. Daylight fireworks will be sent up, cannons will boom, whistles blow, ad the bells in the quaint mission church towers will ring out a salute.

While 250 El Pasoans formally receive the President, the Diaz train will slowly cross the river, and a meeting that will live in history will be witnessed by thousands of persons.

Then will follow a parade that hitherto has been conceived only in fiction. Indians, gauchos, cowboys, vaqueros, soldiers, afoot and mounted, ranchers from Texas plains, bands in army uniform and Mexican brown, and a long line of carriages with prominent men will pass in review. Hardly will the music of some martial American air die away before, in the distance, will sound the peculiar strains of Mexican music which the Latin-American ear loves to hear.

A banquet at the Chamber of Commerce will follow. After an auto ride Diaz will reboard his train and recross the river, while Taft will leave for the links.

In the evening it will be Mexico's turn. Illuminations and fireworks, bombs and salutes, will announce Taft's arrival at Juarez. There will be another banquet and a conference during which problems of state will be discussed by both presidents.

El Pasoo has turned itself upside down in preparation for the big event. The city treasury has been turned over to the Mayor, Jos. U. Sweeney and a citizen's committee.

"Go the limit," were the instructions of this patriotic committee.

Mrs. Wm. H. Taft will not be overlooked in the celebration. She will be driven across into Mexico to dine with Mrs. Diaz at the old hotel where Mrs. McKinley was entertained in 1903, and Mrs. Diaz will return to the United States to dine with Mrs. Taft at the El Pasoo Country Club.

The Beginning of The End. Conclusion of Evidence in Rebuttal. Eloquent Address by Counsel For Petitioner. Brilliant Reply of Mr. Watson. Judgment Reserved on a Large Group of Charges.

At the afternoon proceedings at the protest trial, after the conclusion of the evidence in rebuttal, the monotony of the proceedings was broken by the arguments of counsel upon the group of charges known as the little east room charges.

Mr. Du Vernet, counsel for the petitioner, made an excellent defense, for such it was, the petitioner having been put on the defensive from the beginning of the trial. He made the strongest possible defense of the weakest possible position. It was creditable to his skill as a pleader that he acquitted himself so successfully under the shadow of an impending collapse of the cause with which he had been burdened.

Mr. Watson was in splendid fettle, and made a brilliant address, its opening passages especially being marked examples of forensic eloquence, almost classical in point of diction, palpitant with fire and feeling, and bursting with points. The fact that he was speaking as everything seemed to show—a winning fight, may have supplied a great deal of the inspiration of the main features of his argument. At the conclusion of the argument of counsel the court adjourned and those who had followed the case, as they left the court room, apparently had the feeling that a crisis in the case was at hand.

Evidence, both pro and con in the group of charges that have been engaging the attention of the court in the West Peterborough election trial, since Monday afternoon, was concluded yesterday at the afternoon session, after a number of other witnesses had been called by the defence, and one by the petitioner, in reply. The argument of the counsel, Mr. Du Vernet, K. C., for the petitioner, and Mr. Watson, K.C., for the respondent, was heard, Mr. Watson concluding shortly after 5 o'clock, and court then adjourned until this morning.

Hugh Darke.

Hugh Darke, the first witness after luncheon, said: I know Harry Butler. He was pointed out to me on the street, and he went with me to the Examiner office, where I introduced him to Mr. Davidson, who read over the charge, stating that Butler had been paid money. Butler said that the charge was not true. I told Butler that there were eleven charges, that I had committed bribery, and that I was ready to get those who had made the charges to make declarations that I had not done so. I was at the Liberal Committee rooms to deliver a message to Mr. Hall, respecting taking of a voter to the polls. I did not see Mr. Leary there; I saw Mr. Stratton sitting at a table.

To Mr. Du Vernet: I told Rolly Glover that I was going to get declarations. I thought it a serious charge to be accused of something I was not guilty of. I didn't know that Mr. Davidson was at the office. I went up to the committee room to have Mr. Hall send out a rig for a voter. I was never promised anything for these services.

To Mr. Watson: I made no payment to procure declarations. I used no inducement nor intimidation.

Rolland M. Glover.

I saw Charles Williams after the election, on Chamberlain street; Mr. Davidson was with me; we met Williams at the railway track, said Mr. Davidson told Williams that he (Davidson) was charged with paying money to Williams, and the latter said there was nothing in the charge. He was not asked for a declaration.

To Mr. Du Vernet: I got no instructions to get declarations. I thought I had an interest in doing so as there were ninety-six charges against me, and I was interested in trying to find out what was in them. Williams was not asked for a declaration. His denial was so positive that he was not asked to make a declaration. When Ashley was in the Examiner office to paint a safe. I asked him if there was anything in the charge that he was paid money, and he said there was not, and I asked him if he would mind taking a declaration to that effect.

T. M. Hunter, North Monaghan.

I have been Reeve of this Township and Warden of the county; was deputy returning officer on Oct. 26th, at May's school room. Mr. Leary came to the polling place between four and five o'clock, and stayed only a few minutes.

Mr. Watson said he had some other witnesses who could testify to the matters considered with the committee room charges, but he did not consider it necessary to call them in order to further disprove them.

Justice McMahon asked if Kingscote were present; he might be called. It was learned that he was out in the city collecting a mail route and would not be in till four o'clock.

In the interval Mr. Watson called

A. H. Stratton.

Mr. Stratton said: I was in the Liberal committee rooms on election day. I should say that Mr. Leary left the committee rooms about a quarter to four o'clock. I did not see Mr. Leary leave the room. I asked Morgan, Mr. Leary's driver, to take a vote to the polls, but he said he had to drive Mr. Leary to North Monaghan at a quarter to four. I was in both rooms from time to time all the afternoon. In the corner room at times I saw Mr. Stratton, and Mr. Davidson. There was no "row of men," as described, waiting to enter the small room. There was no indication that money was being paid. I saw both Mr. Stratton and Mr. Leary at the room.

Mr. Du Vernet submitted evidence, in reply.

George May.

I was at May's School House on election day. I was there from two o'clock till the close of the poll. I did not see Mr. Leary there. I am a supporter of the Conservative party. I got a subpoena this morning. There are something over 200 voters at the poll. I was sometimes inside and sometimes outside. I was sitting inside, at times. There were several there at times who were not voting. I couldn't tell everybody that was there that day. I haven't thought about those who were present from that day to this. I would contradict Mr. Hunter's statement that Mr. Leary was there between four and five o'clock.

This concluded the evidence, in respect of the group of cases dominated generally during the course of the trial as "The Committee Room Charges," and Mr. Du Vernet made his argument:

The Argument.

"I submit that our case is abund-

Death Was Accidental And No Blame Is Attached To St. Ry. Co.

Toronto, October 1st.—"That Miss Emma Peck died on the 28th of September as the result of concussion of the brain, caused by falling from a street car while it was in motion; and that no blame can be attached to the street railway or its employes," was the verdict returned by Coroner Cotton's jury last night.

It was shown that Miss Peck who was visiting Toronto from Peterborough, and who was about 50 years of age was rather deaf. While on a King street car, near Beaty avenue, she rose from her seat, as if to pull the bell rope. Evidently thinking the car would stop she stepped off while it was still moving rapidly and fell to the pavement, receiving injuries from which she died. A letter from her relatives in Peterborough was read, in which they stated that they were satisfied Miss Peck's death was purely accidental and that they attached no blame to the Railway Company.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON A CHARGE OF HAVING EXTORTED MONEY AND NOTES BY THREATS

George Parcells was committed for trial by Magistrate Edmison yesterday afternoon on a charge of unlawfully extorting money and notes from Samuel Leason by threats and menaces. His preliminary hearing was begun yesterday morning at ten o'clock. It was five o'clock before all the witnesses for the prosecution were heard. Mr. Ghent of Havelock appeared for the complainant and Mr. F. D. Kerr for the defendant. The accused was admitted to bail at $2,000, in two sureties.

When court resumed at two o'clock, Mr. Kerr began the cross-examination of the complainant.

Mr. Leason on being questioned said that he had written letters to Mrs. Watson in answer to ones from her. In one letter she said that she wanted to borrow ten dollars and that she had a spat with her husband. In answer to this letter, he told Mr. Kerr that he sent the money in a letter. He admitted addressing Mrs. Watson as "dear sister." He later gave her $2.50 to hire a horse and buggy and she took him for a drive, he said. Returning from the drive, he said that he paid her two dollars.

"Were you not making love to that woman," Mr. Kerr asked.

"No, sir."

"When Mr. Parcells came along you

ORMONDE CHEESE FACTORY DESTROYED BY FIRE YESTERDAY

Spark From Smokestack Originated the Trouble—Efforts Made Were In Vain as the Flames Spread Like Magic —Factory Was on Peterborough Board.

Examiner Special.

Hastings, Oct. 2. — "Ormonde" cheese factory, with 250 cheese, valued at $3,000, was destroyed on Friday morning at 3.30 o'clock by a fire that gained rapid headway in spite of the great efforts to extinguish it. The cause of the conflagration is not clearly known, but it is believed that a spark from the smokestack was the origin. The blaze was noticed before it had become serious, but the efforts of neighbours and friends were useless.

The factory was owned by the cheese maker, Mr. [illegible], who will have to bear the loss himself. Three hundred cheese were stored in the curing room, but only 50 were saved. The loss from the destruction of the 250 cheese was about 2,000, which is met by $2,500 insurance. The net loss to the patrons is estimated at $500.

WHEN IMPORTS MUST EXCEED EXPORTS

The Dominion's imports during the fiscal year ending March 30, 1909, showed much greater relative decline than its exports. In the fiscal year 1907-8 imports of merchandise exceeded exports of Canadian merchandise by some $117,000,000. For the year 1908-9 this "adverse balance," as the old time mercantilist school of economists used to stigmatise it, was $60,000,000 smaller—or about $57,000,000. But this marked change is not to be taken as indicating any swinging over of Canada's trade balance in the near future. The fiscal year 1908-9 was largely one of commercial depression. Economy, partly forced and partly voluntary, led to a smaller quantity of imports—prices of which were generally lower, too, on account of world-wide lessening in the call for manufactured products. On the other hand Canada's exports fell off but little, on account of sustained demand everywhere for agricultural products at increased prices because of general scarcity. So that last year's apparent tendency towards wiping out the import balance was due to unusual circumstances and not to conditions that may be considered normal in the development of a rapidly growing country. Thus far, during the current fiscal year, imports of merchandise have again been greatly in excess of exports. For the five months ending with August 31, imports of merchandise entered for consumption have totalled $142,033,218, an increase of $39,566,673 over last year; exports of domestic products were $66,935,925, an increase of $6,620,304. From which it will be seen that the excess of imports over domestic exports this year so far is about $45,000,000—or just about twice what it was for the corresponding period of last year. Of course, agricultural exports during the next few months will show greater relative increases over last year than during the past few months. But, making all allowance for the harvest output, it is a foregone conclusion that imports for 1909-10 will exceed exports by a considerably greater margin than during 1908-9.

Is this contra balance of trade any cause for anxiety? Careful consideration of all circumstances tends to the conviction that it is not, if it be kept within reasonable bounds — such bounds being determined by the demands upon outside capital warranted by the country's ready development. Or, looking at it from another viewpoint, the safe extent of such excess is to be measured with respect to the reasonable prospect for profitable returns upon investment of the British and foreign capital involved. In the case of so rapidly growing a country, the margin of imports over exports chiefly represents a lending or investing of outside funds. When a railroad or industrial company sells securities abroad, in the long run its resultant funds find their way into Canada largely in the form of materials. This takes place not only directly, but indirectly, as by an increased demand for imports due to increased employment of wage-earners. The Canadian banks' present large reserves held abroad are chiefly due to sales of securities. Instead of all such funds being brought home to Canada they are held in London and New York, and are there available, through exchange operations, for settlement of Canadian import accounts.

To requote in these columns the words of Prof. A. W. Flux: "While we are in the stage of using a greater amount of equipment in developing the country's resources than can be produced by our own efforts, our imports must exceed our exports. That they should do so is not merely necessary and natural, but a sign that the possessors of wealth in other countries are willing to devote that wealth to the development of Canadian resources, waiting for return will by the use of their wealth, the development has been carried forward satisfactorily." So long, therefore, as there is alert and adequate reckoning as to the future's counter-claims, an over-balance of exports by imports is not a condition to be depreciated. Still, it is the part of prudence not to overlook the fact that in the past ten years, as the accompanying table shows Canada's imports or merchandise have exceeded domestic exports, by well on to half a billion of dollars.—The Chronicle.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

There is no greater mistake than the somewhat popular one that the more costly a sport is made, the more refined and honest it becomes. So far as the refinement is concerned there may be a certain amount of truth in the belief, but in regard to the honesty, well, there is room for considerable doubt. A somewhat extended acquaintance with sport on flood and field leads us to state, emphatically, that dishonesty in athletics is not entirely unknown to what for want of a better term may be called "its gentlemanly" exponents. We have known so-called "gentlemen" to be cheats at card playing, on the cricket field, on the football field and at horse-racing. We have known a few to become absconding debtors, and one or two to become inmates of prisons, because they were not given a chance to abscond. These men, without one exception, might have traced their downfall to an indulgence in costly forms of sport. In order to keep up their end in society they had lived far beyond their means, and the result was—ruin.

But there are many, also of these "gentlemen," who, whilst they are well able to pay lawfully incurred debts, seem to think it beneath their dignity to do so, and regard it as an insult that they should be "billed" by such as have trusted to their honour for payment—for goods received. We have known many of these. They are neither more nor less than excrescences on society, men who owe their liberty to the refinement of their appearance, but who are not one whit better than the poor starveling, who gets six months in gaol for stealing ten cents worth of goods from a shop counter. It is somewhat remarkable to see, however, that the Jam of Nawanagar, better known in the cricketing world as "Ranji," has been named in Parliament as guilty of such low practices.

Witness the following from the Overseas Daily Mail:

Mr. Joynson Hicks asked the Under-Secretary for India in Parliament on Tuesday if the Jam of Nawanagar (Prince Ranjitsinhji) could come to England only with the permission of the Secretary of State.

The Master of Elibank: His Highness is a ruling prince or chief governing his own territories under the suzerainty of the King. The permission of the Secretary of State is not required to his Highness visiting England, but such visits would be arranged by Indian princes in communication with the Government of India.

Major Renton: Is the hon. gentleman aware that this chief is alleged to owe a great deal of money to small local trades-people in Sussex? (Cries of "Oh, oh.")

The Deputy-Speaker: That does not arise out of the question.

Mr. Joynson Hicks: May I ask the Under-Secretary whether he will be prepared to receive and consider representations from responsible members of the House before arranging any further visit of this prince?

The Master of Elibank: I am afraid the answer I have given must suffice.

Mr. Rees: May I ask whether such Jam is not a better jam for Indian consumption in proportion as it is preserved in India? (Laughter.)

* * * *

We have read of many cases of lazy men, and perhaps the following paragraph exhibits one of the laziest. An inspector of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children applied for a summons against a certain denizen of West Green, accused of neglecting his children, and described him as "the laziest man in the world." The inspector substantiated the charge by the following grim record: "His wife tells me that, instead of looking for work, he lies in bed all day and never washes. There is nothing physically the matter with him. She has dragged him out of bed, but he went back on the first occasion he could. Once he was in bed for thre months. On one occasion a letter came offering him work, but he said, 'I think it is raining. I will go to-morrow.' The next job he declined because he wanted a new set of teeth and his hair dyed first. Once he went into the workhouse, but he came out to go to bed. His wife chased him out of the house with a poker, but he got through the window and went to bed." The summons was granted, and he will have the exertion of attending court.

SOMERSETSHIRE.

Uncle Prosecutes Niece for 6d.—A remarkable case came before the Axbridge Bench, Somerset, when Beatrice Banwell, a young domestic servant, of Enfield, was summoned by her uncle, Edwin Banwell, farmer, of Godney, for stealing some nuts, value 6d. It was stated that the girl, at the warm invitation of her uncle, came from London to spend her holidays with her aunt and uncle in Somerset. A few days afterwards the latter summoned her for stealing nuts from his orchard. The Bench dismissed the girl "without a stain on her character," and ordered the prosecutor to pay £3 7s. 6d. costs.

Halley's great comet, which will be seen in the spring of next year with the naked eye, and is already making its mark on sensitised photograph plates in the observatories of the world, has in the past been held responsible for many strange, interesting, and terrifying world events.

History records the return of Halley's comet twenty-eight times during the past 2,000 years. The following events occurred during, or closely followed, the appearance of the comet:

To many of the readers of the Examiner, who are students of the Bible, the following statistics, compiled by a gentleman, who, for conscience sake, suffered several years of incarceration in an English prison, will, no doubt, prove interesting and instructive reading:

The Bible contains 66 Books, 1,189 chapters, 33,173 verses, 773,692 words, and 3,566,480 letters. The word "and" occurs 46,227 times, the word "Lord" 1,855 times, "reverend" but once, "girl" but once (in Joel 3.3); the words "everlasting fire" but twice, and "everlasting punishment" but once. The middle line is 2 Chronicles IV.-16. The middle chapter and the shortest is Psalm CXVII. The middle verse is the 8th verse of Psalm CXVII. The 21st verse of the 2nd Chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the Alphabet, except the letter "J." The finest chapter to read is the 26th Chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. The 19th Chapter of Second Kings, and the 37th Chapter of Isaiah are alike. The longest verse is the 9th verse of the 8th Chapter of Esther. The shortest is the 35th verse of 11th Chapter of St. John, viz: "Jesus wept." The 8th, 15th, 21st and 31st verses of the 107th Psalm are alike. Each verse of the 136th Psalm ends alike. There are no words of more than six syllables.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF INDIGESTION

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Made a Permanent Cure.

There are many medicines that will relieve indigestion for a time—there are few that will make a permanent cure. But there is one medicine that is a sure cure—that medicine is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have cured thousands of cases—many of them of years' standing. Cases like that of Mr. John E. Seale of Montreal, Que., after many other medicines have been tried and found worthless. Mr. Seale says:—"For nearly six years I suffered with indigestion. During all that time I was constantly taking medicine for the trouble, but never got more than temporary relief. Finally I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using them for some time the trouble disappeared and I am now able to eat heartily without the least trace of the suffering I formerly endured. I can, from my own experience, strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a permanent cure for indigestion."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are good for every disease that good blood is good for, simply because they make good blood—that is why they cure rheumatism, heart palpitation, indigestion, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance and the ailments of girlhood and womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all medicine dealers or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ATTEND THE POULTRY SHOWS

From Farm and Dairy.

Fanciers who wish to attract attention to their fowls can do so by placing them in the shows. A blue ribbon is a splendid advertisement. It is also an incentive to all breeders to improve their stock, because people can see for themselves and learn what are the strong as well as the weak points. Many a person may have a prize winner in the back yard and not know it, consequently all true fanciers who are in love with the work should not only attend the poultry shows, but should place their best fowls on exhibition. It is true the intrinsic value of the premiums awarded at poultry shows is not great. However, there is the honor of winning, and the advertising, which are well worth the effort and amply repay the exhibitor.

What Our Trade-Mark Means to You

IT means that the flour contained in bags and barrels so trade-marked is decidedly whiter, a great deal stronger and more nutritious than other flours.

It means that the flour has been properly aged to mature its full strength.

It means

"More bread and better Bread" and better pastry, too.

It means elimination of uncertainty—"your money back" if Purity fails to give entire satisfaction.

Costs more than the other kind, but worth the difference.

Going! Going! Thousands Of Farms To Be Given Free

Uncle Sam to Give Away the 2,237,000 Acres of Standing Rock and Cheyenne Indian Reservations Next Month ---How You Can Get in the Land Lottery.

Aberdeen, S. D. Sept. 30.—"Walk right up, gentlemen; take your choice of these fine farms here—thousands and thousands of 'em free. First here, first served."

It's Uncle Sam talking and on Oct. 26 he is going to give away the finest tract of rich farm land that remains in the public domain. Approximately 2,237,040 acres are included in his big autumn gift to homesteaders, and when the Dakotas' school tracts and Indian grants are separated, there will be at least 1,600,000 acres left for the landseekers.

The land comprises the Standing Rock and Cheyenne river Indian reservations, located in the north central portion of this state. Government appraisers have said that the land is worth from 50 cents to $6 an acre, but the farms all around the reservations are worth $20 to $30 an acre. So the lucky ones are going to be fixed for life when they pick out their future homes.

A small part of the Standing Rock tract extends into North Dakota, and the location is unequalled for diversified farming.

Bounded on the east by the Missouri river—the "big muddy" of Indian lore—and on the south by the Cheyenne river, they are traversed by many streams that assure the fertility of the soil for an indefinite period.

Thousands of homeseekers from all parts of the country have been looking forward to Uncle Sam's last big land lottery. To many in cities who want to spend the rest of their lives out in the open, this land drawing comes as the most important event in their lives. As yet only half-developed, this part of the Dakota's already has proved itself the richest of agricultural districts.

Oats, spring wheat, barley, rye and other grains are raised in abundance. Potatoes and all kinds of vegetables are being grown successfully; in fact, the new land that Uncle Sam wants to see dotted with farm homes is about as productive as any in the northwest.

Only the narrow expanse of the Missouri river divides the rich, well paying farms of Walworth Co. from the reservation.

In return for what Uncle Sam is going to give away, the settler will be called on to make a little sacrifice.

For months, James W. Whitten, representing the government land office, has been preparing for the rush. Hundreds of cards were printed which were distributed to notaries. These notaries are the only persons who can witness the applications of intending homesteaders.

All one has to do to register, after having made the trip here or to Mobridge or Lemmon, S.D., is to go, any time between October 5 and October 23, to one of the places where the official notary's sign appears, fill out the blank application and pay the notary a fee of 25 cents. Blanks and envelopes for mailing are furnished by the land office.

All are alike, there is no distinguishing mark on any of the envelopes.

As soon as an application is signed, the notary seals it and mails the envelope to Supt. Whitten. This will continue until October 23, when the "dead line" is reached.

As fast as the envelopes come in here, they are placed in big sealed cans, which are guarded night and day. On the day of the drawing Aberdeen will be the hub of the northwest.

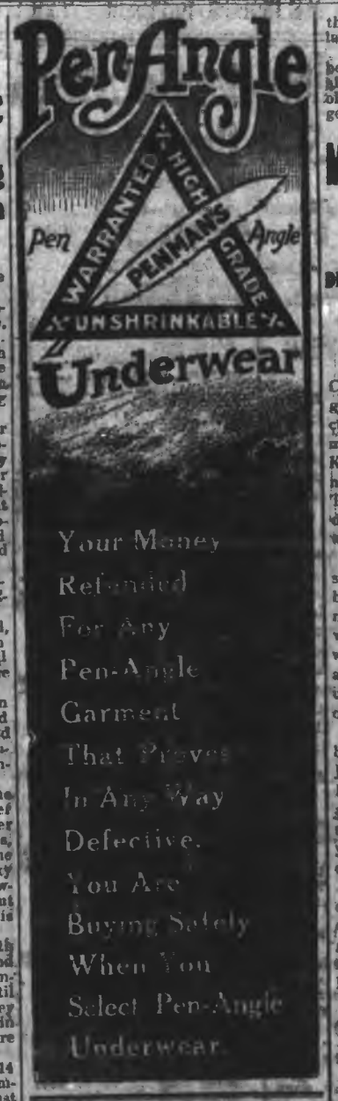
On a big platform thousands of the envelopes will be spread out, after having been "shuffled up." A number of children will make the drawings, and Supt. Whitten, with a megaphone will announce the names of the lucky ones from day to day until the drawing is complete—until every farm out of the thousands to be given away is allotted.

Uncle Sam is generous, indeed, with the people he wants to make free and independent for life. The lucky winner of a farm, for instance, has until next April to prove his claim, as they do it nowadays. He has about $14 in charges to pay, and five years more to finish paying for the farm.

But he must live on the farm 14 months consecutively and make improvements. In other words it must be his home for at least 14 months.

If he cannot farm the land after winning it, for some good reason, he may sell it, but the reason must be bona fide and perfectly satisfactory to Uncle Sam's agents.

The Indian will not be forgotten in the allotment. Many of the redskins already are here, and from now on, Aberdeen will fill up that picturesque crowd which only a western land drawing can bring together.



MR. WM. C. KIRKE HAS PASSED AWAY

Died at His Residence, Hunter Street East, Yesterday Morning—Funeral Monday Afternoon.

The many friends of Mr. William C. Kirke, Hunter street East, will regret to learn of his death, which occurred at his late residence yesterday morning about half past eight. Mr. Kirke had been in failing health for nearly a year. He was down town on Tuesday last but the last couple of days his condition gradually grew worse until his death came.

The late Mr. Kirke had been a resident of Peterborough for a number of years, during which time he made a large number of friends. He was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was of a quiet and kindly disposition and in his own unostentatious manner, did many acts of kindness for others.

He was 49 years of age, and was born in Scotland. He was the son of James Kirke, Esquire, of Edinburgh. He came to Canada about 20 years ago. He went home once in that time, returning to Peterborough seven years ago. He was a faithful member of St. Luke's church.

His wife, father and three brothers are left to mourn his loss. His brothers are Mr. Charles Kirke, of Glasgow, Scotland, Rev. Adam Kirke, of Old Sodbury, England, and Dr. Jas. Kirke, of Penang, Straits Settlement.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to St. Luke's church, and thence to the Little Lake cemetery.

Surgeon's Opinion

OF KNIFE FOR PILES

Operating often a fad—The modern way of curing piles is with Dr. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Sir Henry C. Burdett, K.C.B., of London, England, in a recent address, said, "What we want are surgeons, who with wisdom to be conservative, have courage to protest against the growing tendency to put a knife into everybody on the smallest possible pretext."

Too many doctors have a desire to use the knife at every opportunity. The rewards to them are rich, but think of the suffering of body and mind, the enormous expense and the risk of life itself. An operation should be the last resort, for in spite of glowing promises the results are often very disappointing.

Many a sufferer from piles has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, after operations have failed. Hundreds of thousands have escaped operations by using this treatment first and thereby obtaining cure.

Mr. Arthur Lepine, school teacher, Granite Hill, Muskoka, Ont., writes:

"For two years I suffered from bleeding piles and lost each day about half a cup of blood. I went to the Ottawa General Hospital to be operated on and was under the influence of chloroform for one hour. For about two months I was better but my old trouble returned and again I lost great blood. One of my doctors told me I would have to undergo another operation, but I would not consent.

"My father, proprietor of the Richelieu Hotel, Ottawa, advised me to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and two boxes cured me. I did not lose any blood after beginning this treatment, and believe the cure is a permanent one. I gratefully recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as the best treatment in the world for bleeding piles." 60 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

From Farm and Dairy.

Prof. F. C. Elford, Macdonald College.

Prior to 1895 poultry conditions among the Danes were not far different to conditions here except that they had several poultry societies for the promotion of breeding. The marked end of the industry was unsatisfactory. The Co-operative Egg Export Society was formed to assist in the putting of the eggs on the market. It acts in conjunction with the existing societies. By means of local societies it collects the eggs from the members and forwards them to one of the nine export packing stations. At these stations they are tested, graded and repacked in wooden boxes holding 1,440 eggs in which they are shipped to Great Britain.

These packing stations are so well equipped for determining the freshness of eggs and the system works so well that even attempts at fraud are rare. Boxes are all stamped with the brand or trade mark of the society, the grade, weight, and number of eggs contained.

The co-operative societies in other countries have been copied more or less from Denmark and are giving satisfactory results.

Saved His Life---Now She Boils His Morning Coffee

Clara Hurst Fell Into the Meshes of a Trap Laid by Cupid—Rescued Arthur Bouton From Drowning off Staten Island.

FRIENDSHIP WAS BEGUN

If you were a girl with a swimming record, and a young man offered you his protection by following you in his rowboat on a long distance swim, how do you think you would feel if you found yourself saving the young man's life instead?

And then how would you feel if the young man very soon after being saved were to tell you that if you did not love him you might more kindly have left him to drown?

That is what happened to Mrs. Arthur G. Bouton, who has just returned from her honeymoon trip and settled down in a pretty little home at No. 320 Clarke avenue, Richmond, Staten Island. And it all took place so rapidly and so spiritedly that Mrs. Bouton hardly knew what was happening until she got to broiling steaks and making coffee for the man whose life she had saved first by swimming and then by marrying him.

As Miss Clara Hurst, Mrs. Bouton has held something of a swimming record ever since she was old enough to don a bathing suit. She earned the amateur long distance championship by swimming from Brooklyn Bridge to Coney Island and then asking permission to continue her aquatic exercises. Some there are who say that Mrs. Bouton was born to the water as other babies are born to silver spoons, silklined cradles and made-over-night fortunes. At any rate, when the amateur champion of her sex had fourteen rescues to her credit old Neptune and Cupid put their heads together and decided to give her a husband right out of the Atlantic ocean.

Of course, the pretty swimmer knew nothing of this little plan when, one lovely, clear day in June, 1908, with a girl friend she went out for a swim the pier at Midland Beach, Staten Island. The two girls had been doing some warming up stunts in the water, and were just getting ready to start on a five-mile swim that meant real exercise, when over from the pier dropped a young man from their own town, Richmond, asking whether he could join them on the swim.

"Certainly," said Miss Hurst, all unconscious of the little plan being hatched against her heart, "provided you are a good swimmer. But we are going to do some long-distance work, and we don't want to take chances with a swimmer who is not sure of his endurance or what might be attacked by cramps."

"Tell you what," said the youth, treading water to her side, "I'd like to make the trip with you, but I'm not your match in swimming, and so, if you don't mind, I'll have my friend Bouton follow us in a boat. Then if I can't keep pace with you he can pick me up."

This suited the two girls, and so Arthur Bouton, a young and energetic civil engineer off for a day's holiday, was hailed. He ran to the edge of the pier, was introduced to the girls, and the plan was explained to the satisfaction of all concerned. In a few minutes the contest was on, with Bouton following in a boat.

For more than an hour they worked their way through the choppy surf, and then happened just what Miss Hurst had feared. The young man doubled up in the water and threw out his arms spasmodically.

"Cramps!" groaned Miss Hurst, who knew the symptoms. "And we are a mile from the pier."

By the aid of her friend she got a grip on the man, who had just come to the surface. The two girls had him by his bathing suit, but his struggles were terrific, and in a second he was loose again. The next time he came up the two girls got a better grip on the suit and lifted the man into the boat, which Bouton had brought to their aid. Naturally, in the process of pulling, hauling and jerking the unconscious man into the boat it shipped considerable water, but Miss Hurst, was so busy working over the victim of their day's sport that she had little time to notice what trouble Bouton was having to bale out the water. The other girl was following the boat, using swift, sure strokes, and she noticed that Bouton made no headway baling with his hat. She called Miss Hurst's attention from life-saving operations to the fact that the boat was shipping more and more water. A quick investigation showed Miss Hurst that the boat had sprung a leak and that oars were practically useless.

If Mr. Bouton could have swum their position would have been less dangerous. As it was, he could do nothing but bale, bale with his hat. The other girl in the water was losing strength and dared not try to swim to shore alone. Occasionally she came back to the boat and hung on for a brief respite, but most of the time she floated on the water. The heat, the nervous tension, the chill from his water-soaked garments were doing their work for Bouton. Slowly his efforts grew weaker, the hat fell from his hand and he slipped into the bottom of the boat in a semi-comatose condition.

Miss Hurst gave one look at her two helpless fellow-passengers and the rapidly filling boat. Then with grim determination she took the rope between her teeth and sprang forward into the waves. Her girl friend, reading Miss Hurst's plan at a glance, kept close to the boat, baling as best she could with Bouton's hat, but not daring to climb in and add to the weight.

With one hand on the boat, Miss Hurst drew nearer and nearer the pier, which at the noon hour was practically deserted. And now a new danger confronted the quartet, for the tide was coming in roughly and the boat might be dashed to pieces against the piles of the pier.

The quick-witted champion gripped the nearest pile with her feet, and then, holding the line in her teeth, she pushed off the boat with her strong, supple arms. To the girl, threatened every instant with being crushed between piles and boat, it seemed like hours before her girl friend could make the men at the Volunteer Life Saving Station understand their plight. Then when help was summoned and the two semi-conscious men had been taken to safety Miss Hurst was quite willing to be floated into land by the life-savers.

Mr. Bouton did not appear quite as grateful as perhaps he might have been to the young woman who had saved his life. In fact he was consumed by one thought—anger that he had played so small a part in the day's proceedings. He registered a vow then and there to learn how to swim. On learning that Miss Hurst was a swimming teacher, it was quite natural that he should become one of her pupils, and while she taught the young civil engineer swimming he taught her the old, old game of love. As soon as he could keep pace with the girl of his heart in the water he led the way to the little office where marriage licenses are to be had for the asking—and $1 in coin of the land.

They took their honeymoon by rail because they like variety, but after all, Mr. and Mrs. Bouton are loyal to old Neptune, who brought them together.

PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS, ECZEMA, SALT RHEUM

These disfiguring skin diseases are caused by impure blood, which becomes disordered through Imperfect Digestion, Torpid Liver, or Inactive Kidneys. The pores of the skin close up, poisonous accumulations which should be eliminated are retained, and weaken and putrify the blood. Ferrozone has a specific action on blood impurities and drives them quickly from the system. It stimulates the Kidneys and Liver to healthy action, neutralizes Uric acid, keeps the pores of the skin open, and destroys germs. Ferrozone is a specific for every form of skin disease, and is used with astonishing success the world over. It acts directly on the blood, freeing it of the foul matter that breaks out in such painful and distressing blemishes. There are no unpleasant after-effects from Ferrozone, which does not depress the heart, and is free from Mercury, Potash, and harmful drugs. By using Ferrozone you have the BEST treatment for Skin Diseases and Blood Disorders. No doctor can prescribe anything better, probably nothing so good. Price 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50. Sold everywhere by druggists.

"For five years my face was disfigured by raw, blood eruptions, that resisted all treatment. Several Kingston doctors did their best for me, but failed. I used Ferrozone and was perfectly cured." Mary Shanly, Pittsburg, Ont.

IMPORTANT FACTS

"A quart of milk is practically equal to a pound of beef in food value."

Prof. Dean, of the Ontario Agricultural College: "The composition of wheat is higher in protein and heat of combustion than any other cereal for human food."

Results of analysis by Bureau of Chemistry by U. S. Dept. of Agriculture:

ORANGE MEAT is simply the whole wheat berry, steam cooked, mixed with salt, flaked and toasted. This process develops in each wheat berry the highest percentage of grape sugars. It converts the starches into a form most easily digested and assimilated. ORANGE MEAT and milk is a perfect food.

City's Population Has Increased By Nearly 500 During The Year

AN ENCOURAGING YEAR

The assessors, Messrs. T. B. McGrath and W. H. Thompson, handed in their rolls yesterday to City Clerk Armstrong, and not a little information of general interest to the citizens is contained therein. The population of Peterborough is close up to the 17,000 mark. The total shows 16,907, an increase of 416 over last year, and practically the same gain that was made during 1908 over the previous year. The average increase for the last few years is apparently about 450 persons. This increase is a very encouraging one, in view of the fact that the West, with its many opportunities is attracting thousands of young men and families from the East. The city has been more than holding its own, and with a more progressive policy in the future, and the utilizing of Peterborough's great natural facilities, the old town is bound to go ahead and enjoy the prosperity its citizens firmly believe it deserves.

There has been an increase in the value of land, buildings and taxable real property. The increase, too, in the number of children is sufficient proof that race suicide is not entertained within Peterborough boundaries.

The total assessment taxable does not show a heavy advance on last year's figures, and it is not very probable that the Court of Revision will be called upon to hear many claims of high assessment.

In spite of the fact that the police department has maintained a vigorous campaign against tagless dogs, the canine family has prospered. In glancing over the five wards, there is no outstanding gain made by any one. The following is the general statement giving the recapitulation of the various wards:

Three Sisters Were Proposed To And Married On Same Day

Mother Surprised to Hear Announcement of Her Three Daughters' Engagements Within Short Time—Arrangements Were Made for a Triple Wedding.

PARTED FOR HONEYMOONS

When Cupid hunts with triple arrows, sending them flying at one stroke, there is bound to be an unusual romance. But seldom has he planned such a series of coincidences as those which were attached to the Lamson triple wedding in Chicago the other day. For the brides all became engaged the same day, had similar trousseaux and bridal bouquets, and were married at the same hour in the same church. Added to that, they were almost of an age, there being less than four years' difference between the oldest and youngest sisters and about the same ostween the bridegrooms, the total ages of the six being only 120.

"The "three lovely Lamsons" are well known on the West Side in Chicago. Their home on Jackson Boulevard has been the scene of many delightful little parties. For Lillian, the oldest, is a clever musician, and Agnes, the youngest, has a fine soprano voice. While Elsie, the one "in between" is not musically inclined, she can get up the most delightful suppers afterward, and naturally the combination is one that appeals to every one. The father's death made it necessary for all three to earn their living, and it was through this coincidence that the bridegrooms met, admired, wooed and won the pretty sisters.

Lillian, the oldest, who recently celebrated her twenty-first birthday was assistant in a doctor's office when Wesley Gantz went there as a patient and afterward "just dropped in." Then the calls were transferred to the Jackson Boulevard address, and were limited to Sundays and evenings.

Elsie, now Mrs. Fred W. Kindler, is petite, with brown wavy hair. She has reached the mature age of eighteen.

Agnes, who is not yet eighteen, is the tallest and looks the most mature of the trio. She met Thomas White at her office. As in the case of her oldest sister, business was protracted far beyond the regular hours and the Lamson home became a frequent meeting place.

In July, each girl announced her engagement to her mother, and was surprised to learn that she was not the only one who had acquired an engagement ring. The weddings were not to be for a long time, possibly a year. Then the time began shortening itself until the bridegrooms-to-be secured the same two weeks' vacation in early September. Why not take the wedding trip then?—a year was so long to wait! The decision to be married in the same church was not made until after the licenses had been procured. Very quietly preparations were made for an early morning marriage, followed by a wedding trip to Wisconsin. But the announcement of three licenses from the same address together with the youth of the sextet made it impossible to avoid a certain amount of publicity. Photographers snapped the brides as they went in and out of the house, while darting representatives of instalment piano houses forced their way inside the apartment. It was planned to keep the hour a secret, but on Saturday morning everybody—to the number of at least five hundred—gathered at the church to await the coming of the "lovely Lamson."

A triple wedding journey was practically impossible, and so, after the wedding breakfast, at the Lamson home, the three pairs set out in three different directions. For the first time their paths diverged, and from now on they will travel in different directions.

The mother of these interesting girls is a remarkable woman. Married at seventeen, she is still on the sunny side of forty, and gives the appearance of being even younger. She approves heartily of early marriages, saying that if more people married younger there would be less unhappiness and divorce.

THE PEOPLE ALL

In Chorus Cried, Give us Newbro's Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes." Now "Herpes" is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; this is the microbe that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE promptly destroys; after which the hair grows. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

CANADA EVIDENTLY HOLDS ANOTHER RECORD IN CONNECTION WITH TRANSPORTATION MATTERS

The official Guide of the Railways and Steam Navigation lines in the United States, Porto Rico, Canada, Mexico and Cuba is regarded by transportation men, especially those engaged in handling tickets and giving information to the public, as indispensable—it is the bible of the railway world.

Charles E. Morgan, who has represented the Grand Trunk Railway System and its allied lines at Hamilton, Ont., for a life-time recently received a letter from the Manager of the Official Guide in which the opinion is expressed that Mr. Morgan is entitled to the credit of being the "longest continuous subscriber," his name appearing continuously on the subscription list of the "Guide" since March 1st, 1874.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS

In Each Ward as Shown From the Assessors' Rolls.

The number of births and deaths in the city during hte past year is an interesting bit of information and shows a considerable increase in births while the number of deaths has not been very large. The showing for wards is as follows:

	Births	Deaths
South Ward	52	16
Centre Ward	15	11
West Ward	66	20
North Ward	55	22
East Ward	36	9
	213	80

From the above it would appear that the East Ward is the healthiest, but these figures have no particular significance in that regard.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JOHN CLARKE.

The death occurred last night of Mrs. John Clarke, 428 Huron street.

About three weeks ago, while on a visit to her son, Mr. Frederick Clarke, in Rosedale, she slipped and fell, and while her injuries were not serious, she did not, owing to her advanced age, recover from the shock.

Born in St. Andrew's, Scotland, nearly 84 years ago, she came to Canada in 1844, and soon after married Mr. John Clarke, of Peterborough. After her husband's death she removed to Toronto, with her family, in 1892, where she had lived ever since.

Mrs. Clarke was a member of the Methodist Church and attended Trinity Church, Bloor street. Three sons, Alfred, Frederick, and Charles, survive her, as well as three daughters.—Toronto Globe.

DEPARTMENT STORES

New Officers Of Peterborough Branch Of The W. A. A. Elected

Secretary's Report of the Work Done During the Past Year—Other Routine Business—The Staff of Officers.

BEGIN THE NEW YEAR

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada was held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 28th, at the Y. W. C. A.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting and much interest was shown in all the branches of the work. After the usual routine work, reading of reports, etc., the officers for the coming year were elected. The treasurer's report shows a balance in the bank to the credit of the branch of $26.21.

A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring officers, Mrs. Charles, Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Miss Dobie, Mrs. McCullough; to Mr. Montizambert, for the use of the Bank building and to the Board of the Y. W. C. A. for the use of the room for the meeting.

The following officers were elected:
Hon. President—Mrs. Dignam.
Hon. Past Pres.—Miss Bertram.
President—Mrs. Arthur Stevenson.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. Harry Rush.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. R. R. Hall.
Secretary—Miss Madeline Wilson.
Treasurer—Miss Maud Rush.
Convenors of Committees — Social, Mrs. Aylmer; lecture, Mrs. R. S. Davidson; home industries, Mrs. George Rubidge; exhibition, Miss Hatton; reading club, Mrs. Fredericks, archivist, Mrs. Palmer.

Secretary's Report.

The Secretary's report was presented as follows:

As in former years the most important event in the history of the Branch during the year was the Foreign Exhibition. This exhibition was held in the building formerly occupied by the Bank of Montreal n the second week of February.

The exhibition this year was especially interesting to Peterborough people as we were fortunate enough to secure a number of works by our most distinguished member, Miss Katherine E. Wallis. Among these was a replica in bronze of the celebrated "Cabbage Baby," which had been exhibited in the Paris Salon in the previous spring. An exquisite portrait of Miss Wallis, in low relief, Mons. Waldman, the celebrated French portraitist, and some spirited examples of his work as an animalist were very much admired and created a great deal of interest. The pictures, among which were several specimens of the best modern Dutch water colorists, and some excellent Scotch oils were very much admired. The Water Crane room was a great centre of attraction, and genuine, indeed, was the delight with which many recognised the originals of the illustrations which had been the joy of their childhood hours.

Peterborough was very fortunate in having such a varied, excellent exhibition and while we feel sometimes as if our efforts were not appreciated we were pleased this year to find that the attendance was larger than ever before. We had the pleasure of having our first president, Miss Bertram, with us for a few days, and her bright and cheery presence and words of encouragement were much appreciated. Tea was served during the Exhibition by the King's Daughters.

The prize given by the Branch for the best group of original drawings to be exhibited at the Peterborough Industrial Fair was won by Miss E Wadel, of Orono.

There were three executive meetings held during the year.

The Reading Club, in connection with the Association, was not as successful as regards the attendance, as it deserved to be. An excellent programme was arranged by the leader, Mrs. Palmer, who very kindly gave the first address on "The History of Art," from the earliest time." During the winter excellent papers were given on the representatives of the Flemish, Spanish, and French schools of art. The travelling library, secured from McGill University was a great help. It is to be regretted that more of the members do not avail themselves of/ner of this most enjoyable branch of the work of the Association in Peterborough.

MILLBROOK CENTRAL FAIR
A FINE EXHIBIT OF STOCK

Large Increase in the Number of Exhibits—Decrease in Attendance and Gate Receipts.

MANY SPLENDID HORSES

The good luck and good weather which have been the fortune of the officers and directors of the Millbrook Central Agricultural Society, failed this year. Ideal weather and large gate receipts have been the almost invincible record of this fair. Nothing but the cold, bleak, threatening nature of the weather on the fair day could have deterred the good farmers of Cavan, South Monaghan, Hope, Manvers and Emily from attending in large numbers, as has been their usual habit. The usual big crowd on the G.T.R. from Peterborough, Lindsay and Lakefield was also much smaller. Perhaps 2,500 would be a fair estimate of the number of visitors who passed through the gate. Last year fully 4,000 were present.

MAIN BUILDING.

In the main building there was a grand display of flowers, one of the finest shown in the district. The ladies' work display in the main building was also above the average and the housewives found that department of special interest. The north end of the building was crammed full of fine art, needle work, centres, cushions ottomans, quilts, etc.

Specimens of photography, paintings and framed pictures were also shown in large numbers.

W. D. Knight, the world's prize winner for the best horseshoes, made a display of his famous horse shoes in a glass case which attracted the attention of the horsemen.

There was a very creditable display of apples and other fruits, tomatoes, potatoes, beets, cucumbers, onions, mangolds, etc. White potatoes of mammoth size were shown in large quantities.

HORSES AND CATTLE.

In point of entries the exhibition was far in advance of last year. This was especially true of horses and cattle in which the showing made was a grand one. There were so many entries and the horses were of such a uniform degree of quality that the judges had their work cut out for them in making their awards. Nowhere is there such interest taken in the judging at at Millbrook and the judging ring was surrounded by hundreds of people during the afternoon.

Several herds of Aberdeen Angus cattle were shown and much interest taken in them. Also a fine display of Durhams, but few Jerseys.

In horses a number of interesting entries were made by Peterborough horsemen. The following are some of the principal awards in their respective classes:

Agricultural Horses, Best Team in Harness—1st J. Lewis, Charlecote; 2nd W. Roberts, Beaver Meads; 3rd H. Teaton, Cavan. There were ten entries for this event, making as fine an exhibition of agricultural horses as has ever been seen in this district.

Gentlemen's Turiout, Single Horse—1st Roland Deane, Peterborough; 2nd Jas. Bushnell, Peterborough; 3rd Noble Brown, Ross Mount.

One of the features of the Millbrook Exhibition is the horse racing, and yesterday was no exception to the rule. The directors have realized that nothing pleases a crowd so much as good races.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

William Lech & Sons Fur Exhibit.

Visitors at the Millbrook Fair had an opportunity, for the first time, of admiring a comprehensive display of high-grade furs, from the old established firm of William Lech & Sons, 413 George St., Peterborough. The public showed a keen appreciation in this display, not only because of its neatness and practical utility, but because of its seasonableness and the near approach of cold weather. As a direct result of this exhibit, it may be mentioned that a visitor who had inspected the furs in this exhibit, came to Peterborough Saturday morning and placed a substantial order with the firm for winter furs.

Some of the newest models, which the trend of fashion norms, were on display at this fur exhibit. Not only in fine fur garments, but in the artistic combinations of soft furry novelties, was the display an interesting one. There were many creations of the firm's own designers, which were decidedly new and unique. Some of the chief features in this display of fur were a handsome Persian lamb coat, a Norway seal coat, gentlemen's fur coats, muffs, in Alaska sable, lynx Persian lamb, mink and white and grey squirrel. Natty mink ties, and other furry neckwear, also beautiful specimens of fur robes, etc. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. Keith Lech, who was busy waiting upon the crowds who surged round this meritorious building.

"AT HOME" TO THEIR FRIENDS

Messrs. Lang & Maher, the "Daylight" clothiers of Peterborough, were "At Home" among many of their friends and customers at the Millbrook Fair. Representatives of this hustling firm were on the ground early Friday morning and erected their model exhibition annex and decorated it with a display of their clothing that it with a display of their clothing that solved the usual fall problem for the male sex. Winning clothes, cheerful looks—these go a good way to leave good impressions—and that is why young men crowded this exhibit and mentally took their measures of the natty suits and overcoats shown in fashion's newest vagaries. But if you would see all the fall models for 1909, see Lang & Maher's regular big exhibit—now in full swing at Nos. 409-411 George St., Peterborough.

This exhibit was highly praised by good judges and was well worth seeing from an educational standpoint. Of course, Mr. Jas. Lang was in attendance, renewing old acquaintances, and his assistant, Mr. Wesley, ushered in the crowds.

GRAFTON'S CLOTHING.

There are several good reasons to justify the firm of Grafton & Co., of Peterborough for continuing year by year to make a strong exhibit of their hand-tailored clothing at the Millbrook fair. Many of their best customers live in Cavan, Manvers, Hope and Emily, and have shown a preference for the Grafton make. The beautiful fit of Grafton's clothing at the shoulders and breast, the graceful lines and character of their models, the fine tailoring, the range of colours and patterns and their moderate prices, often lower than others, are reasons for advertising their clothing at the fairs. The success of this great clothing business has not come through exploiting "remarkable bargains," or through endeavouring to make men think they were a great deal more than their money's worth. It has come because any garment has stood the test of service, and permanent customers have been made thereby.

Mr. W. E. Conway, manager of the Peterborough shoe store, was on the grounds during the fair, while Mr. Herb. Conway took special charge of the exhibit. Throughout the fair grounds, the firm's attractive bulletins were displayed in profusion.

PATENT ROOFING.

Mr. L. S. Clarry, of Millbrook, represented the new Flintkote roofing on the fair grounds. This roofing is being introduced in many places for covering barns, houses, etc., as a substitute and as an improvement on shingles. Mr. Clarry is the local agent, and reports good sales.

OFFICERS OF THE SOCIETY.

Col. D. Sutton, President, Millbrook; Wm. Hannah, 1st Vice-President, Bethany; T. A. Kelly, 2nd Vice-President, Millbrook; C. H. Winslow, Millbrook.

Directors — R. Vance, Ida; W. L. Staples, Ida; W. T. Donaldson, S. Monaghan; George Berry, S. Monaghan; R. Walsh, Millbrook; A. T. Armstrong, Millbrook; Norm McGill, Cavan; Leonard Smith, Millbrook; W H. Lough, Ida; C. McNeil, Cavan; R. McCamus, Ida; J. L. Fair, S. Monaghan; W. S. Given, Millbrook; J. W. Hamilton, Millbrook; James Baptie, Springville; Col. George Syer, Millbrook.

ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Young Man Charged With Perjury Has Been Allowed Out On Bail

Last night some interest was aroused by the arrest of Robert H. Shepherd, on a charge of perjury. It will be remembered that R. H. Shepherd was one of the first witnesses called on behalf of the petitioner, Mr. Burnham, in the protest trial proceedings, and that he testified that he had been employed on behalf of Mr. Burnham by Messrs. Jas. Kennedy, ex-M.P., J. G. M. Wilson, Roland M. Waddell and W. A. Brundette, to act as a detective, to go to the Liberal Committee rooms as a friendly worker, gain information and report to these gentlemen. Yesterday, as it appears, a warrant was issued by Mr. Dumble, police magistrate, on the information of R. M. Waddell and J. G. M. Wilson for the arrest of R. H. Shepherd, on a charge of perjury, this consisiting in the statements mentioned, which the information alleges were wilfully and corruptly false.

The warrant, which was executed at 6 p.m., by P. C. Newhall, as Shepherd was passing down the east side of Water street, nearly opposite the police station, read as to the substantial part of it, as follows:

"That at the City of Peterborough on Monday, the 27th day of September, upon the trial of an election petition, held by the Hon. Mr. Justice McMahon, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Magee, presiding in which said election petition, John Hampden Burnham is petitioner, and James Robert Stratton is respondent, the said Robert H. Shepherd was duly sworn as a witness on behalf of the said petitioner, and then, and there upon his oath aforesaid, did falsely, wilfully and corruptly, upon his oath aforesaid in substance, and to the effect following that is to say that the said Robert Shepherd had been engaged or employed by James Kendry, John G. M. Wilson and William Arthur Brundrette, to go into the Liberal committee rooms during the election, which took place, for the purpose of electing a member of the House of Commons to represent the Riding of West Peterborough, under false pretences, and to act a false part, whereas in truth, and in fact the said Robert H. Shepherd never was employed by the said James Kendry, John G. M. Wilson and William Arthur Brundrette, for the purpose aforesaid, nor for any other purpose, at any time whereby the said Robert H. Shepherd did then and there commit wilful and corrupt perjury, contrary to the provisions of the criminal code."

There were two warrants issued by Mr. Dumble.

In the one of which a copy is given above the substance of the charge was as given in the other, the substance was as follows:

"Did wilfully and corruptly swear in substance and to the effect following, that is to say, that the said Robert H. Shepherd, on the 29th day of September, 1908, had been engaged by the said James Kendry and John G. M. Wilson to pretend to be a supporter of the said James Robert Stratton, and work in his committee rooms, and act on said Stratton's committee, and get all the information he could and supply such information to the said Wilson and Roland M. Waddell, whereas, etc."

The arrest was made at six o'clock, and at eight o'clock the accused appeared in the police court room, represented by Mr. D. O'Connell, and was admitted to bail, himself in $200, and as surety a married cheque of Mr. R. R. Hall was deposited with the Court.

Mr. Shepherd appeared before Magistrate Dumble in the police court this morning. The case was enlarged for one week, and the bail granted last night was renewed. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused.

"You do not elect nor plead," Mr. Gordon" replied the magistrate.

ANOTHER BAD FIRE

Sweeps Through Lumber Yards of Chew Bros., Midland—Thirteen Million Feet Destroyed.

SECOND IN TWO WEEKS

Midland, Oct. 2.—Fire, which broke out about 10.30 yesterday morning in a pile of lumber in Manley Chew's big yards at Dollartown, just outside the Midland limits, burned over 12 acres of yards and caused a loss of about $250,000, fairly well covered by insurance. About 13 million feet of lumber was destroyed.

Several employes of the mill saw the blaze when it was small, but it got ahead of them. A spark from the burner is supposed to have started it. The town fire engine, the mill pump, supplying two two-inch hose lines, and three tugs acting as fire boats were employed in fighting the flames, the hundred mill employes and scores of citizens assisting. Through their efforts the mill was saved.

The principal losers are: Manley Chew, about $30,000, to lumber, docks, transit, etc., insurance $7,500; Turner Lumber Co., Cochrane & Munro of Sudbury, E. B. Foss Co. of Bay City, Mich., and the Salvage Lumber Co.

Less than two weeks ago the lumber yards of Chew Bros., Midland, were fireswept, with loss of about $200,000.

Judge Curran Dead.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—Hon. J. J. Curran, justice of the Supreme Court of Quebec, died suddenly here yesterday. He was Solicitor-General under Sir John Thompson and under Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Judge Curran went to Europe for a three months' trip for the benefit of his health during the past summer, and returned about two weeks ago. The journey did not have the desired effect.

He leaves one son and two daughters. His son Frank was the Conservative candidate in St. Ann's for the Commons in a bye-election previous to the general.

Curran Bridge, one of the principal crossings of the Lachine Canal in the city, was built when the late judge was a Cabinet Minister. Disclosures in connection with the construction created a sensation at the time.

Laborites Elect Officers.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—The Canadian Federation of Labor will meet next year at Brantford. These officers were elected: President, B. W. Patterson, Ottawa; re-elected; vice-president, S. Bertrand, Quebec; secretary-treasurer, George Mercure, Ottawa; executive board: J. G. Tapp, Ottawa; T. C. Trenham, Brantford, and Omer Brunette, Quebec.

A resolution to forbid the discussion of religious, political, racial or denominational questions at the annual convention was submitted by Delegates Boidin and Gregoire of Quebec, but was strongly opposed, and was to report next year.

Hotelkeepers Fined $300.

Chatham, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Bechard, proprietress of the Aberdeen Hotel, and Peter Toulouse, proprietor of the Idlewilde, were each fined $300 and costs on charges of selling liquor after hours. Evidence was secured by three Government spies, Edgar Morden, Isaac Waldreck and Alfred Judge, who posed as apple buyers.

John Glassford, of the Glassford House, was dismissed. The spies swore that they obtained liquor at his place on Sunday, but several other witnesses swore positively that they were refused.

Burglar Caught In Act.

Guelph, Oct. 2—William Hendricks, from Detroit, was caught in the act of robbing the house of J. W. Lyon at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. He had only obtained a few trinkets when Policeman Greenway grabbed him as he made his exit out of a window. He pulled a knife and showed fight, but soon gave up.

FELL INTO AMBUSH

Fighting Was Very Fierce and Sanguinary—Majority of Sokel Jewis—Gen. Vicario; Three Officers and Forty-Six Men Are Killed — Troops Were Returning From a Reconnaissance.

Melilla, Morocco, Oct. 2.—A Spanish force from Melilan, reconnoitering Thursday in the direction of Sokel Jemis, encountered the Moors and met with a serious reverse. Gen. Diego Vicario, three other officers, and forty-seven men were killed and 182 men were wounded.

The division under Gen. Tovara, supported on the left by Gen. Marina's brigade and on the right by two squadrons of cavalry and a battery of artillery, had made a reconnaissance into the Beni Sniffrat territory, and it was on their return in the direction of Zeluan that the attack fell into the Moorish ambush and were attacked furiously. The fighting was very fierce and the Spaniards held their own until the arrival of reinforcements consisting of two companies of infantry and a battery of machine guns, with the aid of which, they succeeded in beating off the fanatical Moors, but at a heavy total in dead and wounded.

Inspectors Obtain Victor.

Rome, Oct. 2.—The King and Queen were motoring from Rome to Mont Cenis Thursday, and at the barrier were held up by the customs inspectors. Both Victor Emmanuel and the Queen were masked behind heavy automobile goggles, and could not be recognized. The inspectors, searching the car, found two cameras, and as these are prohibited within the fortification zone, they confiscated them.

They began a severe questioning of the King and Queen. Emmanuel answered the questions for a time, but the guards decided to hold the auto for examination by higher officials. Then the King removed his goggles. The royal couple were released, as soon as recognized, with the King's congratulations upon their faithful performance of duty.

Chinaman as Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 2.—The placing of a full-blood Chinaman as superintendent of a Presbyterian Sunday school has disrupted the school.

Yee Tang, a Christianized Chinaman, succeeded Edwin Gray as superintendent, a position the latter had held for twenty-six years. Yee Tang created consternation by announcing that he would not permit the Chinese to be taught individually by young women, as had been the case for years. He grouped the Chinese in lots of six or eight with elderly women or men teachers. The Chinese students then dropped out, there being only two in the Sunday school now, and many young women teachers, resenting the new ruling as a reflection on them, have left the church.

Bank Robber Caught.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 2.—After a month's confinement in the Cambria County Jail at Ebensburg, a prisoner, who when arrested as stealing the "blind baggage" on Pennsylvania Railroad train No. 25, gave his name as John Dumbeski, confessed that his real name is Wladyslaw Dymansky, and that he is one of the trio of young foreigners who on July 8 held up J. A. Templeton, manager of the branch Bank of Nova Scotia at Rainy River, Ont., and escaped with nearly $10,000.

NURSES' EVIDENCE

Nurses Wanless and Cummings of the General Hospital, Toronto, Complete Chain of Evidence Against Mrs. Turner by Positively Identifying Tag Placed on Infant at Birth — Another Charge.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—With the positive identification of the tag found upon the body of the infant picked up beside the New York Central tracks by Nurse Wanless who wrote it at the General Hospital here, and by Nurse Cummings who attached it to the child's back at the time of its birth, all doubt as to the identity of the body of the infant found on the New York Central railway tracks was done away at the inquest into the death of the child at the morgue last night.

Then, also was told the story of the body by the fragment of the story of the negotiations of Miss Maude Turner with Mrs. Authers for the adoption of the infant and the story of the arrest.

Frank Fleming of Lewisham, chairman of the T.Y.C., said that while he was at his post watching the train along which the tracks run, he saw a parcel which he afterwards found to contain the body of an infant, come tumbling down the bank at a culvert. He called Coroner Scott.

On cross-examination, Mr. Robinette tried to make Conductor Reynish's identification by asking if the trains were not very crowded at this season, but the witness said that he had heard that there were very few people on that train.

Miss Mary Walker, daughter of Mrs. Andrew Walker, 63 Peter street, stewardess on the Cayuga, testified that she had traveled to Lewiston on the Chippewa on Thursday, Sept. 16, with her mother and two Taylor boys. They met the prisoner at the dock. Her mother introduced her as Mrs. Miller. She was carrying a parcel like a shoe box, only longer. She said it was the best and said that she would pass through the customs as such, though she said it was pretty heavy. The witness rode on the N.Y.C. train to Buffalo, and Mrs. Miller got off at the Falls. She had the parcel in the train. They had discussed the Kinrade case on the way over. Mrs. Miller said that she was going over to get some papers from a flask. She said that the pillow had come to her before she had read of the case in the newspapers. Mrs. Miller did not wear glasses and had remarked that she had a headache because she had left them behind.

Cecil Taylor, who was with the party, corroborated Miss Walker's story.

Nurse Gamble said that the prisoner had come to the hospital Saturday morning and returned Sunday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock and took the infant away in a baby carriage, in which there was already another baby.

The inquest was adjourned till Thursday evening, when it is expected that it will be finished.

Hamilton Grows Slowly.

Hamilton, Oct. 2.—The assessment returns given out yesterday came as a great shock to those who believed that the city was going ahead by leaps and bounds. An increase of only 302 in population is shown, which makes the population now 67,328. The assessment shows an increase of only $307,288, as compared to nearly $4,000,000 last year. The increased assessment at present standing will add only about $30,000 to revenue. Wards two and five dropped off in population, but ward seven showed an increase of 451, and ward one added 344. There is a decrease of 123 in the number of children between 5 and 16 years. The total assessment amounts to $41,166,736.

The entire march was under orders from the War Department.

CORNER-STONE LAID.

Earl Grey Inaugurates Alberta's Legislative Buildings.

Edmonton, Oct. 2.—In a flood of Alberta sunshine from a sky of brilliant azure Earl Grey in the presence of an impressive gathering of western Canada statesmen and surrounded by an imposing array of military and a great throng of an enthusiastic populace "well and truly laid" the corner-stone of Alberta's magnificent new legislative and executive buildings.

The day was just such a day of beautiful weather as that of four years and a month ago, when His Excellency officially bestowed upon the province her autonomy.

The city streets were brilliantly illuminated the night before on the occasion of the reception of Earl Grey, and a great throng of holiday seekers from the early hours of the forenoon until the time set for the opening of the ceremonies in the afternoon, paraded the gaily-decorated thoroughfares.

In front of the Yale Hotel, where the vice-regal platform was erected, the wide street was packed with a throng of humanity. When His Excellency reappeared on the balcony the cheering broke out afresh.

Earl Grey replied briefly to the address and cheers, expressing his gratitude at receiving the address and the loyal welcome which had been accorded him by the citizens. His Excellency then reviewed the procession.

PITTSBURG TEAM THE BEST IN BIG WORLD'S SERIES.

C. SMNITZ HANS WAGNER FRED CLARK JOE MILLER

By Tip Wright

I believe Pittsburg will win the world's series.

In my opinion the Pirates are better than any team in the American league. Fred Clarke has a team which right now is stronger than the Cubs were last season when they showed up Detroit, winner of the American league pennant, in the world's series.

Two months ago the National league winners were not the same team which will go into the interleague struggle. Wonders have been worked in 60 days, and I consider the Pittsburg team 30 per cent. stronger than it was before Third Baseman Byrne joined. Third base was the weak point in the defence, and it has been strengthened.

I dont' go much on "dope" as they call base ball statistics, but thousands do. So many men play "safe" for the sake of their records that very often the most valuable men are down in the averages, while performers show high.

This, in fielding records because the better men go after everything within possible reach. are credited with errors by the scorers on almost impossible chances. And while consistent hitters naturally rank high, it is the who can walk up to the plate with ners on and smash the ball for who is more valuable than the hitter who falls down in a pinch.

I have never seen a capable of doing this as the How many times this year has scored run after run with two out? How often have they defeated a batting rally when seemingly hardset team to hold in check the National league.

Pittsburg has the great field in the National league. Clarke and Wilson have retired 150 more batters than any other This alone denotes great defensive strength. Clarke and Leach got more than any two outfielders in the league and Wilson is the only right fielder who has averaged two putouts a game. On top of this the three nail many a drive that would go for two and three bases in any other outfield.

This boy Wilson in right may be compared to Ty Cobb. He is a great hitter, base runner and fielder, and his throwing excels that of The Peach.

Here's another little thing denoting the strength of Pittsburg. Of the first 14 pitchers in the National league seven are Pirates. The greatest backstop in the game to-day is George Gibson, who, unless injured, will catch all the games in the world's series.

The batting strength of the Pittsburg team lies in the ability of the players to hit right or left-handed pitchers with equal ease. But two of the team bat left-handed, and of these Fred Clarke is the best left-hander against a southpaw pitcher in the business. Pittsburg excels in extra base hitting.

In Wilson, Miller, Byrne, Clarke and Wagner, the Pirates have a quintet of base runners who rank well up. When it comes to the finer points of the game, the team is there strong. Fred Clarke has his men drilled in every artifice known to base ball. They play the hit-and-run with a nicety appreciated by the student. They work the delayed steal to confusion of backstops. They steal third as readily as second. They work together perfectly.

I don't imagine there will be much base stealing on George Gibson. National leaguers haven't trifled much with that whip of his this season, and I don't look for anyone running wild with him back of the windpad when the world's championship games start.

DETROIT IS STRONG AT BAT AND ON THE BASE P

(By Tip Wright)

So it's to be Detroit and Pittsburg in the post season games for the world's base ball championship. Pick Pittsburg to win, or, if you must bet on the Tigers copper the bet.

Detroit made a grand fight for the third straight pennant, and deserved to win it. While the team looked like 30 cents Mex in two world's series against the Cubs. I believe this year will witness telling of a different story.

I look to see the Tigers put up an awful battle for the interleague pennant. I don't figure they can beat Pittsburg, but that they will do better than in the two series they have played. They couldn't do much worse to tell the truth.

If Mullin and Summers are in condition they ought to win their games, but I do not think they can be expected to repeat in the face of the Pirates' batting ability. And it may be that Jennings worked his pet pitchers so hard in the closing days of the American League race that they are stale. If so, goodbye, Detroit.

One thing in favour of the Tigers is that they don't have any pitching phenoms like Mordecai Brown or Christy Mathewson to stack up against. Despite the fact that seven of the Pirate pitchers finished among the first 14, none of them are sensations. They are steady and reliable—not wonders.

And how these Tigers can clout! Don't overlook this. Any time during a game they are apt to pull off a batting and hammer themselves into

This batting ability, with the great bases team running, is apt heavily for Detroit. In addition Detroit has in Moriarty, Bush, and Delahanty base runners better the average. Detroit won the pennant the path.

Detroit goes into the series than it did against Chicago. Moriarty, Delahanty and Bush are than the men they replaced, both and in the field.

But Detroit's pitchers lack the the Pittsburg battery men. Jennings had to depend upon a few, Clarke had several men to do the work, and the team came home bit, while the Tigers were played ragged edge at the windup.

Because the team did not have a catcher, Detroit looked like a minor team against the Cubs. Kling, Payne and Schmidt. Stanage the Tiger star is not the catchin' George son of the Tigers is.

With Detroit against the Pirates I for a four games to two victory for National leaguers. The batting and ing strength of the American champions, from the figures now able, are:

DETROIT'S BATTING STRENGTH

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

your wife to go away because did not want her to hear the Wataffair?"

os, sir."

s. Leason, wife of the complainwas the next witness called, said he saw a letter sent by her hus- to Mrs. Watson. She snapped it his hand. He told her that Mrs. n had written him, asking for flurs. She did not feel annoyed ming that her husband had rs. Watson the medley. She was angry at him for giving the notes to Parcells. Her husband wouldn't go to see Mr. Ghent because he was afraid. Instead he went to Norwood. Witness admitted to Mr. Kerr that she was angry when she learned the conotents of the letter from her husband to Mrs. Watson. She had the information laid against Parcells.

"Was your husband most afraid of you or of the arrest?" asked Mr. Kerr.

"He was more afraid of the arrest," witness answered.

Mrs. Leason said that her husband was yet afraid of Mr. Watson. On the night of the day of the visit of Mr. Parcells he would not allow her to put the light out.

She did not think it strange for her husband to address Mrs. Watson as "dear sister." People often addressed each other in that way. She had a neighbour who always addressed her in that way.

Mr. Harry Andrews, school teacher in the school near the Leason home, said last Wednesday Leason brought three notes for him to fill in. Each one was for fifty dollars. They were in favour of George Parcells. Leason seemed to be in a hurry.

Mr. S. S. Joyce of Havelock said that the defendant and complainant came to his office last Thursday. Mr. Leason asked him to write him a receipt for $200, which he did. Parcells signed it.

T. J. Wright, manager of the Bank of Toronto at Havelock said that Parcells came to the bank last Wednesday wanting three notes cashed. They were payable to George Albert Parcells, but they were not properly endorsed. Parcells explained what the notes were for. Before they were cashed Mrs. Leason came in and forbade him to cash them.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

antly made out," said the counsel for the petitioner in commencing his argument, which lasted for an hour, and which was devoted principally to a tirade over the action of the respondent's solicitors in securing declarations from the witnesses that were to be heard. He explained that in regard to the charges made the petitioner was required to give particulars at an early stage of the proceedings. These particulars had been given and Mr. Du Vernet claimed that it had been shown that these men had been seen and wherever possible declarations had been secured from them in order to handicap the petitioner. Mr. Du Vernet further alleged that in some cases intimidation had been used to get men to sign affidavits in order to discredit the evidence that they were to give before the court.

"In all the history of election trials," said Mr. Du Vernet, "never was there such an existing state of affairs. There have been from 50 to 100 declarations secured. Is it a wonder that there is a difficulty of bringing evidence before the court."

Mr. Du Vernet submitted that it either had to be decided that the witnesses that said they received money were perjuring themselves, or else that their story was true.

Mr. Du Vernet then went over the evidence, submitting that his case had been proven. He was interrupted several times by their Lordships.

"If Mr. Leary had been, as alleged, paying out $2 bills in that room," commented Mr. Justice McMahon," it would have got noised around and that room would have been swarmed."

The Case for the Respondent.

Mr. Watson made an eloquent and impressive argument.

"From what we have heard," he said, "we would be inclined to think that we have been kept here for a week for the purpose of listening to a long tirade, to a declaration of abuse and slander against honourable and respectable citizens. They are not in the slightest degree founded upon the evidence before your Lordships. If we did not know our learned friend so well, I would say that they were uttered for ulterior purposes; used and uttered as an assassin uses his knife. There is no serious controversy in the evidence. The case must inevitably and necessarily fail. My learned friend has introduced some few witnesses who are immigrants from London, and whose appearance and evidence has been a most pitiable exhibition of the lowest type of the most degenerate humanity."

"We have Mr. Gates, who has been already condemned by the Court as unworthy of credit and belief; a man without honour; almost too contemptible to be spoken of, and an insult to the dignity of the court. His conduct and acts are the base of this petition. This witness is evidently in charge of the witnesses on behalf of the petitioner, paying them, and approaches were made to him for the purpose of obtaining the evidence of a bunch of English immigrants. I am glad to be able to say that no imputation can be cast on my friend Mr. Moore, in this connection. The conditions have arisen through over zeal and entire ignorance of the petitioner, who was the paymaster, and must have done this deliberately. Payment for evidence offers the most serious objection, and the taking of declarations is always objected to. It was manifest to the respondents that the petitioner was proceeding through this particular class of witnesses, evidently to be supported by a combination, and in order to protect one's self against that class of people it is the duty of every honest citizen to protect in every possible way his honour, of himself and his family. No one has suggested that anything improper was done. No suggestion has been made of any bribe to these witnesses with the exception of what was given by the petitioner to Mr. Gates for the purpose of obtaining his statement under oath."

"It is not possible that your Lordships can find anything else but the gravest doubt and uncertainty about the plaintiff's case. It is full of the gravest suspicion and the gravest doubt. It goes without saying that this applies to the person, Gates, and it applies with as much force, I submit, to the others. Ashley is a man who would not merely sell his vote, thus indicating that he is a man wholly without any honour or sense of duty, or obligation to himself, or others, but who was willing to make a false oath if he were paid the sum of $200. He stands before your Lordships as a willing perjurer for money."

Mr. Watson, going over the evidence briefly, but emphatically, said that Alsept stood before the court an admitted perjurer, and the same was true of some of the other witnesses. The counsel for the respondent submitted that these witnesses did not perjure themselves in making the affidavits, but rather perjured themselves before their Lordships.

Mr. Watson pointed out that reliable witnesses had sworn that Mr. Leary was not present at all when the witnesses for the petitioner had sworn that they received money from him. He submitted, too, that there was no evidence to substantiate the statement that there was a row of men in front of the east room of the Liberal committee rooms on election day.

"It is unnecessary and idle to take up the time of the court," said Mr. Watson, in conclusion. "The fact is the committee rooms were used in an entirely different way. They were open to every one and no such condition of affairs, as described, existed."

The court then adjourned until this morning.

ELECTION PROTEST COLLAPSES

$5 or even for a lesser sum. That is my individual opinion of the man."

"He believed Gates would wish to have it revealed that when people were going into that room there was a sort of freemasonry, an "open sesame," there, that when the people passed out the pass word was "You bet" indicating that they had been paid a sum of money and authorizing any who so desired to go in in order to obtain money in that room.

"Now, Ashley says that he got a note from Mr. Kingscote who is said to have been a letter carrier as connected with the Post Office in this city. When he got it, he says that Kingscote never intimated that it was connected with money but merely an introduction to Mr. Leary. As far as he understood from Kingscote it was merely to entitle him to recognition as a member of the Liberal party. He says that he got to the committee rooms at 4 o'clock, that he saw Leary there, that he was asked his name and if he had voted and that he said that he had not. That Mr. Leary took from his pocket a wad of bills, selected $2 from it, put it on the table and put a card board box over it, turned his back to enable him to pick up the money, that he Ashley took it up and went directly out of the room. Ashley says that it was meant for him because it was put there in that way. He says that he would resent being offered money for his vote and would not take money for his vote although he did not say to Leary, "If you are placing money there for the purpose of inducing me to vote for a candidate I won't take it." Instead he took it and went away. Now what is Mr. Ashley's position? He never spoke to Mr. Stratton about it, never thought of such a thing until in some way he had a communication with Gates. Then came his offer to make an affidavit for $200.

"When Mr. Davidson and Mr. Leary came into Mr. Hall's office on that occasion Mr. Davidson was told that Mr. Gates had claimed that he had received $5 from Mr. Davidson and $2 from Mr. Leary. Both denied it." Mr Davidson said that as far as he was concerned he would not give them 10 cents. That was the proper stand for any one to take who had not been guilty of the offence charged and the same stand was taken by Mr. Leary, when it was made known to him.

"Now Ashley himself says that when he was taken to Mr. Hall's office he was asked to take a declaration and says that he was to get $2. A remarkable circumstance that he was to get $2 for making an affidavit which if he did make he said that he was to have got $200 for. Both seemed to be willing. Gates if he got $400 and Ashley if he got $200 to leave the country and that was Gates desire to go to British Columbia or California if he got that amount of money. "I don't think that I will deal at any greater length with these two cases." The alteration has been met by an overwhelming mass of evidence and I dismiss these charges, leaving my learned brother to deal with the rest."

Mr. Justice Magee, in dealing with the remainder of the charges, said that he agreed in the fullest extent with the opinion of his learned brother, in connection with Gates. Ashley, he considered not so low, but he had evidently not had enough stamina to resist the influence of Gates.

In cases of this kind His Lordship remarked that it was impossible, as a rule, to find witnesses of a high moral character, stating that they had been bribed, and consideration had to be made for the fact that men in poor circumstances might have been tempted to take money for their votes, when in other circumstances they would not have done so. However, when witnesses of this kind had been introduced it was to be expected that corroborative evidence must be introduced in order to give weight to their testimony. In the present case many reputable witnesses had flatly denied these witnesses.

His Lordship took up the five charges, one by one, dealing with Butler first, and following with Williams, Harland, Pope, and Alsept. He went into the evidence in all these cases very carefully and exhaustively, pointing out the many discrepancies that existed and the utter unreliability of the nature of some of the evidence. He thought that it had been abundantly proven that Mr. Leary was absent at the time when it was stated that he had been paying some of these witnesses, and that the nature of the evidence of some of the witnesses was utterly unreliable.

"I have no hesitation," His Lordship remarked, in conclusion, "in saying, as the evidence stands here, that it would be improper to do anything else but dismiss these charges."

"I thoroughly coincide with my learned brother," remarked Mr. Justice McMahon.

As their Lordships concluded there was a moment of absolute silence.

It was broken abruptly, and to the majority of the attendance in the court room, in a most surprising way.

Mr. Du Vernet, K.C., chief counsel for the petitioner, rose to his feet, and addressed the bench.

"In view of your Lordships' ruling," he said, "I am afraid I would be only wasting the time of the court and the petitioners's means in proceeding further with the charges."

"I ask that the petition be dismissed without costs."

"My learned friend spoke to me last evening," announced Mr. G. H. Watson, chief counsel for Mr. Stratton and stated on behalf of the petitioner that he considered that he had presented the strongest case that could be presented and that if these present charges failed in the opinion of your Lordships he would advise that the petition be dismissed without costs.

"At the same time having in view the expenditure the hearing of the cross-petition would involve, I ask that the cross-petition be dismissed without costs.

Court was then dismissed and the case that has taken the attention of the bench for a week was at end.

THE PETITION COLLAPSES

The petition entered by Mr. J. Hampden Burnham against the return of Hon. J. R. Stratton, as representative of West Peterborough, ingloriously collapsed this morning—vanished into thin air, or rather remained what it appeared to be from the beginning—wind. The sword of Damocles, as Mr. Burnham and his friends regarded the petition, which has been suspended over Mr. Stratton's head for nearly a year, fell with an edgeless thud.

Hon. Mr. Stratton has reason to regard the result as a triumph and a vindication. It was felt that the protest was not based on the lofty ground of morality assumed by the petitioner, Mr. Burnham. It was felt that the protest was inspired more by feelings of disappointed ambition and revenge, than a conviction of reasonable grounds for entering the petition. It was felt from the beginning that no stone would be left unturned to compass the ends sought. A reckless profusion of incoherent, dubious and irrelevant charges was piled up, and it was felt that the city was ransacked for desperate material that could be turned to the purposes of the petitioner.

That these estimates of the character of the protest were not unfounded, is amply borne out by the result of the trial, and the adjudged character of the testimony tendered and given, as concretely and forcibly expressed in the brief words of Hon. Mr. Justice McMahon, when, in delivering judgment dismissing the petition, he said "the foundation of the petition was laid by Gates." Gates was the man whom Mr. Burnham purchased with the sum of $50 for evidence—Gates was the man who was driven from the witness box by Justice McMahon as a cold blooded liar on oath, whose word was unworthy of the slightest credence. Gates was the man who engineered "the bunch." Justice Magee declared that "Gates had control of Ashley," and referred to "the bunch" as a "group consisting of Ashley and his friends."

It was natural that a protest founded on fraud—founded on Gates, who was introduced as a purchased pander and kicked out as an utterly untruthful man, should meet the fate it did meet; should collapse as a house of cards borne down by the inherent weight of its own flimsy and intangible material.

It was wise and prudent in the counsel for Mr. Burnham, to abandon the petition at its very threshhold, for the further its progress, the greater would become the farcial character of the contention set up. It was fortunate for the petitioner and his friends that the abandonment of the petition carried with it the withdrawal of the counter petition, for it is known that its prosecution would have revealed methods of corruption and corrupt acts that would pale into insignificance the sinister methods employed to procure [illegible], as revealed in the beginning of the discredited and abandoned petition. The proven methods, employed by some members of the "party of purity" in engineering the protest, may naturally be regarded as a fitting sequel to the methods employed in the election contest. We should hereafter hear less hypocritical assumption of political purity and righteousness from the mouth of the man and a section of his party who have at once given the most pitiable exhibition of incompetency and clumsiness, and cynical demonstration of their belief in the satanic policy that the end justifies the means.

THE INEVITABLE HAPPENS

The Shuberts will offer Charles Cherry in "The Bachelor," Clyde Fitch's latest comedy at the Grand Opera House, on Friday evening next, for the first time in this city. "The Bachelor" was first produced at the Maxine Elliott Theatre, New York, last spring, where it ran for over six months, later being removed to the Whitney, Chicago. The comedy has as its central figure a business man, who having reached the thirties thinks himself a bachelor of the "old type," because he believes himself immune from marital entanglements. In his office he has a stenographer, a bright young girl, pretty, witty and winsome. Of course the inevitable happens She loves him and uses her charms to bring him to propose. He is blind to his fondness for having her near him his own affection for her and excuses on the ground of his friendly interest and his appreciation of her capabilities. He is brought to a proposal, however, rather against his will. She accepts, then comes to doubt the motive which prompted his reposal, refuses to remain engaged and then he awakens to the realisation that he loves her and must have her with him. The wooing and winning of her forms the closing scene in the comedy which is admirably fashioned, brilliantly written and charmingly presented.

Mr. Cherry, as the bachelor, has a role which permits his employing effectively his manly, healthy personality and his easy, finished technical methods as an actor.

MONEY IN POULTRY

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. A. R., Queen's Co., [illegible]

There is money in poultry if the right people have hold of it and business. If people take an interest in any vocation and are determined to make it pay, they generally succeed. We have found poultry raising a very pleasant way to earn some money. We keep about 80 hens. We like some of them and try to make them comfortable in every respect. We like to surprise them with something, we are very fond of turnips, cabbages, potatoes sliced up. It is a treat to hang up a cabbage on the wall in the hen house, so that the hens find it necessary to jump up for each mouthful. We planted a good sized patch for their exclusive use last year, and we were paid for our trouble.

I raised quite a lot of chickens last year, but more than half were cockerels. Those I killed and sold in the market. It is a good plan to fatten and kill the old hens in March. I set one hen in June on 16 eggs. She had 16 chicks and proved to be an admirable mother. Good attendance, a variety of food, milk and plenty of grit is the way to persuade Biddy to fill the egg basket. It certainly pays to attend to them properly, when eggs sell from 24c to 35c a dozen.

Poultry raising is women's work. As a general rule, men do not take much interest in it. They pay more attention to their pigs, sheep, horses, etc. But some women succeed admirably in the business and, besides having pin money, they buy all the groceries with the egg money. I know one farmer's wife who just loves her handsome flock of hens, almost as if they were children. She always keeps them supplied with fresh clean water, and never allows them to drink frozen water in winter. She feeds them regularly and tries to make them comfortable in every way possible. And when the neighbor's hens stop laying, her's lay straight along, and her customers know they can depend on her word, and she always offers for sale fresh eggs only, and sells them readily.

We believe that from 50 to 60 hens pay better than a large number. If they are overcrowded they are more liable to disease. Ventilation should be supplied, for impure air invites disease. The key note to success in the poultry business is—keep the hens busy." The hen house must be kept clean and the fowls should have a varied diet. Some wet and a mash every morning. At noon, they should have some vegetables either cabbage or turnips raw. In the evening give them a good meal of oats or wheat. And they must be supplied with grit, and some sand and clay, for their dust bath. To keep them free from lice dust them once a week with insect powder or sulphur. The Wyandottes are good general purpose fowls though they are determined sitters. I have some Minorcas. They are non-sitters, excellent layers.

SEASONABLE POULTRY POINTERS

From Farm and Dairy.

Hy. Glendinning, Ontario Co., Ont.

This is the [illegible] of the year that the henhouse should be looked after. See that all broken windows are repaired, so that the fowls will not be subjected to draughts of cold damp air. Put all perches in repair. Use coal oil liberally in the cracks in the walls and [illegible] to destroy mites, and give every part of the hen house a good spraying with a whitewash made of fresh lime to which there is added a quantity of crude carbolic acid. See that no old hens are allowed to go into winter quarters, as they are sure to prove to be boarders.

If any of the fowls show signs of scabby legs, apply coal oil to the parts. If many are affected with scabs, it is a good plan to have a shallow vessel with coal oil in it at the entrance, so that the fowls will be compelled to walk through it every time they go out or come into the house.

I used to be continually tired; now I am strong and well—Miller's Compound Iron Pills did it.

DAIRY'S CONVENTION

From Farm and Dairy.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Dairymen's Association of Ontario held recently in Toronto it was decided to accept the very kind invitation of the city of St. [illegible] to hold the 43rd annual convention and winter dairy exhibition in that city. Committees were appointed and preliminary arrangements concluded. Several important matters were passed, copies of which were sent to the Domision Department of Agriculture, and to the management of the Canadian National Exhibition. The judges of cheese are Messrs. W. W. Gray, Jas. Brisbin and Robt. Johnston. The judges of butter will be Messrs. J. B. Muir, [illegible] Steinhoff, and Jas. Diffin. Those present were Geo. A. Putnam, director of dairy instruction; J. J. Parkinson, president; Jno. H. Scott, 1st vice-president; Wm. Waddell, 2nd vice-president; D. A. Dempsey, 3rd vice-president; and directors, J. N. Paul, S. E. Facey, S. R. Wallace, [illegible] H. McKennie, W. S. Stocks, and [illegible]herne, sec.-treas.

The programme committee met in the secretary's office, London, when a very interesting and instructive programme was outlined, which it is hoped will not only interest the cheese and butter makers but also the patrons of these factories and creameries, and everyone interested in dairying.

In addition to the $960 offered by the association in cash prizes to exhibitors of cheese and butter at the winter dairy exhibition, a large list of valuable special prizes have been donated by: Heller and Mera Co., New York, $15 in cash; R. M. Ballantyne Limited, Stratford, and C. H. Rawlinson & Co., Ingersoll, each one case of Hansens' Reanet Extract and cheese color; The J. B. Ford Co., Wyandotte, Mich., two handsome gold watches; The Canadian Salt Co., Windsor, $30 in cash; The Western Salt Co., Moorestown, four barrels of Purity Dairy Salt; the Imperial Bank of Canada, a silver cup; the Cheese Buyers' Trophy, consisting also of a silver cup.

The patrons of cheese and butter factories were not forgotten, the association donating $100 in cash prizes, and Ryrie Bros., Toronto, a silver and bronze medal to the patrons sending the greatest amount of milk to cheese factories and butter fat to creameries during the season of 1909.

The coming convention should be a success as the city of St. Thomas is situated in the centre of one of the best dairy districts in Western Ontario. Let everyone interested help to make this 43rd annual convention the best in its history. Dairying is the most important branch of Ontario agriculture. For prize lists and information write the secretary, F. Herns, London.

THE MAKER AND HIS PATRONS

From Farm and Dairy.

A maker strengthens himself and makes his position surer by coming in direct touch with his patrons as much as possible. When tied up in the factory during the making season a maker has little opportunity to visit his patrons. After the factory closes for the season he has ample time for such work.

The visiting of patrons is frequently postponed till a few weeks before the factory opens in the spring. The visits at that time are mostly hurried and are more in the nature of a canvass for milk by the manufacturer or maker. The work of the coming season is rarely discussed, little information is given about the care of the milk, and nothing very much is accomplished in the way of bettering the milk supply or improving the relations between patrons and makers generally.

It would pay makers to visit their patrons in the fall, when the work of the season is over. Everything is fresh in the memory and the quality of the milk received from each patron can be discussed and information given, if necessary, as to how it may be improved the following season. If a patron has any grievance a remedy can be sought during the winter. I a patron is left to nurse his grievance during the winter somepetitor may come along in the interval, and the maker lose a good customer. This is how new factories are formed adjacent to existing ones. Patrons often have grievances, sometimes real, sometimes imaginary. If left alone, and no explanation is received from the maker, these grievances sometimes grow to large proportions, whereas if the maker would drop in on these patrons everything might be explained to their satisfaction, and a good customer of the factory retained. Otherwise a small grievance may develop into a mutiny against the maker and the factory, resulting in a competitive factory being erected, the business disorganized, and what had been a paying investment, ruined.

There are, of course, people who are always looking for a grievance. These are hard to manage, and a factory is often better without them than with them. Generally speaking, however, the majority of patrons who have grievances are open to reason, and if visited in a friendly way by the maker and the grievances discussed, they will soon disappear. At any rate a visit will do good and not harm, and the sooner it is made after the factory closes the better; and it will pay to visit all patrons, whether they have a grievance or not.—J. W. W.

This is one of the Edison Co.'s best dramas. It tells a story of how children are worked to death in factories in large cities, where men should be employed to do the work. E. F. Mason & Co. Lose Entire Stock Of Their Lower Store

By a Severe Fire at an Early Hour on Sunday Morning—The Fire Brigade Given a Severe Test and Worked Well.

OVERCOME BY SMOKE

An early Sunday morning fire that broke out in E. F. Mason's lower store gave Chief Howard and his men the hardest struggle since the paid brigade was organized. When they arrived on the scene a few minutes after Night Watchman Fisher had sent in the alarm at 3.15 a.m. smoke was pouring from the two cellar windows up through the grates and the interior of the store was a veritable inferno. The heat was intense even then, the fire, which apparently had its origin in the cellar, in the centre of the store, had eaten its way through the floor, and the flames were working their way to the front and back of the store. Smoke was also appearing from the grates in front of several of the adjoining stores, showing that the fire had been in progress for some time and the smoke had found its way into other cellars.

The conditions were anything but cheering to the brigade, as they hurriedly connected the hose to the neighbouring hydrants on Simcoe and George Sts. The seriousness of the blaze only served to rouse Chief Howard's fighting blood, and, breaking the front door, the first stream was soon playing on the interior. The smoke and heat was overpowering and the men, wearing thick, woollen mits, would run from the sidewalk into the building, and, keeping the water on the floor, endured the conditions for a minute or two, and then rush out again for a gasp of air. This was repeated again and again by the section that had been detailed to the attack through the door.

Into The Cellar.

In the meantime the Chief had the two grates pulled up, the cellar windows torn out and two lines of hose were taken into the cellar. Several of the men had been sent around to the rear and, successfully forcing an entrance, had two lines of water pouring into the inferno, which crackled and seethed as if it meant to envelop the whole block. Five lines were then playing on the fire, cooling the ceiling and walls of the store proper, and throwing volumes of water into the flames, which, for a time, "laughed to scorn the power of man." The firemen were working under the most trying circumstances, and they certainly were put to the test. Chief Howard was flitting around at the various points of attack, seeing to the welfare of the men relieving them from the smoke and heat in order that none would be overcome. It may be here stated that the lectures they received on how to protect themselves when in a smoke-filled building served them in good stead. It was feared that the flames might lick an entrance into the adjoining stores through the stove pipe holes, furnaces pipes, or other openings that it was believed might be found in the walls.

An Explosion.

Firemen Jos. Denpo and Bruce Menzies had an experience that they will not forget for some time. They were working on the first floor at the front of the building when an explosion, the cause of which the Chief is at a loss to explain, blew them bodily out of the door, leaving them scrambling on the sidewalk. Fortunately they were uninjured, but for a few slight bruises and a scorching from the fiery gust that resulted. Another feature of the blaze occurred at the rear when Assistant Chief George Grange was overcome by the smoke and heat, and had to be carried out into the lane. He had lost consciousness and Dr. Greer, on being summoned, ordered him to be removed to the hospital in the Dan Spence ambulance.

The Chief Laid Off.

The men were all beginning to feel the effects of the smoke after an hour and a half's steady work, and Chief Howard was himself transported to dreamland. He had been into Millburn's jewellery store keeping watch on the walls, and although everything was all right the place was filled with smoke through which the Chief had made his way. He got safely out near the door when he was overcome and fainted away. He was carried out on to the sidewalk, and, after some time, revived, and was able to continue the struggle.

Under Control.

It was not until about seven o'clock that the fiery element showed signs of giving up the ghost, but it was not entirely subdued until nine o'clock. The flames had not reached Richard Hall's store on the north, and Millburn's, on the south, was also untouched, although all the stores in the immediate neighbourhood were more or less clouded with smoke.

The firemen kept close watch on the building throughout Sunday. An examination of Mason's store to-day shows that the joists on which the ground floor was laid, have been burned from front to rear, except for about twenty feet at each end. Some forty by twenty feet of the floor in the centre of the building, has fallen in and the most of it was swallowed up in the flames. Counters, bins, wall cases, etc., went down with it, carrying soap, sugar, and the other goods that were in that part of the store. The salvage, it is believed, will be small, as the goods that were protected from smoke suffered from the heat.

The Cause of the Fire.

There is not a furnace or stove of any kind in the place. There is no fire about the store. It is heated by the boilers under the C. P. R. ticket office and it is lighted by electricity and only last spring it was re-wired, and inspected. When the store staff left Saturday night about midnight everything was in good order and no sign of smoke or fire was noticed.

The men were all on duty to-day, and while they still felt the effects of their experience, they were in working condition. Assistant Chief Grange was able to be around yesterday, having recovered from the effects of the smoke. He had been working steadily in the cellar at the rear for three hours, and was standing in four or five feet of water, when he succumbed. Stock in the cellars of Richard Hall & Son and the Kingan Hardware Company's stores, has been damaged, the exact extent being unknown to-day. Mr. Mason's loss is about $8,000, half of which is covered by insurance.

Hip Broken In A Simple Manner
Taking Rug Off A Clothesline

Miss Mary Finn, Chamberlain St., met with an accident on Saturday evening which resulted in her right thigh being broken. She was taking a rug off a wire in the yard when in some strange manner she lost her balance and fell, fracturing the neck of the femur.

This is one of the most severe cases of this kind and although Miss Finn came through the operation successfully it will be some time before she is able to be around again. Her friends will regret to learn of the mishap she has suffered, for though it occurred under very simple circumstances it is nevertheless of a serious character.

Poured More Than 1200 Tons
Of Water Into Mason's Store

The Examiner has received the following very interesting information from Chief Howard of the fire brigade:

According to the book governing hydraulics, the following is the amount of water used at the Mason fire yesterday morning, calculated in the following manner:

Pressure at the hydrant, 85 lbs.
Average length of line 300 feet.
Pressure at the nozzle, 45.
Number of gallons of water discharged per minute from each line, 325 gallons.
Number of lines in use, five.
Size of nozzles, 1 1-8 inches.
Number of hours working five (300 minutes.)
Each line discharging 60,000 gallons in five hours.
Total amount of water used 304,500 gallons.
This amount of water would weigh approximately 2,429,295 lbs.

HOLMER BEAT HENRI ST. YVES

Canadian Forced the French Marathoner to Quit at 23rd Mile at Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—Hans Holmer of Quebec defeated St. Yves, the French Marathon runner, to-day at the National grounds. The race was the full Marathon distance, but St. Yves was unable to finish. He gave up in the 23rd mile, dropping to the ground from sheer exhaustion.

The race up to that time was close, St. Yves leading all the way, with Holmer five yards behind. St. Yves tried repeatedly to shake off the Canadian but the latter stuck close to him, and at the beginning of the 23rd mile began to force St. Yves. The latter kept up the faster pace for a couple of laps and then collapsed. Holmer finished alone in 2.38.40, which is an American record. It was found that St. Yves was suffering from heart trouble and was evidently in distress during the whole race. Holmer finished strong and was never in distress.

The non-Jury sittings of the County Court will open to-morrow at one o'clock before His Honour Judge Huycke. There is only one case to come up for consideration, that of Hamilton Douglas of Norwood versus J. Fleming of the same place. Douglas is claiming $176.74 wages which he earned while in the defendant's employ for forty-five weeks. Fleming in defence claims that he paid the plaintiff more than was due him. For nine weeks, he states, he paid Douglas his wages and gave him board, during which time he didn't do any work. Mr. C. F. SHOULD BE REMEDIED.

It would appear that members of police forces should receive some specific instructions in regard to dealing with a certain class of cases coming into their custody. A few days ago a man was arrested for drunkenness in Ottawa. He was placed in a cell, left 12 hours without attendance of a doctor and was found dead. He was suffering from concussion of the brain, probably the result of a fall. The keen-nosed policeman said that he smelt liquor when he arrested the man, and treated him as a drunk, whereas, as a matter of fact, he was at the point of death, a condition that demanded the immediate services of a physician, which might have saved his life. Such an example of inadvertent inhumanity should bring about a readjustment of the relations of policemen to their subjects. This is not the first time that serious and subsequently fatal illness, such as apoplexy, has been mistaken for drunkenness. It is sad and shameful that in a Christian land a human being should be bundled upon the bare planks of a cell and deprived for twelve hours of the attention which a farmer would give a sick horse.

PUT IN NEW BLOOD.

Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson's recent visit to Canada has modified his attitude towards the question of having a Canadian Advisory Board as an auxiliary in the British Directorate of the Grand Trunk Railway. This changed attitude is, no doubt, due to the fact that the Canadians have intimated that there is no desire to transfer the financial control of the railway from London to Canada, although there is a growing feeling in favour of the establishmet of a board, say in Montreal. Those best able to express an opinion on the matter are convinced that the formation of such a board is likely to be agreed to at the coming annual meeting of the railway.. The long-distance management of a 4,000-miles railway, by a body of men who, no doubt, are brilliant business men and financiers, cannot be the success that it would be if they were in more intimate touch with local conditions. Canadians have shown that they knew how to build and run railways. A little swift Canadian blood injected into the management of the Grand Trunk would doubtless result in a better showing at the annual meetings, and bring an unwonted smile to the face of many a shareholder.

THINKING AND KICKING.

A recent issue of the Creamery Journal states that the farmers of Iowa are taking a special interest in cow testing. To quote a vigorous editorial, "An intellectual bomb has exploded, farmers are thinking. Hundreds are kicking themselves for having so long fooled away their time and effort and money chasing the dual-purpose nonsense phantom. Breeders of dairy cattle are simply swamped with business. Dealers in dairy utensils report whirlwind sales of scales and Babcock testers."

Farmers of Canada, are you going to let farmers of adjoining states beat you in advanced dairy thought given to cow testing, and in resultant business-like action? One main object of testing individual cows is to ascertain what difference there is between the product or profit of a good cow and a poor one. If our poorest cows were known they would quickly be discarded because there can be no object in retaining them. The trouble is that they are not known. Often the poor ones are believed to be good! They will be detected only when records are kept. A more careful study of feeding, and some associated plan of breeding from good, pure bred sires will work wonders in improving cows on Canadian farms. Cow testing associations should exict by the hundred, every county needs several; they were never more needed than at present. Who owns the best cow in your county?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Oiling the roads, says the Kingston Whig, does more than keep down the dust. It keeps the water out, and it is the water that does the mischief.

The rage of the United States newspapers against the Payne-Aldrich pulp and paper duties is music in Canadian ears. It's our inning, says the London Advertiser.

A tramp goes through the world unnoticed, when he is not executed, but fish his dead body out of the river and he becomes a centre of interest and the machinery of the law is put into motion at large expense. If as much solicitude and expense and interest had been taken and spent by the state and the community in the man with the breath of God in his body, as is taken in his poor sodden corpse, he might have been reclaimed and have became a reputable and useful citizen.

WHITNEY SIXTY-SIX.

(Ottawa Free Press)

On Friday, Oct. 1, Sir James Pliny Whitney, Premier of the Province of Ontario, will be 66 years of age, and, like Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who is not yet 68, is not by any means in the old men's class. Both are good for many years of fight yet.

Sir James began everything late in life. He was 33 years before he passed his examinations for the bar, and he did not take an active part in politics until he was 43.

He was first elected to the Legislature in his 45th year. By this time he had come to have some settled notions as to political parties and church affairs, for be it known his early affiliations and traditions in politics were Liberal, and his church relations Presbyterian, subsequently Methodist and finally Anglican.

PAPER AND PULPWOOD

(Montreal Herald)

The United States paper manufacturers have soon found that the recent manipulation of the tariff in their own interest, without regard to conditions on this side of the line, was of no advantage to themselves. The progress and prosperity of Canada are not dependent upon tariff legislation at Washington, although we naturally want to live on the most friendly terms with our neighbours. There are no signs of a change of plan on the part of Ontario and Quebec. The Government of this province has decided to stop the exportation of pulp wood cut on Crown lands, and as the New York and New England producers have largely exhausted their own supplies, and are bound to have material from Canada, they are preparing to bring their plants into this province. It is announced that the interests controlling the Berlin mills in New Hampshire are planning the installation of a print paper mill at Espanola and that the International Paper Company is now selecting a number of locations for mills, which they have planned and intend to build in different parts of Canada. It will be remembered by those interested in the lumber industry that the provincial Government nine years ago promised that the stumpage rates, which were fixed at sixty cents per cord on wood cut from Crown lands, would not be raised for ten years. It is intended to carry out that pledge. They will remain as at present until September of next year, when the new licensing plan will go into general application. Quite irrespective of how paper-makers here and paper-makers in the United States may feel towards each other.

THE GENESIS OF TRUSTS.

New York World.

A Chicago importer of vegetable oils spurned a steamship agent who showhim a way to evode the tariff and to get freight rebates.

This is regarded as so remarkable that the newspapers enlarge upon the facts, and interviews with the honest importer have been telegraphed all over the United States.

This Chicago man must be an exception, because the steamship company which the agent represented, has been doing a big business with business men who were not only willing to accept but seeking for all the rebates they could get, and who would not pay the United States Treasury a penny of tariff tax which they could evade.

The same men doubtless pride themselves on their credit, on the promptness with which they meet their notes and pay their bills, on the quality of their goods and their high reputations.

The giving and taking of freight rebates is the crime by which the Standard Oil Company added to its enormous profits. With freight rebates Andrew Carnegie built up his steel business. In the coal trade the men who got the freight rebates drove out their small competitors who could not get rebates.

In the importing business the man who pays the least tariff tax can undersell his competitors. To do this some firms bribed appraisers and other customs officials. They had their foreign houses make out false invoices. They committed perjury every time they put through a shipment in the custom house.

Why should it be thought exceptional that a business man is so honest that he will not violate the customs law or the Interstate Commerce law?

What a comment it is on the business morality of the United States that obeying the law is regarded as something praiseworthy instead of disobeying the law being regarded as disgraceful!

Business immorality is a great cause of political immorality. Between disobeying the law and bribing officials who connive at the disobedience there is little distinction. The man who would evade a tariff tax would equally make a campaign contribution or an individual payment to have the tariff fixed to suit his business. A man man would take a

Do You Need Shaking?

Like a Stove Choked with Ashes.

You have probably noticed how much more briskly the fire burns when freshly built or shaken. You doubtless remember too, how much more briskly you used to get around when you were in your 'teens or twenties.

The cases are parallel. You are like the fire that is choked with ashes.

The cells which compose the body are constantly dying and being renewed. Then there is the indigestible part of the food to be removed. This cleansing of the body is the duty of the bowels, kidneys and skin. When any of these organs fail to do their work properly, the system becomes clogged and the fire of life burns low.

There is an increasing tendency towards constipation, kidney trouble and poisoned blood as one grows older. In most cases, the need is felt of something to regulate these vital organs.

"Fruit-a-tives" the famous fruit medicine, does this perfectly. It acts directly on the liver, increasing the flow of bile and causes the bowels to move regularly and naturally. "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest of kidney regulators, overcoming the tendency to congestion of the kidneys and strengthening these organs. "Fruit-a-tives" also stimulates the skin to renewed action.

By their combined action on bowels, kidneys and skin, "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the system free of all poisons and renews the vigor of youth.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c—or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

freight rebate would bribe a railroad official to give it to him. A railroad official who would take a bribe would rob his stockholders and discriminate against ordinary shippers.

It is hard to enforce respect for the law upon the ordinary citizen when he sees the influence, prosperity and seeming success of big law violators. If one importer evades the tariff his competitors must either do likewise or be undersold. If one manufacturer gets freight rebates other manufacturers must get rebates or go out of business: Often they had to go out of business.

Hence the trusts.

THE LITTLE WHITE FILLY

By Harold Carter.

Old Stephen Brand was a prosperous farmer in Oudtshoorn, inhabited mainly by well-to-do Boer farmers and ranchers. A close-fisted old Dutchman he was reputed to be; yet of all things perhaps he loved his fleet white filly Pearl. When she won the local races by many lengths he sent her to Cape Town and Kimberley; but here, also, she outstripped all in her class. If she had been beaten it would have broken his heart, men said. But she never was beaten.

The war broke out. English troops by the thousand swarmed over the land. The Dutch republics, fighting doggedly, were beaten to their knees. Here and there a few guerrilla bands remained. Some of these had invaded the colony and were invading Oudtshoorn. Stephan Brand secretly aided them with provisions: he dared do no more.

One morning a British captain with his company came to the farm.

"Stephan Brand," he said, "I want five horses. You will receive compensation from the government in due time. Here is my requisition. Bayers and his band are in the vicinity and we are short of mounts."

And he walked into the stables and selected his mounts. One of these was the white filly. Stephan Brand clutched at the officer's arm.

"Do not take her," he pleaded. "See, I will give you three in place of her." The officer laughed and led Pearl away.

When the troops had gone black rage filled the old man's heart. He strapped on his bandolier, took his rifle, filled his saddle bags with flour and dried biltong, and rode out. He wanted nothing, cared for nothing, save to be revenged upon the man who had stolen his beloved.

That afternoon he joined Beyers in a mountain pass. The guerrilla leader had 100 men. Brand told him that the British were searching for him.

"At dawn to-morrow they will enter the pass," he said. "You will have them at your mercy. Only, tell all your men to be careful that none shoots my white filly, which the captain rides. Still, be careful to intercept him; for if once he gets a start, no horse in the country can catch him."

"Here is a horse can catch him," swore Beyers, laughing, and handed to Brand a black Basuto pony, built like a racer. "Start them fair, and your filly will be outrun in the first hundred yards," said Beyers laughing.

Brand waited grimly with the guerrillas at dawn, till, with the first faint light, the British force was seen to enter the pass, the captain at the head, riding upon Pearl.

So swift and unexpected was the attack that the British people broke and fled in confusion. But, checked by a small body upon the hills, which barred their way, they had no place of escape.

The captain alone refused to surrender. One moment he hesitated—then spurring the white filly, galloped madly toward the entrance. Mindful of Brand's entreaties, the Boers withheld their fire.

Furious at the sight of his lost filly, Brand galloped madly after the captain. He felt the black pony gather itself together beneath him, he saw the distance diminish. They would be neck and neck at the entrance The filly would be his. His heart thrilled with emotion.

His—but at what cost! That his unbeaten Pearl should be run down by this black pony, to put him to shame in the sight of all his neighbours. Insensibly he checked his steed, the filly regained her lead and, gaining the open country, vanished, a speck of white in the distance.

Then Stephen Brand rode back, slowly, with drooping reins and head bowed on his breast. They watched him silently; they knew, but said nothing. He had lost his filly, but her honour was his.

WHAT GOD PROMISES

PASTOR RUSSELL PREACHES ON ORIGINAL SIN.

Text, "The Blessing of the Lord It Maketh Rich; and He Addeth No Sorrow Therewith" (Proverbs x, 22)—Mankind Is a Race of Convicts—There Is a Special Reward For Those Who Love Supremely.

Sunday, Oct. 3.—Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, preached to-day on the above text. He said:

Looking about us in the world we find abundant corroboration for the Scriptural declaration that instead of the Divine blessing resting upon the earth there is a "curse" or a blight upon it. Accordingly St. Paul wrote, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together." In the context he declares the relief from this groaning condition—out of the bondage of corruption into the liberty, favor and blessing to follow. He indicates that this blessed "change" will come through the "manifestation of the sons of God" and intimates also that these sons of God are now being "called" and will shortly be "glorified" and thus be empowered to do the work of blessing for the groaning creation, relieving them of the burden of sin and death.

Still the question arises, Why should humanity be so differently circumstanced from the angels? Why should not holiness and purity and freedom from sorrow, pain and death prevail on earth as well as in heaven? Why should the great Creator so differently condition one branch of His creation from the other? True, the Lord's prayer tells us that we may expect ultimately that Divine power will intervene and succor humanity. The declaration, "Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," is more than a prayer; because uttered by our Lord it is also a prophecy of what will ultimately obtain. But the question is, Why should it be necessary for us to pray and to seek to subdue sin and to lift mankind out of evil conditions? Why should not God's will have been done on earth all along, as it is done in heaven? Why have sin and death been permitted to "reign," as the Scriptures declare?

The Bible alone answers our query. It explains that originally our race was created perfect, in the image of God, sinless, holy, pure, happy. Man's Eden home was Paradise, the Garden of God. But all this bliss was lost through disobedience to the Divine command. Then the death sentence came upon father Adam and lost fellowship with his Creator, his Eden home, his perpetual life and, instead of the Divine provision, was sentenced to earn his bread by the sweat of his face, battling with thorns, thistles and insects. The Bible does not pretend to say that the conditions as we know them today are perfect nor that they are satisfactory to God, nor that they should be satisfactory to us. The extreme opposite of the home in Eden, the drouth, cyclone, tempest and flood, belong to the unfit conditions of the earth and are intended by the Lord to serve as part of man's condemnation. Thorns, sickness, disease, sorrow, pain, crying, sin and death will be brought eventually to — death to destruction. Thank God he has overruled that feature of the sentence so that death is not all that means destruction. Thus it is written, "Return, O men of destruction; and say unto us, Return, ye children of men" (Psalm xc, 3).

The turning of man to destruction was six thousand years ago and, although the blessing of restitution was designed from the very first by all the holy prophets, nevertheless the return was not made actually possible until the Redeemer came and laid down His life as the ransom price for the sins of the whole world. A long while did God wait before sending the Redeemer. More than four thousand years passed, and for a long period he has waited since then before effecting a deliverance of humanity from sin and death—nearly nineteen centuries. This deliberate slowness on the part of the Almighty in looking after the human family and its rescue from sin and death can be understood from only one standpoint—the Bible standpoint. The Bible, contrary to our creeds formulated in the dark ages, teaches that the penalty for sin is not a future torment, but a present experience with sin and death under the sentence, "Dying thou shalt die." In other words our present accursed or condemned, unfavorable condition as a race is God's just penalty against us as sinners.

We are a race of convicts, and the conditions of nature are Divinely arranged with a view to speeding us onward to the tomb—to the fulfillment of our "curse" or sentence—death. In other words all the mental unbalance and distress, including insanity, imbecility and cross temper, are elements of death—the results of death working in us as a race; likewise our moral deflection. We were "born in sin and shapen in iniquity; in sin did our mothers conceive us." Phrenology, as well as physiology, shows clearly these flaws. The misshapen heads indicate the unbalance in which we were born, and the Scriptures declare that we are "prone to sin (literally, to sin,) as the sparks to fly upward. In view of these things how distinctly God's Word is corroborated in comparison with this just condemnation of indignation of God, whether we how unreasonable and uncomplimentary are the various theories that came down to us from the dark ages" unsupported by the Word of God, teaching that our whole race was born under an original condemnation or sentence to eternal torture; and that the only ones saved would be the few grasped by Divine favor during this Gospel Age and lifted from reinstatement to the world and transformed into saints.

It is true enough that the Bible teaches that God has a special reward for those who love him supremely—more than self, houses, lands or any other creature. True it is, indeed, that he has for these "exceeding great and precious" blessings; but it is quite untrue, as it would be quite ungodly, that our Creator should either by predestination or through lack of foreknowledge or for any other reason condemn our race as a whole, either to centuries of suffering in Purgatory, as some declare, or still worse, as others affirm, everlasting suffering.

Having shattered the Divine explanation of the curse of sin and death upon the world, and having found it true to all the circumstances and facts, let us now with confidence turn to the same record, the Bible, for an explanation of what blessings God has in reservation for the saints, and also for the world in general. "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich."

The blessing of the Lord has, to some extent, come to the Church, but it is a blessing receivable only by faith. It is not the real blessing, but, as the Scriptures declare, a foretaste, "an earnest" of the coming inheritance or blessing. This foretaste is very precious to all of the Lord's saints, giving them a feast and joy and comfort under the most trying circumstances of the present life. It is indeed "The peace of God, which passeth all understanding" which rules in their hearts, as St. Paul said to the "little flock" of 144,000, who are named in the Scriptures as the "very elect," the Bride, the Church of Christ, which is his Body. These believers in God's promises and arrangements for the blessing of humanity through the merit of Christ's death and by the power of the Millennial Kingdom may rejoice therein in advance. It is not the intimation, however, that the Church shall reap the restitution privileges. They are credited to them so that they may have something to "offer," something to "sacrifice." By faith they receive earthly rights and restitution blessings and privileges, as God's gift, though the Lord Jesus. By faith they make a sacrifice or surrender of those rights to the divine nature and to joint-heirship with Christ their Lord and Redeemer in his Millennial Kingdom. By faith, in return, they receive the begetting of the holy spirit. They are content, not satisfied, they rejoice, though oft it be in tribulation. Their assurance is that present tribulations are working patience, experience, hope, and preparing them for the actual "glories which God hath in reservation for those that love him." Like the Apostle, they hope for the actual salvation or deliverance, "the blessing of the Lord which maketh rich" at the coming of our Lord, when the saints shall be united to him most preciously, as represented by the Scriptural figure of a Bride united to a Bridegroom. The marriage of the Lamb will come, for his wife will have made herself ready (Revelation xix, 7).

Let us glance backward and note the earliest reference of the Scriptures—the earliest God-given intimations of coming blessings.

(1) Shortly after the fall the Lord declared that ultimately the seed of the woman (her posterity) would bruise the serpent's head—would utterly destroy sin, would triumph over sin and Satan.

(2) Later on Enoch prophesied that Messiah would come, and great the world a fresh trial for life or death (Jude 14). The original trial or judgment, for life or death, was through the one man, Adam, and his failure, and its penalty affected the condemnation of his entire race, because all are imperfect and hence sinners. The promise of a Messiah, and that he would grant the world a fresh trial was indeed a rainbow of hope to those who could receive it.

(3) It was not until Abraham's time that God really definitely outlined the channel of the blessing which he proposed ultimately to give to the race, "the blessing of the Lord, which maketh rich." Let us examine this prophetic outline of coming blessing.

The promise made to Abraham was this, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Here we have something definite, something tangible. This promise was renewed to Isaac, also to Jacob and, later on at Jacob's death, it passed to all of his posterity, the nation of Israel. In due time, in fulfillment of this promise, Moses, as the mediator, instituted the Law Covenant between God and Israel. Under that Covenant it was stipulated that in order to inherit eternal life and all the blessing which Adam possessed and lost, and in order to inherit the promise made to Abraham of the privilege of blessing all the families of the earth, the Divine Law must be kept inviolate, God must be loved with all the heart, mind, soul, strength, and the neighbor must be loved as one's self. Moses as mediator of that Covenant might render every assistance he was capable of to that nation; but, alas, himself a fallen man, imperfect, he was unable to lift Israel out of sin and degradation—unable to bring them to that state of human perfection which would enable them to keep that Law Covenant and inherit its blessings! As God foreknew, they failed to keep their part of the Covenant. "By deeds of Law shall no flesh be justified." A number of discouraged Israelites continued to hope for blessing through the Abrahamic Covenant and, later on, the Lord revealed to them that in due time he would make a New (Law) Covenant with them and that Messiah would be its Mediator (Jeremiah xxxi, 31).

The promise of a New Covenant implied, as St. Paul points out, that God knew that the Law Covenant would not bring to Israel the hoped-for blessings. Thenceforth their hopes centered in the New Covenant, under which the Lord promised that he would entirely blot out their sins and take away their stony heart and give them a heart of flesh and that they should be his people. Confirmatory to this thought was the message sent to them through Malachi the prophet, assuring them that the messenger of the Covenant (the antitype of the Covenant, the Mediator of the Covenant, whose day they delighted in, the one they were hoping for) would ere long "come" to His Temple. But the prophet interrupted that few of them would be ready to receive him. He said, "What shall stand when he appeareth?"

Expecting Messiah to appear in a very different way, Israel was unprepared for the "Man of sorrow and acquainted with grief," "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." They expected a great general, a mighty leader, who would appeal to the learned, the wealthy, the noble. But our Lord appealed only to those who were pure in heart, "Israelites indeed." Such alone had the necessary faith to recognise him and receive him. The others crucified him, but did it ignorantly. St. Peter declares, "I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers. Ye killed the Prince of life" (Acts iii, 15, 17). And St. Paul says, "Had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory" (I. Corinthians ii, 8).

However our Lord's crucifixion was merely a fulfillment of another feature of the Divine Plan to make the blessing of all mankind the deeper and broader.

By virtue of keeping the Law, Jesus would have had the right to earthly perfection for himself, earthly life and happiness. He who would have been lord of all the riches that Adam possessed and lost, he might, therefore, have established an earthly empire and, by wisdom and regulations, he might have made for human uplift—the very thing which people today are wanting to bring about. But his interests would still have been under the Divine condemnation of death. He might merely have been the ruler, benefactor, of fallen, dying men. God's promise of blessing meant more than this. And in harmony with it our Lord Jesus did not keep his earthly rights, but surrendered them, sacrificed them, laid them down as an offering. The laying down of them—earthly rights too finished at Calvary. Then this sacrificing was accepted by the Father, the Divine arrangement (the Heavenly Father rewarded the sacrificer with a new life on a higher plane, "far above angels and principalities and powers."

Thus our Lord was raised from the dead on the third day. He was no longer a man, but a spirit being, a partaker of the Divine nature, far above angels, principalities and powers, in which he had formerly been. He had sacrificed, and consequently forfeited his earthly rights, which he had possessed as a man, which he might bestow upon others, but laid down his earthly rights when he laid down his earthly life, and consequently must have a right to give the equivalent—earthly perfection, honors and possessions to others. It was in this manner that the Lord provided for the blessing of the world—"the blessing of the Lord that maketh rich and to which he addeth no sorrow." Though the blessings have not yet come to the world, as we have seen, the foundation has already been laid in the redemptive work accomplished at Calvary.

We cannot in this discourse trace the blessings to conclusion. But knowing that the discourses weekly reach about seven million readers we shall hope to address the majority of you through the public prints a week hence. We hope then to show how the Lord has promised that his blessing under the Abrahamic Covenant and through the nation of Israel and through the mediatorial work of Christ is yet to bring blessings to every members of Adam's race—an opportunity for obtaining life eternal. Meantime let us assure our hearts of the truthfulness of the promise that the blessing of the Lord maketh rich and that he addeth no sorrow therewith. Any sorrows that come to us are earthborn and not of the Lord and may be overcome; so that eventually we may be of the mighty host who in heaven and on earth and under the earth will be heard giving "praise and honor to Him who sitteth on the Throne and unto the Lamb" (Revelation v, 13).

PETERBOROUGH EXHIBITS AT MILLBROOK FAIR

Peterborough was well represented at the Millbrook Fair and quite a number of the merchants and other business men made a display of their goods. The following were worthy of special mention:—

WILLIAM LECH & SONS FUR EXHIBIT

Visitors at the Millbrook Fair had an opportunity, for the first time, of admiring a comprehensive display of high-grade furs, from the old established firm of William Lech & Sons, 413 George St., Peterborough. The public showed a keen appreciation of this display, not only because of its neatness and practical utility, but because of its seasonableness and the near approach of cold weather. As a direct result of this exhibit, it may be mentioned that a visitor who had inspected the furs in this exhibit, came to Peterborough Saturday morning and placed a substantial order with the firm for winter furs.

Some of the newest models, which the trend of fashion favours, were on display at this fur exhibit. Not only in fine fur garments, but in the artistic combinations of soft furry novelties, was the display an interesting one. There were many creations of the firm's own designers, which were decidedly new and catchy. Some of the chief features in this display of furs were a handsome Persian lamb coat, a Norway seal coat, gentlemen's fur coats, muffs, in Alaska sable, lynx Persian lamb, mink and white and grey squirrel. Natty mink ties, and other furry neckwear, also beautiful specimens of fur robes, etc. The exhibit was in charge of Mr. Keith Lech, who was kept busy waiting upon the crowds who surged round this meritorious display.

The long and well established reputation of William Lech & Sons may be taken as an insurance against inferior qualities. The firm's own make of garments have the merit of possessing correct fit and style. And in the repairing and remodelling departments the work entrusted to their care is known to be done with practical intelligence and care for the intrest of patrons.

"AT HOME" TO THEIR FRIENDS

Messrs. Lang & Maher, the "Daylight" clothiers of Peterborough, were "At Home" among many of their friends and customers at the Millbrook Fair. Representatives of this hustling firm were on the ground early Friday morning and erected their model exhibition annex and decorated it with a display of their clothing that solved the usual fall problem for the male sex. Winning clothes, cheerful looks—these go a good way to have good impressions—and that is why young men crowded this exhibit and mentally took their measures of the natty suits and overcoats shown in fashion's newest vagaries. But if you would see all the fall models for 1909, see Lang & Maher's regular big exhibit—now in full swing at Nos. 409-411 George St., Peterborough.

This exhibit was highly praised by good judges and was well worth seeing from an educational standpoint. Of course, Mr. Jas. Lang was in attendance, renewing old acquaintances, and his assistant, Mr. Wesley, was busy in the crowds.

GRAFTON'S CLOTHING.

There are several good reasons to justify the firm of Grafton & Co., of Peterborough for continuing year by year to make a strong exhibit of their hand-tailored clothing at the Millbrook fair. Many of their best customers live in Cavan, Manvers, Hope and Emily, and have shown a preference for the Grafton make. The beautiful fit of Grafton's clothing at the shoulders and breast, the graceful lines and character of their models, the fine tailoring, the range of colours and patterns and their moderate prices, often lower than others, are reasons for advertising their clothing at the fairs. The success of this great clothing business has not come through exploiting "remarkable bargains," or through endeavouring to make men think they were getting a great deal more than their money's worth. It has come because every garment has stood the test of service, and permanent customers have been made thereby.

Mr. W. E. Conway, manager of the Peterborough local store, was on the grounds during the fair, while Mr. Herb. Conway took special charge of the exhibit. Throughout the fair grounds, the firm's attractive bulletins were displayed in profusion.

PATENT ROOFING.

Mr. L. S. Clarry, of Millbrook, represented the new Flintkote roofing on the fair grounds. This roofing is being introduced in many places for covering barns, houses, etc., as a substitute and as an improvement on shingles. Mr. Clarry is the local agent, and reports good sales.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

A KNIGHT FOR A DAY.

"A Knight for a Day" Smith & Hubbell's highly successful musical comedy, with the record of a solid year in Chicago, and long stays in New York and Boston, drew two large audiences at matinee and evening performances, at the Grand on Saturday, and won much favour from the local people, who saw it for the first time. It is a play built solely on laughing lines, and has been most successful in fulfilling the mission of its authors. Crammed full of bright lines, tuneful music, funny situations, and delightful scenic surprises and novelties, it is easy to find the reason for the production's long stay in the cities. As presented here on Saturday it was a thoroughly pleasing production.

"A Knight for a Day" centres around the adventures of Jonathan Joy, an erstwhile waiter and masquerading in the guise of a lawyer and baronet, and Tillie Day, a servant lady. Two mysterious lockets which are involved in the disposing of an estate in Corsica, furnish the plot. The real owners of the lockets, not desiring to marry each other, as the conditions call for, give them away to Jonathan and Tillie. Unfortunately for the pair, the estate is given away before they can take advantage of the jewellery, but not before the principal characters have been transferred to Corsica, giving the stage manager an opportunity for a lavish setting in the second act, and the ladies of the chorus to display themselves in the quaint garb of the Corsican peasants. So thoroughly charming was the spectacle, as the curtain rose on the last act, that an involuntary ripple of applause ran through the house.

Hilda Thomas as "Tillie Day," had the house with her from her first appearance, when she came on trundling a wheel barrow. Her comedy methods are effective and clever, and she extracts the most from a good role. George Over, as Jonathan Joy, was not, perhaps, as pleasing as Miss Thomas, although he showed himself an eccentric dancer of much ability, and his work in the second act was much better than his first appearance seemed to promise. Louise Horner, who will be remembered by her splendid work here in the "Gingerbread Man," was effective in her presentation of "Elaine," and Louise Shepherd as "Muriel" sang very sweetly.

There were some very pleasing songs interwoven into the action, one of the most pleasing being "Life is a See-Saw," where the charming electrical effects were of great assistance. "The Little Girl in Blue" was another tuneful number and "The Garden of Dreams" afforded Miss Shepherd an opportunity of displaying her powerful soprano to good advantage. "While as You Walk Out," a selection with rag time chorus and with verses into which are mingled selections from "Tannhauser," "Il Trovatore," "Faust," and the sextette from "Lucia" gave the chorus a chance to show that they really could sing. The number made a hit that lived up to its advance notices.

The old favourite minstrel troupe, Guy Brothers, are billed for to-night and on Friday night one of the most notable theatrical events of the present season will be the appearance here of Charles Cherry and Ruth Maycliffe, in the last play by the late Clyde Fitch, "The Bachelor," which is fresh from a long run at the Maxine Elliott theatre, New York, and piled the mup at the Royal Alexandra theatre, Toronto, last week. It is said to be the best comedy ever written by Fitch, and Mr. Cherry and Miss Maycliffe, who will be remembered from their work in "Girls," are excelling themselves in their new vehicle, in which they will make a round the world tour in the near future.

RESOLUTION PASSED BY CITY MINISTERS

Text of a Resolution Adopted by Ministerial Association at This Morning's Meeting.

Resolved, that we, the members of the Peterborough Ministerial Association assembled, on Oct. 4th, do put ourselves on record as being deeply distressed and humiliated by the fact that during the past week perjury has been openly and shamelessly committed in our midst and that the good name of our city has, as a result, suffered greatly, not only in the province, but throughout the country. Further we would deeply deplore the conditions which tempt weak men to such dishonourable and conscienceless action."

Carried unanimously by a standing vote of a very large attendance of members.

All members of the 57th Regimen who intend playing Rugby with the Regiment team are requested to turn out in uniform at the Armouries tonight at 7.30 o'clock sharp.

MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, speaking on Sunday on the text "Israel hath sinned, therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies," said among other things:

"It does matter to every man how his neighbour conducts himself. It does matter to the generation following how we conduct ourselves. There are streams of scrofulous blood flowing through generations because of the sin of an hour. There are churches hampered and hindered by the inconsistency of one man. It does violence to the interests of the whole community when perjury is rampant, and when even one man in seventeen thousand shamefully declares that he is willing to swear to a lie for the sake of a few paltry dollars."

"VAG" PROMISED TO BEAT IT TO THE WOODS

Benjamin Hobson was the only occupant of the dock at the police court this morning. He was charged with being a vagrant but he promised to leave at once for the woods if allowed to go. His Worship enlarged the case for a week to see if Hobson really would leave town.

Permanent Home For Horse Show

Donegan Park Has Been Purchased for Cobourg's Famous Show.

A joint meeting of the Horse Show Committee, Board of Trade and Town Council was held on Monday evening, when it was decided to purchase Donegan Park as the future home of the Horse Show at a cost of $7,000.

President, J. D. Hayden, in his opening remarks, said a deputation had gone up to Mr. Donegan and got his best terms. We could pay $1,000 down, $1,000 in December, and $1,000 after each show, with interest at five per cent. We still had the option on the Grosjean Farm and Glebe lands, but it would in all probability be purchased by the Golf Club, as their present grounds would be cut up by the Canadian Northern Railway. The Golf Club are intending to move and spoke about buying the Dr. Beatty Farm, Glebe Lands, Agricultural Grounds, and Grosjean Farm. They would then have a clear stretch from Division street to Burnt Street, not cut up by a railway track. If they bought the Agricultural grounds, the Cobourg Central could then be held at Donegan Park, and, with the buildings belonging to the Fair removed here would be an advantage to both shows. We think by buying Donegan Park we can pay off $1,000 after each show and in five years can hand it over to the town as a public park. We intend to fix the Park up, and make it suitable for baseball, picnics, horse races, etc., and in order to reduce our debt we intend to hold athletic celebrations, etc., on holidays.—Cobourg Star.

Miss Katie Simpson was the guest of Misses Ida and Mary Trotter last week.

Mrs. Tirrel and Mr. H. Tirrel were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Snelgrove on Sunday.

Mr. Charles Hawks has the contract of erecting a cottage on Mary's Island, Loon Lake, for Mr. Carnegie.

Glen Alda was well represented at the Coe Hill fair on Thursday. There was a good attendance; although Victoria fair being held on the same day, a number attended it, and no excursion train came into Coe Hill.

The steady downpour of rain during the afternoon made it very unpleasant. The members of the Coe Hill Fair had better sit up and take notice that there were nearly as many more exhibits in the show rooms last year as were there this year, which certainly means the members must be losing interest, and lack of interest in the fair of the town and country is not a good thing for a community.

Mrs. Pattison and children of Apsley, were the guests of her sister, Mrs. W. H. Snelgrove, last week.

Miss M. A. Hales was the guest of Mrs. Snelgrove for a few days.

Mr. Henry McKaskie and family returned to Bellerille on Monday, after a successful season at Lakeview house. The campers of the American visitors were kept busy, as beauty spots that would make a lovely picture appeared in quick succession on every boating trip.

Loon Lake cannot be rivalled by any lake in the county for picturesque scenery. The shores are magnificent. On the full length, twelve or fourteen miles, there is not one burnt or barren looking spot. Every little point or tiny bay, is a study for an artist. But this is not saying all the points or bays are small. They are quite the contrary. Bays that hold islands from one half to two or three acres in extent cannot boast of considerable space. The beauties of this lake are not easily forgotten by those once seeing it.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM ACCIDENT

What might have been a very serious accident occurred on Charlotte St. Sunday evening, just west of the G. T. R. track, when a horse of George Spilsbury's, and another, took fright at a passing street car. The two vehicles collided. It looked at one time as though Mr. Spilsbury's buggy was going to be demolished, but beyond a broken shaft all escaped without any further injury.—Com.

You Can Defy The SPRING FATIGUE

And nervous exhaustion, if you will make the blood rich and red by using DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Fatigue and weakness tell of weak, watery and impure blood.

Are you going to go through the usual suffering and discomfort of spring this year or take a hand in the matter of your health and build up the system?

It is for you to decide, for you know that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, by forming new, rich blood, overcomes the fatigue, the weakness, the feelings of depression, and discouragement which come with spring.

The nervous system is almost always exhausted in the spring. Your appetite fails because the nerves which control the appetite are exhausted, and so it is with digestion and the working of the other bodily organs.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest spring medicine because it is the greatest of nerve restoratives. It forms the new, rich, red blood from which vigor, energy and nerve force are created.

If you would restore the healthful glow to the complexion, sharpen the appetite, improve digestion, strengthen the action of the heart, revitalize the wasted brain and nerve cells and round out the wasted form you must use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. No imitation is just as good. There is no substitute but will disappoint.

Mrs. John P. Shannon, Whitestone, N. S., writes: "I used four boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found it an excellent medicine. It has proved to be a splendid treatment for headache and a run-down system."

PASSED AWAY AT COBALT

Campbellford, October 4th.—George Haselton MacDonald, a native of Nairn, Scotland, who was employed in Campbellford and had been for a few years in the North West Mounted Police went to the silver field of Cobalt and there contracted Typhoid fever, which after two days' illness took him away. When in Campbellford he was made a member of "Gordon Camp" Sons of Scotland. Immediately on receiving the news of his death they sent for his body to be forwarded to Campbellford as he had no friends in this country. He was a young man of 25 years of age and of splendid physique and liked by all those who knew him.

The funeral took place on Sunday under the charge of the S.O.S. and over 100 members turned out to mark their respect for their departed brother. Brothers Pollock, Yeoman and Robertson, pipers, played the dirges, which are appropriate for the occasion, such as the "Flowers of the Forest," "Scots wha hae," and the "Crusader's March."

The service was conducted by the Rev. G. A. Brown, Presbyterian Minister, and the camp duties were performed by Bro. R. Bell, chief; and Bros. R. Grieve, F. Dinwoodie, W. Tait, W. Rutherford, H. Naylor and W. Anderson. The Sons of Scotland are to be commended for the interest taken.

BRIGHT NUGGETS OF NEWS FROM KEENE

Examiner Special:

Keene, Oct. 1.—The wedding was celebrated Wednesday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, Otonabee, of Jennie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Elmhirst to Mr. Stuart McIntyre, of Otonabee. The bride was handsomely attired in a silk gown of Copenhagen blue and was given away by her father. Rev. D. D. McDonald tied the nuptial knot in the presence of about fifty guests.

The contracting parties were unattended. The bride was the recipient of numerous handsome and useful presents. The happy couple will reside in Otonabee.

THE APOLOGIZERS

(By Stuart B. Stone.)

There was a whoop and a bang at the front entrance to the sanctum of the Angel Ledge Weekly Pioneer, and six feet four of armed aggressiveness bounded inside, defying the scribes, the presses, and the pen, which some say is mightier than the sword.

"Show your smutty, smeary faces, you loose-jointed, mild-headed paper-writers! Come out and fight like a man! Don't skulk in a tub of ink like a coyote! Wo-o-o-w-w!"

The amiable visitor took a chance shot at the ancient revolver globe, boring a great hole somewhere in Kamschatka.

There was a sound of hurried shuffling in the back of the old printery, as if the timid paper-writers might suddenly have been called to their homes and loved ones. A pause followed and then somebody's blue eyes showed at a bullet hole made in a flimsy partition by some previous equally well-intentioned visitor.

"What is it, please?" asked a soft, delicate voice.

"Oh! Wo-o-o-w! Wow!" yelled the big man. "Do you know who I am? I'm Ripsnorter Rufus from Cayenne Gulch!"

The delicate voice was heard in a little chuckle. "Honoured—immensely. Went to pay your subscription, Mr. Ripsnorter?"

Ripsnorter Rufus growled like a caged tigress. "Naw, I just want to bite you in two and throw one half in Salt Lake and the other half over the north pole, for printin' mean, measley lies and falsehoods about me in this here Pioneer paper. Some cross-eyed crawfish named "Buttercup" writ a piece about me killin' five men. And I wishes it distinctly understood it were six."

"Tut, tut!" This is too bad!" scolded the lightsome voice, and a young lady emerged from behind the flimsy partition. "The mistake shall be corrected with apologies, Mr. Ripsnorter Rufus; but you owe the Pioneer fifteen dollars for shooting holes in the office geography."

The girl was fair and trim, with the winsome light of mischief shining from her blue eyes and a becoming but determined flush in her cheek. The bad man from Cayenne Gulch lowered his smoking weapon and opened his immense mouth. "Well, you can hang me to the tallest pine on Hurricane peak! Are you the editor of this here Pioneer pub-li-cation?"

The girl bowed and smiled. "The same—as you would know, if you were receiving your interesting and informing little paper every Friday at $1 a year."

The bad man reached into a capacious pocket, and pitched a bag of dust upon the table. "There, that'll buy you a new geography ball big as Cloud-mountain and colored like the rainbow. And here's another sack so as you can send me the Pioneer for the next thousand years."

The girl wrote rapidly in a big ledger and placed the golden treasure in a small iron safe. "Thanks," she acknowledged. "The mistake shall be corrected, and next week I will put in a news note that 'The Honourable Ripsnorter Rufus paid the Pioneer office a pleasant visit.'"

The big man smiled sheepishly, but did not depart. Instead, he twirled about on his heels and plunked at his enormous black moustache. "Ain't there some way I can help you with this here fine, nice paper, miss?"

The fair editor secured a large bundle of copies. "If you would distribute these samples, it might increase my subscription list around Cayenne Gulch."

"Huh!" grunted the bad man, taking the bundle. "Any miserable skinflint that don't subscribe for himself and every friend he's got back east has me to fight."

At the door he still tarried. "I'd like to call some time and apologize in a nice, quiet way for the howling and shouting I did a while ago."

She smiled again. "Thursday evening. The Cheyenne Terror is coming to-night and Capt. Turner is coming to-morrow and Sagebrush Simpson the next night to apologize for doing the same way. Goodby."

The bad man scowled at the mention of the other names, then, grinning resignedly, departed. The girl reopened the safe and weighed the treasure sacks. "They all do that way," she smiled, in tender reverie.

THE VALUE OF TURPENTINE

When all else fails the physician recommends his wealthy patient to take a trip to the turpentine groves as a cure for throat and lung troubles. The turpentine of commerce cannot very well be used but by adding liquid Dr. Chase succeeded in getting up the most effective treatment for throat and lung troubles that was ever discovered. It is known as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

PETERBORO' PHOTOGRAPHY HIGHLY COMMENDED

One of Mendel's Portraits Selected for Honours in "American Photography"

A bust portrait reproduced in the October number of "American Photography," is from the studio of Mr. Louis Mendel, of this city. The expression of the lifelike model is specially well brought out, while the pose is one that could not not well be improved. There is an interesting charm about the picture which even its reproduction by a letter-press printer, fails to detract. The print has been adjudged a photographic success, and is, no doubt, the reason why it was selected from among the few gems, which were on exhibition at the Photographers' National Convention recently held in Rochester.

WILL ENTERTAIN THE CONGREGATION

THE MINERS RETALIATE

Men Say That They Will Swear Out Warrants For the Arrest of All the Mining Officials in Nova Scotia on a Charge of Conspiring to Keep Prices Up—Have Also Issued Warrant For Editor.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 4.—Sensational developments are expected in the strike situation in Cape Breton to-day.

Two weeks ago, the Dominion Coal Co. ordered the arrest of Dan McDougall, president of the United Mine Workers of America in Nova Scotia, on a charge of libel for inserting advertisements in La Patrie of Montreal, giving an alleged libelous description of conditions at the company's collieries at Glace Bay.

Since then the company have had warrants issued for the arrest of Patterson and Bonsfield, also leading union officials.

The U. M. W. claim they have information that the company intends to make wholesale arrests with a view of breaking the strike. To offset this move, the U.M.W. officials will swear out information for the arrest of the coal operators of this province. They will charge conspiracy among the operators in keeping up the price of coal, claiming the different companies have an agreement to charge a uniform rate per ton.

The U.M.W. has laid information for the arrest of Alex. Johnson, ex-M.P.P., for Cape Breton, on charge of criminal libel. Johnson is proprietor of The Sydney Record, which has, throughout the trouble, sided with the company, and has made some attacks on the U.M.W.

Girls Mustn't Write Negroes.

Berlin, Oct. 4.—The Government has issued a warning to parents and teachers regarding the exchange of of letters between German girls and negroes in the German African colonies.

While in most instances such correspondence has been harmless, the official communication says, the custom still is to be deplored. In a majority of cases the correspondence was begun by German girls as an odd experience, their principal object being to receive African curiosities and photographs, and letters from a "black prince." The girls also have sent their photographs to Africa so that in the houses of many negroes in the colonies, hang the pictures of young German women of good family.

This has been seriously objected to by Germans residing in the colonies.

Mrs. Stetson and the Church.

Boston, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Augusta P. Stetson, of New York, has not been "expelled" or "dismissed" from the Christian Science church, according to a statement from Fred. Barlow, chairman of the church committee on publication, but has had her license as a practitioner revoked.

President Fallières Criticised.

Paris, Oct. 4.—The opposition press has inaugurated a bitter campaign against President Fallieres for his neglect to attend the funeral at Versailles last week of the four army officers who lost their lives in the destruction of the dirigible balloon Republique September 25.

Ignored Warnings; Are Killed.

Ashtabula, Ohio, Oct. 4.—F. Hammer, a sailor, and Mrs. Anna Phillips, a widow, disregarded the lowered gates and the warning cry of a flagman and walked upon the track of a Lakeshore grade crossing at Conneaut. Both were instantly killed by a fast train.

Writs Follow Forcible Feeding.

London, Oct. 4.—Writs have been issued against Home Secretary Gladstone and the prison officials of Birmingham in connection with an action for assault for the forcible feeding with a stomach pump last week of a number of suffragettes who persisted in going on a "hunger strike" while in jail. The suffragettes leaders contend that the forcible feeding is illegal.

Potash Syndicate Disrupts.

New York, Oct. 2.—Official notification of the disruption of the famous potash syndicate, which for the past twenty years has enjoyed a monopoly of the potash producing industry of the world, is made.

We use it for stomach troubles, indigestion, headache and summer complaint. I know of nothing better to take in hot water to check up a cold, or to rub on for inflammation or neuralgia." King Edward May Pay Visit To Spain

To Satisfy Himself as to What are the Political Conditions.

London, Oct. 4.—It is reported that King Edward is going to satisfy himself by personal observation just what the political conditions in Spain and Portugal really are, and despite the utmost endeavors of his advisers, has determined to visit the Iberian peninsula, probably next spring.

England has large interests in both Spain and Portugal. Spanish Government securities are largely held here. Commercial enterprises in Portugal are backed to a great extent by British capital. The London Government has also a revolutionary interest in all the Portuguese colonies. Furthermore an English princess is queen of Spain, and negotiations are pending by which another English princess may become queen of Portugal.

If King Edward's plans are carried out, he will shorten his stay at Biarritz, in Southern France, next spring. He will go from there to Lisbon on the royal yacht, note conditions in the Portuguese capital, and then go to Madrid for a week's stay.

Two Men Involved.

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 4.—Local authorities have succeeded in locating in Toronto Mr. and Mrs. Ketchel, the couple who came here from Toronto with [illegible] the girl into whose death a coroner's inquest is being held, and who were married by Rev. Dr. Hanson of Welland Avenue Methodist Church. They have expressed anxiety about the girl.

The last letter written by deceased to her mother in Napanee has also been found and two written to Mrs. Harry Williford of Thorold. In one she refers to a visit to Niagara Falls, whom she claims are wild horse relations with. And one called Harry, in Toronto, whom she will thump.

The parents have sent for the body, which was sent to Napanee for interment. Susan Clark was the daughter of Richard Clark, a railroad constructor, now in New Brunswick with McCay and Williford. The family is quite respectable.

The U. S. Intervention.

St. John's, Nfld. Oct. 4.—The work of the Commercial Cable Co. in putting its underground conduits in the streets of St. John's in order to connect its city station with the place of landing of its cable was stopped Saturday by the Newfoundland authorities.

This renders it necessary for the cable company to operate its cable in a hut on the seashore, in one of the wildest and most desolate places. The cable operators must now travel night and day to and fro, between the shore and the city, over a most difficult and dangerous country.

The cable company has decided to ask the American Government to intervene.

The order is a result of serious complications between the recently elected Morris Government and the Cable Co., over the permanency of an agreement entered into between the company and the late Bond ministry.

King to Open Institute.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—His Majesty King Edward, in Buckingham Palace, London, will press a button in a couple of weeks which will formerly open the Royal Edward Tuberculosis Institute in Belmont Park, Montreal.

By an ingenious electrical arrangement connections will be made between the palace and the Institute, by which the doors will be thrown open and the lights turned on when the King presses the button, and at the same instant the Union Jack will be hoisted on the flagstaff in the institute garden.

Lieut.-Col. Bagland, who kindly provided the fund for the institute and the management, say that His Majesty is evincing a great interest on the Institute thus honoring its opening. It will be one of the most up-to-date institutions of its kind in the world.

Small Boy Put Off Train at Midnight.

Almonte, Oct. 4.—To be put off the "Soo" train in the middle of the night without friends or money, and miles from home seems to have been the experience of Master Arthur Harvey, a [illegible]-year-old boy, who says his home is in Cobalt.

From the story told by the boy, it would appear that he and his brothers, who [illegible] with their parents in Cobalt, were attending school at Sturgeon Creek, when the little boy determined to return and let some unknown reason the youth, who is said to be in Almonte, attempted to follow his brother home, with the result as above.

Chinaman Seriously Accused.

Stratford, Oct. 4.—A Woodstock Chinaman, Charlie Gee Ming, who formerly conducted a laundry business in this city, is being brought back to this city to stand trial for alleged assault on a 12-year-old orphan girl of this city. While here the Chinaman kept her employed in his laundry at large wages. Lately he has kept a photograph in Woodstock, and by a letter to the child offering big wages and saying there were other girls in his employ, he induced her to go to Woodstock last Monday. The child returned to Stratford Friday, and doctors found she had been drugged.

UNREST IN INDIA

Intermittent Raids on Outlying British Stations and Assassinations of Officials Are Said to Be Engineered by Afghans—March to Kabul Is Said to Be In Prospect—Rifles Being Smuggled In.

London, Oct. 4.—Another expedition against the warlike Waziri tribesmen, who inhabited the northwest frontier of India, with a strong probability of the extension of the operations into Kabul, is regarded as virtually a certainty of the near future by those close in touch with the Indian Government.

The unrest in these regions is pronounced. Small British posts have been surrounded by raiding tribesmen, and political and military officers have been killed by the fanatical tribesmen.

Those conversant with the situation are satisfied that the agitation is being engineered from Afghanistan. Arms and ammunition are reaching the tribesmen in alarming quantities from across the Afghan frontier. Mullah Powindah, brother-in-law of the Ameer of Afghanistan, who is notoriously anti-British is becoming increasingly powerful at Kabul and in India he is regarded as a dominant menace to peace. Mazrullah is reported to be preaching a holy war among the tribesmen in the British sphere of influence.

The Waziris, whose spirit of independence was in no way dampened by the defeats they suffered at the hands of the last British expedition, are being brought up by a fanatical mullah named Powindar, who is now on his way to Kabul to consult with Mazrullah Khan.

The British Government admits fully the seriousness of the situation. For months past it has been trying to stop the importation of arms, and it is quite likely that a blockade of the Persian gulf, through which this traffic is carried on, may be undertaken. Should a war with Afghanistan result, it is considered here that the entente with Russia would make it a much less formidable affair than before, and frontier officers express the belief that a British force could be in Kabul a fortnight after crossing the frontier.

Moore Is Still Wizard of Finance.

New York, Oct. 4.—According to a story published Saturday afternoon, Charles W. Morse has made $7,500,000 since he was released from the Tombs in June 17, cancelling all his indebtedness except $500,000, which he expects to clear away in a short time.

He is quoted to crediting his indictment to Theodore Roosevelt's desire to find a suitable "scapegoat" for the panic of 1907 and its effects on which Morse's fortune of $25,000,000 was [illegible]

Miner's Story Not Accepted.

Kingston, Oct. 4.—For throwing a stone at Geo. Snowdon, inflicting serious injuries, James McManus, aged 18, was given five months in jail by Judge Price. Both are employed at the locomotive works, where the assault occurred. Had McManus shown sorrow for his action he would have been allowed out on suspended sentence, but on the other hand he was very brazen. He has already been in jail three weeks. For a time Snowden's life was despaired of.

Captain Sealby Loses.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 4.—Captain Inman Sealby, commander of the White Star Line steamer Republic, when she sunk last February by the Italian steamer Florida, has entered the University of Michigan as a freshman law student. He is 50 years old.

The collision and the litigation which has followed to determine the responsibility for it turned Captain Sealby's attention to admiralty law and its opportunities.

Deadly Battle Over Estate.

Moultrie, Ga., Oct. 4.—At the old homestead of the late Nathan Flowers in the lower part of the county, Bert Williams is dead, Wright Flowers is dying, and it is believed Wm. Flowers is fatally hurt, as the result of a fierce six-handed battle with rifles and pistols over a dispute about the division of the estate of Nathan Flowers.

They GUARANTEE "Little Digesters" to cure. If they fail, you get your money back promptly and without question.

Of course they would not make such positive statements, or give such a guarantee, if they had not proved, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that "Little Digesters" WILL CURE.

Wheat Is Up to $1.10 Per Bushel.

Quarter Million of Them Will Campaign in Britain.

London, Oct. 4.—It is expected that when the general election takes place women will play a greater part in the fight than ever before. Some 250,000 will enroll themselves as electioneers. They are members of the Women's Liberal-Unionist and Tariff Reform Associations, the Primrose League, the Women's Liberal Federation, the Women's National Liberal Association, the Women's Social and Political Union, the Women's Freedom League, and the Women's Union of Suffrage Societies.

Their activities will be various. The Primrose League will work against the budget, the Women's Political Union against the Liberal candidates, the Women's Liberal Federation against the Conservatives, and the Suffragette Union against any candidate not favoring the franchise for women.

The opinion exists that it will be the hardest fought and most riotous election ever known in England. Thousands of members of the different women's societies are already enrolled.

The belief that the general election will be held in January grows stronger every day, but it cannot be said that either side shows similar unanimity of opinion as to whether an election will then suit their book. There are undoubtedly grave fears in the Unionist ranks that an election will mean the return of the present Government. The Spectator strongly urges the House of Lords to accept the budget, eight or twelve months' experience of which, it declares, will convert the issues and send the Unionists back with a great triumph. No one, however, seems to doubt that January or February will see an election.

Fatal Fall From Tree.

Blenheim, Oct. 4.—Milton, the 20-year-old son of J. D. McPherson, a farmer near here, stopped to climb a hickory nut tree on his way home from the back farm Saturday afternoon, and fell forty feet to the ground. He was carried home on a wagon and surgeons discovered that his spine had been fractured in two places and dislocated. No hope is entertained for his recovery.

RIOTOUS SCENES IN THE DOUMA

St. Peterburg, Oct. 4.—Russia's legislative year begins in October. After a conference with Premier Stolypin, a statement has been issued by M. Khomiakoff, speaker of the Douma, announcing the sessional program, which is more important than any since the establishment of the Douma. It says:

"Government bills will be introduced for the Douma's ratification on the creation of local courts, immunity from arrest without a regular warrant, and the responsibility of officials before the ordinary courts.

M. Khomiakoff says he fears violent scenes in the Douma emanating from the extreme right, which is becoming desperate at the prospect of the elected representatives becoming a permanent and important part of the legislative system.

Cook to Address Canadian Club.

New York, Oct. 4.—Dr. Cook set at rest yesterday all speculation as to the probable acceptance of an invitation to both himself and Commander Peary to be guests at a dinner to be given by the Canadian Club on Dec. 3. It was thought one or both of the explorers would feel obligated to decline the invitation. He did not know or care in the least whether Peary was to be present.

Peary did not care to say positively whether he would attend the dinner, but intimated he would probably not be able to accept.

Pope Plus Unless Cheer This Winter.

Rome, Oct. 4.—Cardinal Merry del Val, papal secretary of state, will return to Rome this month from Monte Mario, where he has been spending part of the summer. During one of his weekly visits to Rome he told the Pope how he regretted that his holiness was forced to remain in Rome throughout the summer.

The Pope answered: "Oh, I do not mind it at all. In fact, I prefer summer to winter, as then the doctor bids me to keep to my room, and thus helps me to realise that I am a prisoner, while in summer my daily walks in the garden make me almost forget the sad fact. Besides, I am fully reconciled to my fate."

Site of Central Prison.

London, Ont., Oct. 4.—It is rumored that the location of the new Central prison may be in the vicinity of London.

Mr. Beck stated that the spot chosen was not near the city. From his information obtainable it is thought to be farther east.

Another rumor is to the effect that it will be located between Lake Huron and the town of Forest.

COLLEGIATE TEAM WINS FINE VICTORY OVER THE TRINITY COLLEGE SCHOOL

To encounter a much heavier team, to be apparently beaten with but fifteen minutes to play and then to pull the game out of the fire by the gamest kind of a game finish is an achievement that should make the members and supporters of any team feel proud. That is what the Collegiate Rugby team did on Saturday afternoon in their match at Riverside Park with the senior team of the Trinity College School, Port Hope. At half time the visitors heavier all along the line than the local students and looking to be in the pink of condition were ahead by 5 points to 0 and in the second half ran their total to eleven before the locals had once crossed their line.

The Peterborough team was fighting gamely but it looked as if their task was hopeless with little better than fifteen minutes left. Finally however Peterborough scored a rouge and at once the tide turned. From that time on the visitors were fighting with their backs to the wall while the locals swinging suddenly from the defensive to the attack passed on with a vigour and a vim that would not be denied, they ran up the score rapidly until the finish found them 14 points to 11, the last try and convert coming but a few minutes before time was called. It was a great finish to a fine game of Rugby in which both teams showed fine form and fought for every ounce that was in them until the final whistle.

The fairly large crowd in which was noticeable a large number of "co-eds" from the Collegiate was present and the spectators were delighted with the game and especially with the manner in which it terminated. Sizing up the two teams before the game there were few who hoped for a victory for the locals. The visitors were rangy, stockily built youths, taller and heavier than the local youngsters and it was thought that their weight, to say nothing of their constant and systematic practice, would be too much for Peterborough. For a while this opinion seemed to be all too true. The visitors had the better of the early stages and at half time there seemed little chance of a Peterborough victory and the locals' stock took another slump after half time when T.C.S. scored a lucky try which was converted neatly. The rally o fthe Petes was surprising as it was correspondingly pleasant and the spectators went wild with enthusiasm when the try that meant victory for the Collegiate was scored.

It was a splendid game between two well trained teams who played the game as it should be played. Both teams tackled magnificently, a high tackle being a very rare occurrence. Both teams went hard and low and the man with the ball was generally toppled over in a hurry. There was little difference either in the tactics employed by the two teams although the T.C.S. seemed to depend more on the running ability of the halves than did the Collegiate, who for the most part worked into the line with bucks and short end runs. Not until they began to kick the ball did Peterborough look like winners. In the early stages playing a bucking game they several times lost the ball on downs and were for the most part on the defensive until in the middle of the second half Richardson began to boot the ball and there was a change in the situation almost immediately. None of the T.C.S. backs seemed to have a very sure pair of hands and as the locals followed up in great style the visitors soon found themselves fighting desperately to stave off defeat when a few minutes before they had anticipated an easy victory. The complexion of affairs never changed as from the moment that Peterborough once scored they were always knocking on the door while the ball was rarely in any part of their territory from then on.

Every member of the Peterborough team had his share in the victory as without exception they played fine Rugby all the way. Everyone worked for all that was in him and they were irresistible when they got under way. Gibson and Burritt on the back division were called upon to take care of the kicks from the other side and they caught superbly only one fumble being recorded during the afternoon. Gibson's work in running the ball back was a feature. It generally took two or three men to stop him when he got into his stride and in addition he did a lot of useful line plunging while his tackling as usual helped. Burritt scored the last try by following up. Richardson at centre half was reliable and kicked splendidly while Rankin, the left half was used to advantage as an extra man on the wing line when on the defensive and in end runs and bucking when on the attack. The backs worked in some pretty criss crosses during the afternoon that gained ground for them.

Geale's playing at quarter was one of the outstanding features of the contest. Early in the game he received a bad bump on the head and he was hurt several times afterwards but he never let up for a moment and his deadly tackling and all round good playing had much to do with the victory of the locals. When T.C.S. had the ball Geale time after time pulled down the runner for a big loss. Hall and Conroy, the outside wings were also conspicuous by their tackling which was hard and low and runs around the end were scarce. The other man on the line gave their backs the best of protection, while they followed up and tackled splendidly.

The visitors' back division were big and fast. Conyers, the centre half did some fine bootings and Martin showed speed on several occasions although the tackling of the locals was too accurate to let him get away on any record breaking trips. Armour, at full back fumbled badly in the last half. On the wing Mss McGann and Laing did good work.

The teams lined up as follows:

T.C.S.		Collegiate
Armour	Backs	Burritt
Martin		Rankin
Coonyers	Halves	Richardson
Lindsay		Gibson
MacAuley	Quarter	Geale
Carswell		Leahy
Ambery	Scrimmage	Hogan
Urch		Harstone
Mackinie	Inside Wings	Kelly
Savage		Gilbert
Ross	Middle Wings	Minorgan
McGann		Matthews
Mallory	Outside Wings	Conroy
Laing		Hall

Play was very even at the start with the visitors having a little the better of the argument. Neither did much kicking in the first quarter and the tactics used by both resulted in lot of close playing with but little open work. Gradually the T.C.S. gained ground until at last Martin bucked over for a try which was not converted and the score at half time was 5 to 0 in favour of the visitors.

Early in the second half T.C.S. scored a fluky try. The Collegiate were working down the field with the ball in a way that aroused the enthusiasm of the spectators. Twice they had made their yards in two downs and the third time as Richardson went through for a five yard gain, one of the visitors stole the ball and tore for the Peterborough line. The Collegiate team evidently expecting that he would be called back, let him go and he went over for an easy try which Martin converted and the score was 11 to 0 in favour of the visitors.

Peterborough's case looked hopeless but they started to kick the ball and the fortunes changed. A fumble by Armour of a long punt carried the battle into T.C.S. territory and Richardson kicked over the line for a rouge the first point of the game. T.C.S. wings were off side in the kick off and it was Peterborough's ball at the twenty-five yard mark. From that point after a series of bucks and short end runs, Richardson bucked for a try. Geale missed converting by a foot. Score Peterborough 6, T.C.S. 11.

A few moments after Richardson ticked over the line in trying for the onside kick. He got the ball just a little too far for the original object but it worked just as well as Burritt following up fast grabbed the ball from Martin as he started to run it out, and dropped on the pigskin for a try. Geale converted neatly and Peterborough held the visitors safe for the remaining time.

PLAYING RUGBY

Carrying the Ball and Tackling.

FIFTH ARTICLE.

Getting and retaining the ball from its reception until the play is stopped is a detail often overlooked. In end runs or in an open field, the ball should be grasped with the outside arm, the other being used to straight arm tacklers.

The rear end of the ball should be tucked snugly against the body, under the upper arm, the lower end grasped with hand and lower arm. If thrown the runner should protect the ball with his free hand, to insure its retention.

In line plunges the ball is held tightly against the pit of the stomach, both arms and hands being used to hold it tightly. No matter what happens, the runner's one thought must be to retain the ball. At times a line plunge is so successful that the runner shakes the tacklers. At such times the ball must be shifted under the arm, giving a better chance to run.

Practise tackling. Unless the tackle is sure and effective the man tackled will continue to advance. The tackled man must be brought down.

In every tackle, under all circumstances, the tackler must aim at a point midway between the knees and hips. Both arms should go around the legs. Every effort should be directed toward driving the tackled man backward. The tackler's shoulder striking the runner's leg is effective.

The long tackle in the open field is spectacular. Planting himself in the runner's path and diving at the proper distance, much after the fashion of a diver in the water, the tackler should get all the speed possible into the dive.

Don't tackle too low, or the runner will wriggle loose or leap away from danger. The most thrilling tackle is the long dive from behind, the tackle that so often downs a man near the goal line after a long chase across the field.

EXAMINER RACES TAKE PLACE THREE WEEKS FROM TO-DAY

Three weeks from to-day will be Thanksgiving Day and on that day the Examiner Road Races which have come to be looked upon as the chief feature of the holiday will be run. Already a large number of runners are in training for the events, which promise to be the most successful on record if one can judge from the early interest that has been shown in the two events.

The scope of both races has been enlarged by making the contests open to all bona fide residents of Peterborough and the adjoining counties which should ensure a larger field of entries than ever before. Several runners from Port Hope will take part and it is expected that Lindsay may also furnish starters for the senior event. A number of Indians will take part and it is expected that the Chemong, Hiawatha and Oldervills reserves will all be represented. The distance and conditions of the race will be the same as in other years. The course will be as usual from Lakefield to the Examiner office, while the Juniors will run from five miles out.

The junior race is confined to boys under eighteen years of age and will likely have the biggest field that has yet faced the starter. The youngsters are already getting into shape and with good weather the junior race record should be broken.

Arrangements are being completed for the races and the prizes offered this year will be fully up to the high standard set in the past.

In to-night's paper will be found an entrance coupon, which those desiring to enter either race are requested to fill out and send to the sporting editor of the Examiner at once. Entries will close on Saturday morning, Oct. 23rd at 10 o'clock for local starters.

EASY FOR THE RIDERS

Ottawas Defeated Montreal Saturday by 25-14---Winged Wheel Team Weakened by Absence of Several Stars.

OTTAWA ON THE BIT

Ottawa, Oct. 3.---The Ottawas had little difficulty in beating the Montreal team in the opening game of the Interprovincial Union at Varsity Oval on Saturday. Montreal came up with a crippled team, and the Ottawas playing with the wind and sun behind their backs in the first quarter, gained a safe lead. In the second and third quarters they again outclassed the visitors. Montreal ohly looked good in the fourth, when they ran their score from 3 to 14, the final score being 25 to 14 in favour of Ottawa.

Ottawa started the scoring with three rouges in the first minute of play. Williams and the other Ottawa backs kicking with the wind. Then Williams bluffed a drop for goal and ran through a broken field for a try which he failed to convert. Gerard, a new man, who played a brilliant game, scored Ottawa's second touch on a long run, Williams converting and dropping a goal from the field a minute later. At the close of the first quarter it was 15 to 1 for Ottawa, Montreal's solitary rouge coming right near the finish.

Montreal, even with the high wind, could do nothing against the strong Ottawa line in the second quarter, the Ottawas keeping possession of the pigskin, and allowing Montreal only two rouges. In the third Gerard intercepted a pass to Hamilton and ran over the Montreal line, Williams converting. Ottawa got four more rouges, and it was 25 to 3 when the fourth started. Then Montreal rallied, but it was too late for them to hope to pull out.

The Montreal back division was good, Hamilton, Duckett and Stinson being very effective at times, but their wing line was weak, and their scrimmage not in it with Ottawa's. The home team tore the opposing line to pieces when they had the ball, the Ottawa wings giving Stinson and his backs no opportunity. On the other hand, the Ottawa backs got great protection, Montreal seldom getting down on them. Baillie worked hard at quarter for Montreal, but the line in front of him was so loose and unsteady that he had no chance to run with it or buck through for gains. The play was clean, Kilt being the only man to go to the bench. Dr. Hendry and Harry Griffiths of Toronto handled the match in faultless fashion. The weather was fair and the attendance about four thousand.

SHAMS WIN THE FIRST

Irishmen Beat Montreal in the Rain With a Free-for-All Fight as a Climax to a Hard Fought Contest.

SECOND ON SATURDAY

Montreal, Oct. 3.---Shamrocks won the first games to be played between the Montreal and Shamrock clubs for the N.L.U. championship. The game was played upon a wet, slippery field, and during a large part of the afternoon a heavy rain fell. Nearly four thousand people were present.

Montreal started in strong and scored two goals before Shamrocks got going. As Montreal won out in their last match it looked like a Montreal victory, but Shamrocks soon got into their stride and made things interesting.

The wet grounds were unfavourable to the fast, light Montreal men and they seemed to suffer more than the heavy Irishmen. The wet, slippery ground and the importance of the match seeemd to give the players short tempers and rough work was frequent. This continued throughout the match. At the end there came the big row. A Montreal man hit a Shamrock man, there was a fight and the crowd from the bleachers rushed on to the field. The crowd rushed the teams by force to the clubhouse, the players fighting more or less all of the way. It appears that just when the fight started, in which Munday and Hogan were the principals, time was up, and as soon as the referees realized this they made tracks for safe quarters. The fight continued to the clubhouse, but the belligerents were finally separated. The final score was 7 to 5, but as the total number of goals scored in the two matches count the Montreal team has a good chance to pull out ahead on their own grounds next Saturday.

CANNOT PROVE AGENCY.

Election Protest Trial is Stopped in Prince Edward Island.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Oct. 2.—The counsel for the petitioner in the trial of the election petition against A. L. Fraser, M.P., Conservative for King's, announced that they had decided not to take further evidence. Although evidence had been submitted to show corrupt practices, the difficulty was to establish agency. The dismissal of the petition was, therefore, asked for. The judges stated that they could not dismiss the case, but after three hours' consideration of the evidence they found that the evidence of the extensive use of liquor and treating was admitted, but agency had not been established, though this might have been done had the case been carried further. They confirmed Mr. Fraser in his seat, but said they would report to the Speaker that there should be further enquiry.

The proceedings stopped as the result of an agreement between the parties, whereby the counter-petition against J. J. Hughes, Fraser's opponent, is to be withdrawn; also the case, against Hughes for violation of the independence of Parliament Act. Fraser is to pay the cost of the election trial.

It is understood also that the petition against Prowse, Liberal for Queen's, will be dropped.

"JUDGE NOT THAT YE BE NOT JUDGED."

A very interesting and very pathetic drama showing the bitter feeling of a son towards his father because he is an ex-convict, and how the son is punished by becoming a convict himself, although through no fault of his own, and how the two at last realize that good people may do wrong.

"AN EVENTFUL TRIP"

Some unusual trick picture the audience witnesses many funny incidents. An Englishman and wife and maid-servant start on a trip by train, and if you want to see all the fun they had don't miss the Royal to-night and to-morrow.

SUFFER LITTLE CHILDREN * * * FOR SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF LABOUR.

This is one of the Edison Co.'s best dramas. It tells a story of how children are worked to death in factories in large cities, where men should be employed to do the work. It is a picture that all those interested in the Labour Question or the Union should not fail to see. There is a very happy ending to this story, teeming with pathos and dramatic interests.

Miss Lothian will sing a most pleasing song:—"Oh! Where is My Boy To-night."

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The improvements at "The Royal" are now far advanced, and there will be no danger of overcrowding. Lots of room for everyone at any time.

Arctic Snow Girls Who Helped Peary and Cook

THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE ARCTIC CRADLE — BRIDE OF ETAH

Look at the snow girls. They are the belles of Etah, who helped Peary and Cook when they left their brothers and fathers and sweethearts and go away on long hikes to take the white man to the top of the world.

And it was no small help, because the white man could never have succeeded but for the hardy Eskimos.

In the larger picture you can see how the flower of Eskimo society dresses. Those fur clothes must have been a forerunner of the sheath gown, for they are divided in true northern style. For want of a better name the waists may be called Eskimonos.

The topknot you see on one of the girls, a peculiar headdress is a sign of spinsterhood in Eskimo land. Both Commander Peary and Dr. Cook tell how there are not enough wives to go around; consequently the topknot does not exist on the head very long.

In the smaller picture an Eskimo mother is shown. The papooses of these northern wilds are the hardiest in the world. The hand that rules the snow world was photographed in the Baffins Bay country.

BURNING NINE DAYS

Farmer, Named Yagerson, is Burned to Death and His Niece in Effort to Complete Fireguard, is Suffering From Burns That May Cost Her Her Life—The Loss to Settlement in Tens of Millions.

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 5.—One life is lost and another is seriously endangered, and there is a report that two million dollars' worth of property was destroyed by a fire which started northeast of Hutton, Alta., and has been raging since Saturday week. The flames were checked at Hutton without any loss to the town, but not [illegible]

Mr. Yagerson was mowing his fire-guard when the first signs of the fire became apparent. Leaving his niece, Mary Segelstad, to check the flames by continuing the plowing of the fire-guard, Yagerson set off to assist the assembled homesteaders in fighting the flames for the possession of their homes. The smoke was so suffocating that by the time he reached the scene he fell senseless before the rapidly-advancing flames had reached them. Sergt. Fletcher and Constable Bruce of the R.N.W.M.P., who were among the most energetic of the firefighters, took charge of the unfortunate settler's body.

His niece, who is at present in Columbia Hospital suffering from very serious burns, and who was hit to play the fireguard, is the victim of her stern devotion to duty. It was but at the last moment that she left the team to take her one remaining chance of escape. She was caught by the flames, and is now lying in Columbia Hospital. The heroic young woman was brought into Bassano by Charles Parks, a rancher in the devastated district, and from there placed on a train for Calgary.

"It is estimated that the loss will easily run into millions," says Mr. Mercer, of township 27, section 7, range 10, who was a witness to some of the most pathetic scenes. "The sufferers are nearly all new settlers and have not yet got a foothold in the country."

Another loser in the big fire is Dr. Cameron Gordon of Los Angeles, who owns a half section of land in the burned district. The fire is still raging fiercely, and the people of the entire district are engaged in fighting the flames, but the full extent of the disaster will not be known for a few days.

Mr. B. Agent Ends Life.

London, Eng., Oct. 5.—Charles A. Duff Miller, agent-general of New Brunswick in London since 1896, fell from a window at Margate Sunday and was killed. Mr. Miller was born at Kingston, Ont., in 1834.

At the time of his death Mr. Miller was staying in a sanitarium on account of nervous trouble. Miller while being from one room to another ran away from the attendant and dashed down the corridor and jumped through a window.

At the inquest yesterday the jury returned a verdict that the deceased met his death by accidentally falling from a window.

Postal Monument Unveiled.

Berne, Oct. 5.—In the presence of the president of the Swiss Republic and delegates representing most of the countries composing the International Postal Union, M. Millerand, the French Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, inaugurated yesterday the colossal monument commemorating the International Postal Union. It comprises five figures representing the geographical divisions of the world. Europe is symbolized by a Caucasian, Asia by a Japanese, Africa by a negress, America by a Red Indian, and Oceania by a Kanaka, who whirls the globe.

Lived With Bullet in Brain.

Washington, Oct. 5.—With a bullet in his brain, Nichol Lewis, aged 37, walked to his house yesterday from the Casualty Hospital, where he has been undergoing treatment since receiving the injury a week ago. An X-ray photograph shows that the brain cells have knitted around the bullet and formed a sack for it.

Woman Brutally Treated.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 5.—Mrs. W. B. Scott, wife of a baker, was found in the woodshed of her home gagged and suspended by the wrists from the rafters, so that her toes just touched the floor. Two masked men, who had ransacked the house, had tied her up for more than two hours.

AMAZED NEW YORK

He Starts From Governor Island and Travels Down the Harbor Over the Shipping, Rounds Grant's Tomb, and Makes His Way Back In Thirty-Three Minutes—He Was Cheered All Along the Line.

New York, Oct. 5.—An aeroplane flashed past the white dome of Grant's tomb yesterday, then, turning gracefully in mid-air, over the waters of the Hudson, shot like a falcon back to Governor's Island, ten miles away.

Wilbur Wright of Dayton, Ohio, thus placed his name in the rank with Hudson and Fulton in one of the most spectacular feats in the history of aeroplanes. Over the masts of warships, from whose decks the hoarse cheers of the sailors were borne up to him in his elevated seat, he flew for twenty miles—ten miles each way—remaining in the air for 33 minutes and 33 seconds and alighting at the Aviadrome without mishap.

During the flight business was practically at a standstill in all the part of Manhattan from which a view of his remarkable performance was available.

The flight was made under conditions only moderately favorable. When Wright reached Governor's Island the wind was blowing a ten-mile gale, while an overcast sky added to the uncertainty of the weather. The aviator pulled his cap over his eyes and reached for the starting lever. In a moment the machine was off. With the planes slightly to one side, the man slowly ascended into the air, rising to a height of barely twenty feet, while it swooped in a semi-circle towards the water's edge.

Crafts tooting their whistles caused him to ascend further before making for the mouth of the river. Almost indistinguishable against the gray banks, the machine soared past Old Castle William and soon entered the canon made by the giant scrapers of Manhattan Island and the Jersey Hills.

At this point the aeroplane was flitting at a height of nearly 300 feet, but Wright slowly brought the machine down, singing gradually until it was but a few hundred feet above the tooting ferryboats and the busy river traffic. His motor was churning as regularly as a clock, and, settling himself in his seat, he sped onward up the river.

Over the warships of foreign powers he passed, his progress hailed by the cheers of sailors of his own country and those of England, Germany, France and Italy.

When the aviator reached the British cruiser Argyle, eight miles above Grant's Tomb, Wright brought his machine rushing into play and, describing an easy and graceful curve, started on his return journey down the river.

While the ten-mile up stream occupied nearly twenty minutes, the return flight was made in little more than 13 minutes, or at 47 miles an hour.

Dies Far From Home.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 5.—Muir Wilson, former member of the British Parliament for Birmingham, who became violently insane recently in the Hotel Vancouver here, is dead. He was a wealthy Sheffield manufacturer.

GENTRY THE GAMBLER

He Had a Heart, Although He Was an Unscrupulous Blackleg.

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE.

"Pass," said Dugan mechanically, laying down his cards.

"That puts 'me old,'" remarked the lean Yankee from the Cross Triangle outfit. The third man, Davies, as he called himself, rapped the table with his knuckles indifferently. He was ahead of the game and could afford to lose the pot.

There remained old man Lorry. To him Gentry looked with surprising insouciance. Having dealt the cards, the gambler was disturbed by no doubts as to Lorry's action. He would raise, and promptly. Lorry had cut before the deal, it is true, but Gentry had reversed the cut adroitly, unobtrusively.

Nevertheless, to the gambler's surprise, Lorry was uncommonly slow. He vacillated mentally between caution and cupidity; his weak, red rimmed eyes shone feverishly behind the iron bound glasses, and he chewed nervously upon one end of his ragged, tobacco stained mustache. Finally he slammed his hand upon the table. Gentry arched his brows inquiringly.

"Out!" he asked, motioning toward the discard.

Old man Lorry swore chokingly. "Naw!" he replied. "See yer twenty an' go yer a hundred better."

From the interior of his shirt he produced a roll of bills which the gambler appraised with amusement. He had not thought to find such rich prey. Lorry, conscious that he was creating a sensation, threw two bills upon the table with an oath.

"Steady, pop," cautioned Healy, proprietor of the saloon.

"Mind yer own business," responded old man Lorry sharply.

"And five hundred better," Gentry remarked softly.

"An' five hundred."

"Again."

Lorry glanced uneasily about the table. Healy had turned his back. As for the rest, startled out of their composure by this abrupt change in the complexion of the game, they watched breathlessly.

"Call yer!" continued the old man, disregarding the [illegible] of the fortune in the pot.

"Four an' queen," he added, with an oath, as Gentry displayed his cards. "Better 'n my kings up an' busted"— He broke off, staring blankly at the gambler as he calmly raked in his spoils and passed the cards to Dugan. The latter shook his head, with an air of finality.

"Nope," he said. "No more for me."

"None in mine," agreed the lean Yankee briefly, and Davies nodded assent to the judgment of the others.

Lorry stumbled dispiritedly toward the bar. "Gimme some 'nat, Billy," he demanded.

Gentry arose and placed a fifty in the bartender's hands. "You can pay for the drinks out of that. I'm going to take a little walk to dust off. See you later, gentlemen." He passed on into the threshold, but none answered him.

YOU TAKE IT MIXED WITH AIR.

A Powerful Destroyer of Disease Germs, Which Cures Every Type of Catarrh, Bronchitis and Throat Trouble, Asthma.

Ever since Adam, the air of the pine woods has been known to possess marvellous healing properties. In fact, doctors claim that people living in the balsamic atmosphere of the woods never contract consumption or catarrh.

A new remedy that embraces all the healing curative powers of the pine woods has at last been realized. It contains the balsamic, the Cedrin, and many other antiseptics that make it an absolute cure for all catarrhal diseases.

For years doctors have been looking for just such a remedy, and claim the newly discovered Catarrhozone is the most effectual, the most agreeable cure for catarrh, bronchitis and winter ills they have met.

USED IN ALL HOSPITALS.

So powerfully healing is Catarrhozone that simple colds in the head and coughs can be cured in less than an hour. Chronic catarrh is eradicated from the system in the most thorough manner. It doesn't matter whether the catarrh affects the nose, throat or stomach. It can be completely driven from the system by using fragrant, healing Catarrhozone.

The remotest parts of the lungs and air passages often contain germs of catarrh and consumption which cannot be reached by the ordinary treatment, but the soothing vapor of Catarrhozone carries the antiseptic healing power right to these isolated spots. So thoroughly does Catarrhozone reach all diseased surfaces that it cures for all time, and no relapse need ever be feared.

CATARRHOZONE A SURE CURE.

No matter how long you have suffered from disease of any portion of the breathing organs, it matters not how many disappointments you have sustained from the hundred and one remedies you may have tried, an hour's use of Catarrhozone will afford better results than you could obtain from months use of other remedies.

You can readily understand why this is possible—it is because you breathe it right to the parts that are diseased; immediately the dreadful germs in the throat will loosen, expectorate and soreness grow less, the difficulty of breathing disappear almost as if by magic, and in the majority of cases a very short time is sufficient to effect a radical cure. Druggists sell Catarrhozone. Two months' treatment (guaranteed), price $1.00; smaller size, 50c; by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

and he passed on out into the infinite silent peace of the mountain night.

He walked a few steps along the apology for a road which formed the main street of the half deserted mining village, then halted suddenly.

"Old fool," he muttered impatiently, comforting himself against the thought of the wrong he had done old man Lorry. "He should have known better. Well, what's his loss is my gain. If I hadn't got it some other fellow would."

Gentry lighted a cigar, stuck his hands in his trousers pockets jauntily and retraced his steps toward Healy's. But he did not stop there. Through its open windows fragments of an argument floated to his ears, punctuated with old man Lorry's voice insisting that he had been shorn. That was quite true, but the gambler did not wish to discuss the question with him since of necessity it would mean eventual bloodshed. He stepped quickly past the fan of light which the doorway threw across the road and began an ascent of the mountain trail. He would return ere long, when things were quieted, saddle his horse and ride on to the next camp.

The night air was warm and soothing with the balm of the pine scent. The gambler strolled beneath a high, broad arched, brilliant sky, fretted with bright stars. But from these he kept his face. His thoughts were too near to the earth for contemplation of the firmament. As he left the straggling village behind him he entered upon a great, sweet solitude whose escapade was in the mystery of night upon the mountains. The road wound temptingly on, a forest aisle empty, dusty, now white in the glare of the heavens, now blackly shadowed by massed pines, through whose interstices the starlight fell.

Presently the gambler came upon a little clearing to which, set at a distance back from the road and surrounded by a dilapidated picket fence, was a small cabin, vine clad. Its windows shone dimly with yellow lamplight, this although the hour was past midnight. As he stopped, puffing speculatively upon his cigar, a voice hailed him—a feminine voice, singularly rich in intonation and clear—and at that, as made out a slender figure swaying upon the gate of the fence. He tossed away his smoke, removed his slouch hat and approached.

"Good evening," he said courteously.

"Howdy, stranger? Be you from Pumpkin down yonder?"

She failed to repress a start. The unconfidence of the words, the strong touch of dialect, was so distinctly out of keeping with what the beauty of the girl's voice had led him to expect. And, now that he could see her, there was positive refinement of manner in the free, wholly charming, upturned to him.

"Yes," he answered her.

The girl regarded him with unconcealed curiosity. "As what might be your name, stranger?"

"Mason," he told her, without wondering why he should be insisting a reason.

"Oh," she sighed, with evident relief. "I didn't know—from yer style, yer know—but what yer might be Gentry."

"Who's Gentry?"

"Aw—a gambler what I heerd had come to town. Pappy went down early tonight to get in the game with him. Say, Mr. Mason, did yer see my pappy down there?"

"I don't know, really. Who"—

"Lorry," she interrupted. "Ole man Lorry. They call him, mostly. Did yer see him around?"

"Come to think of it, I did." He smiled blandly upon her to conceal a strong uneasiness.

"Was he drinkin'?" she continued anxiously.

"I—I didn't notice that he was."

"He warn't playin' with that hound Gentry, was he?"

"No," said the honest heartily. "Gentry left town today, I hear."

"That's good!" She smiled at the gambler, shading her beautiful eyes with a deep fringe of sparrel lashes. "He'll only come home drunk, then," she added petulantly. "I don't mind that. Never had to manage a man, did yer, stranger?"

"Only myself," he laughed.

"Then yer don't know anythin' about it—the trouble, I mean. Pappy's an old fool. He don't know no more about poker 'n a tenderfoot, an' he thinks he knows it all. He—he"— She hesitated.

"Well?" he encouraged her.

"Aw—nothin', only he needs a strike a little while ago. It wasn't much of a strike, only a couple of thousand, and he promised to send me back east—to the home folks, yer know—next week."

"And?" said Gentry softly.

"That was the money he took to gamble with," she laughed, a trifle nervously. "Now, look, send me back style—with the winnin's. Well, you long's Gentry ain't there I reckon I may get a chance to get some of them winnin's, after all. If I can keep him home till next week. Goin' already, stranger?"

"Yes. I must hit the trail early tomorrow, Miss Lorry."

"Waal, so long. If yer see the old man start him along home, will yer? Thanks, an' good night to yer, Mr. Mason."

Some distance down the trail the gambler stumbled over the prostrate form of a man. With something of a strong premonition Gentry turned the body over and lit a match to see the face.

It was old man Lorry, hopelessly intoxicated, sleeping the dead sleep of alcohol.

"There's most of my fifty," remarked the gambler grimly. "It's like throwing good money after bad. I'm a darned fool."

To prove his assertion he took from his wallet the bills of which he had robbed the miner and stuffed them in the latter's pockets. Then he hoisted him to his feet, planning to see him home. To his wonder, Gentry found that the man, once afoot, was able to walk after a fashion. He marched along unsteadily, but made progress toward his cabin.

The gambler followed him to the clearing, stopping noiselessly, then turned and went back for his horse and his last glimpse of Healy's.

A One Armed Pianist.

Count Geza Zichy, president of the National Conservatory of Music at Budapest, celebrated his eightieth birthday on July 16, pertaining to the event, a Vienna paper speaks of him as a unique figure in the musical world. "If we are justified in saying that Raphael would have been a great painter even if he had no arms," says the writer, "we may certainly say that Zichy was a great pianist, although he had but one arm. He was fourteen years old when he lost his right arm as a hunting [illegible], but notwithstanding this handicap he continued his study of music and became so proficient as a performer that he played with great skill the works of Chopin and other composers. In 1868 he made his first appearance before the public as a pianist and has since that time played at hundreds of concerts, always for the benefit of some charitable institution. He composed several operas and in 1875 became the director of the Hungarian Opera at Budapest."

Foam For Oil Fires.

The Germans have perfected a solution for killing oil fires with foam. The apparatus employed consists of a simple metal cylinder provided with a long spout and divided into chambers. One chamber is charged with an aqueous solution of potash-alum and sodium sulphate, the other with a similar solution of sodium bicarbonate, sodium sulphate and licorice root extract. The cylinder is so arranged that on being reversed the two solutions mingle as they issue from the spout. The result is a prompt evolution of carbon dioxide, which, in contact with the licorice solution, forms an exceedingly stiff and persistent foam. Hosts of fire departments have tested this [illegible] and pronounced the foam fire extinguisher a success. They say it will prove especially valuable in all places where combustible liquors are stored, such as groceries, drug stores, [illegible]

The Earl of Aberdeen.

The Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, the Earl of Aberdeen, who suggested the withdrawal of Mr. Bernard Shaw's play, "Blanco Posnet," is a man of strong view and does not hesitate to express them. A characteristic act was witnessed some years ago, when he was Governor-General of Canada. He was present at a concert in Melbourne at which Mme. Melba was the principal artiste. His lordship found the National Anthem was omitted from the program, and at the close of the concert the audience were preparing to depart without that expression of loyalty being given effect to. His lordship quickly jumped to his feet and in his clear voice commenced singing the first line of "God Save the Queen." The effect was electrical. The audience bounded to their feet, with uncovered heads, and swelled the chorus, showing clearly that the omission was not of their choosing.

Reminiscences of Tom Sayers.

After serving the Great Eastern Railway Company for nearly half a century, Mr. W. Sterling is about to retire. At one time he was station-master at Newmarket, and on a certain occasion a number of passengers missed a special train back to London. Mr. Sterling was surrounded by a crowd of angry men, who demanded that a train should be at once provided for them. When things began to look serious Tom Sayers, then English champion at the prize-ring, took the perplexed stationmaster under his protection. To the race crowd Sayers briefly explained who he was, and offered to floor the first person who interfered. There was no disturbance after that.

The Golden Wedding.

A servant asking her mistress to leave from Friday to Monday to visit her mother a long journey away, to all the family desired to meet to celebrate their parents' golden wedding. The mistress gave permission, and on Monday the maid duly returned, and her mistress said to her:

"Well, Mary, how did you get on?"

"Oh, splendid, ma'am, and mother was so grateful to you for letting me go."

"Yes, and your father—what did he say?"

"Lor' bless you, ma'am, he wasn't there; he died twenty years ago!"

The Perpetual Optimist.

Baseball's an uncertain game,
Some days one runs to catch the fence,
While they whoop it up an' win
Other days one must race an' grin,
But the tide will turn, an' then—
Just you wait till summer ten!

Here is a New Kind of Soap

You are now using some soap and naturally think it is good. But here is a kind that is different from any you know—one that has taken us 43 years to perfect.

Try one cake and compare it with what you now use. We welcome such a test as this for we know in advance the result. You will never go back to the other kind. Here is a soap made from vegetable oil pure enough to use on your table. We pay far more for this in France than we might pay. So we get only the best.

Cocoanut oil from the Isle of Ceylon is brought over 12,000 miles and mixed with the olive oil. These both are boiled doubly long.

After this we mill them by our own special process. We have secured the best factories of England, Russia and Austria for almost half a century to perfect this process. We have combined the best ideas of foreign lands with our own improvements to attain perfection.

When milled, the soap [illegible] flakes of snowy [illegible] enormous bins and is then crushed under a weight of [illegible] ton to the square foot the moment it [illegible] through [illegible] grinding rollers and comes out in [illegible] of silky richness.

After [illegible] dried eight weeks it is pressed into cakes and is simply perfect soap. It lathers into a rich creamy foam and wears to a thin wafer. It leaves the skin rosy and pink like the baby's. So we call it Infants' Delight.

The perfume is [illegible] to suggest only the delicate scent of the roses. Do you realize today and see what a wonderful difference there may be in soap.

SCOTTISH WEALTH.

How Wealthy English Statesmen Get Their Money.

Royalty loses hold by what their favorites "do" in the city. Often enough they fare in the midst of prevailing throes who fall into disrepute. Take the case of the founder of the house of Portland, for instance, who was but a page-boy to William Prince of Orange, his name being [illegible] William Bentinck. [illegible] became confidential adviser to the prince, and earned the latter's gratitude by nursing him [illegible] an attack of smallpox.

Royalty, it has been said, has short memories for services rendered, but in this case the saying was belied. For after the prince's accession to the British throne he proceeded to bestow lands and titles on his former page with such lavish generosity that in 1689 the Commons stepped in and insisted that some of the gifts should be cancelled. In spite of this, however, the former page-boy managed to secure nearly a dozen estates, which formed the nucleus of the 183,000 acres which the present Duke of Portland owns, the Scottish portion of which, 106,456 acres, brings in a rental of close upon $750,000.

William III. created his favorite successively a baron, a viscount, and an earl, and when the latter died in 1709 he was worth $5,000,000, and was believed, thanks to the generosity of the King, to be the richest subject in England. This is but 200 years ago, and no other noble house can claim to have acquired such rank and possessions in so short a space of time.

Successive marriages with great heiresses have increased the wealth of the Bentincks enormously, not the least interesting of these being that of the second duke to Lady Margaret Harley, who, in addition to thousands of acres of land in Derbyshire, possessed Bulstrode Castle and the famous Welbeck Abbey, while by another marriage with the heiress of Cirk, Scott, of Pitlessie, they acquired 170,000 acres in California.

Four years before the death, which occurred in 1879, of the eccentric fifth duke—the man who placed Welbeck Abbey in the builder's hands for four-and-twenty years, and spent a fortune constructing underground rooms and passages—his income was estimated at $1,500,000 a year, and it was increasing every day. Exactly what the income of the present duke is, it is doubtful if he himself knows. But it is probably nearer $2,500,000 than $1,500,000, in spite of the fact that the late duke left his London property, the manor of Marylebone, which includes all those valuable ground rents which may be located by the names of Welbeck street, Cavendish square, Portland place, Great Portland street, and Great Titchfield street, to his sisters, the Dowager Lady Ossington and the Dowager Lady Howard de Walden.

The latter was the grandmother of the present Lord Howard de Walden, the richest bachelor in England; or in addition to 222 acres in London, which bring him in an annual rental of $14,500,000, he possesses much property in Ayrshire, also inherited from his grandmother, and he is ground landlord of practically the whole town of Kirkintilloch, with its flourishing tanning factories and iron foundries.

Dress in Shakespeare's Day.

The Elizabethan women did not carry a barrel about their hips but they carried a corresponding bulk. What would correspond to a skirt in our time was then called a farthingale. This name, however, was properly applied to the framework of whalebone and wire which a woman buckled on before she began to dress. It clamped her tightly about the waist and was absolutely rigid. This style gave curve lines the waisting downward, the other extended level from the waist, and met the vertical line of drapery at right angles. In neither case the nether garments were supported by this framework, much as to support the modern wash or a celery dresser.

We hear of ruffs that contained eighteen or nineteen yards of linen. The fashionable depth was one-fourth of a yard. Sometimes they were as much as one-third of a yard deep. Imagine the head of a man or woman, like the hub of a cart-wheel, firmly gripped in the midst of a mass of starched linen extending a foot on all sides! So cumbersome were these articles of dress that it became necessary to underprop them with a framework of wire to keep them from crushing over of their own weight, and to prevent them from dragging their wearers' heads down with them.

Eastern warriors generally wear hair in their headpieces. It is thought to give them a martial appearance. But Alexander's invincible soldiers were all bare faced. He compelled them to shave for a sufficient reason—viz., lest the "notable barberians" of Asia should seize them by their beards and so capture them.

YOUTHFUL TERRITORIALS.

Britain's New Army of Recognized Boy Cadets Flourishing.

Now that the Territorial Army is practically in full development, the War Office is turning its attention to the organization of cadet corps formed of lads over 12 years of age. The authorities have just issued in a draft form the regulations for cadet corps, which are to be submitted to the Territorial Associations for comment. The regulations, if approved, will not have effect before the beginning of the financial year 1910-11. The cadet corps mentioned in the new regulations must not be confused with what were known as the cadet corps before the days of the Territorial scheme. These latter, raised by all the great public schools, are now officers' training corps, and have their definite place in recruiting for the commissioned ranks of the Territorial Force. The cadet corps with which the new rules deal are those partially organized bodies belonging to many of the secondary and elementary schools. The rules state that a county organization shall not give official recognition to any cadet corps, under the new system, "unless it is likely to furnish recruits to the Territorial Force." Cadet corps, also, must be self-supporting, except for grants in kind. These grants will include:

Thirty rounds of miniature ammunition per man, under certain conditions.

Rifles or carbines and [illegible] such as are available.

Every cadet corps will be affiliated, as soon as it is properly organized and [illegible] with a unit of the Territorial Force. Cadets who enlist direct into a Territorial unit may, at the commanding officer's discretion, be examined some or all of the customary recruit drills. Moreover, their cadet service [illegible] the age of 17 will be allowed to count for the Territorial Force Decoration. In the ordinary way cadets will only be allowed to stay in their corps until they are eligible to join the Territorials, except in school corps, when they will be allowed to stay as long as they are at the school. No boy under the age of 12 will be admitted to any corps. Arms carried by recognized cadets will be exempt from gun license duty. To assist county associations in meeting necessary charges, they will receive annually a grant calculated at the rate of 25s. for every 100 efficient cadets.

Natural Mummies.

Natural mummification, the shrinkage of the human body into a dried condition without artificial treatment, is an extremely rare phenomenon. In a case reported by the Hon. S. Wolfsohn of British Honduras, a middle-aged Creole who disappeared was found more than a year afterward in a corrugated iron hut, as a perfectly preserved mummy. The hut, in a somewhat isolated spot at Stann, was raised on blocks four or five feet above the ground, and had a door and three shutters, one shutter being open, while one had fallen out. The body was clothed in cotton underskirt, dark jersey, and duck trousers, two pieces of rope around the neck proving self-strangulation. The desiccation appears to have been favored by a combination of conditions—the season having been extraordinarily dry, and the small iron hut exclusively hot, though well ventilated, while the body was thin and attenuated as a result of mental disorder.

HARVEST CUSTOMS.

Quaint Ceremonies When the Sheaf is Garnered.

In many places there are curious and quaint customs connected with the gathering in of harvest. They all bear a certain resemblance to each other, but have different designations.

When the last sheaf of corn on the farm has been cut in Devonshire, a cry is heard from one of the reapers:

"I've gotten it!"

"What have ye gotten?" shouts the others.

"I've [illegible] neck!" yells the [illegible].

As the reaping has been rapidly nearing its completion, the oldest laborer goes round the field picking the best ears of corn he sees in each shock. These he ties together, and interweaves plaits into a sort of broom, topped with the ears. This is called the "neck," or "knack," and when the cutting of the last corn is heralded with the shout, "I've gotten it," the reapers gather together, and stand in a circle round the man holding the "neck." He stoops to the stubble with it, and the ring of reapers, holding their hats in both hands, likewise bend to the ground. Rising upright, and stretching their arms and hats above their heads, in slowly chant, in harmony, the neck Give lines. Then they burst into triumphant shouts. "We have un! We have un! We have un!" Round goes the cider-pitcher, and, with acclamations, the plaited neck of corn is carried to the farmhouse.

There it is delivered to the farmer, with the chorus, "A neck, a neck, a neck! Well cut, well bound, well stocked!" The little bundle of corn is hung from the kitchen ceiling, and remains there until displaced by the [illegible] or part with this "neck" is to invite misfortune and disaster.

In Cornwall the last sheaf of corn is also called the "neck," and is decorated gaily with blue ribbons.

In Yorkshire, where the clergyman is still often called upon to cut the first corn of the harvest, the last sheaf is simply called "the kern." Its fall before the sickle is proclaimed by shouts of "We've gotten it!" And the reapers escort the kern home. It is dressed in a white frock, with colored ribbons, and crowned with wheat-ears. At the kern supper which follows, this kern baby is enthroned in the barn, and supposed to preside over the feast. This well-known harvest supper comes later, to mark the end of the gathering in, and is called the "mell supper."

The really interesting customs are those which attend the cutting of the last sheaf. It symbolizes the corn-god, and, though its original meaning has been forgotten, it is observed in [illegible] parts of the country.

Crime in Ireland.

What Ireland is like under Radical rule is clearly shown by the criminal statistics for 1908, which have just been published as a Blue-book. The [illegible] offences for the whole of Ireland, which numbered 9,660 in 1906, declined to 9,476 in the year 1907, but rose last year to 10,366. This represents an increase of 2.5 per cent. as compared with 1907, and of 9 per cent. as compared with 1906. The rate represented by the above offences was 2.3 per 1,000 of the estimated population. The number of persons prosecuted for non-indictable offences was 31,870 more than in the year 1907 and 9,618 above the average for the six years 1902-1907.

The number of cases of drunkenness in 1908 is less than the number in 1907 by 2,000, and if the figures for drunkenness in 1908 are compared with the average number of such cases in the 10 years 1898-1907, it appears that a decrease amounting to 12,841 has occurred. The offences committed are classified as follows:

Offences against the person	[illegible]
Robbery with violence	826
Robbery without violence	7,269
Malicious damage to property	664
Forgery	51
Coining	37
Assaults	14,150

Of the prisoners committed to prison in 1908, 23.5 were absolutely illiterate. Of the 26,620 prisoners committed 980 belonged to the domestic servant class, 16,442 to the laboring classes, 326 to the class of factory workers, 3,079 to the class of mechanics and skilled workers, 72 were dressers or overlookers of labor, 230 belonged to the class of shopmen, shopwomen, and clerks, 2,679 to the class of shopkeepers and dealers, 2 to professional employments, 210 to the class of skilled artificers, and 101 to dress. There were 20 "assaults by firing shots from dwelling-houses" against 60 in the preceding year.

Paper Money.

The first paper money used in this country was issued by Pennsylvania in 1722. On the early part of that year £15,000 were issued on the credit of the colony, and a few months later £30,000 more followed.

WHEN ROYALTY DINES.

How the King's Kitchen King Works and Important Pies.

Mr. Menager, the head cook at Buckingham Palace, occupies an important post in the royal household. His salary is £1,000 per annum, and he is recognized as being one of the greatest culinary artists in the world. The royal kitchens and the whole kitchen staff are under his complete control.

Opening off the main kitchen on one side of it are half a dozen smaller kitchens, and on the other side there are [illegible] offices, where the clerical work in connection with the kitchen department is attended to. One of these offices is Mr. Menager's private room.

Mr. Menager does not live in Buckingham Palace, but has his private residence close to it. On arriving at the palace—usually about eleven o'clock in the morning—he first sees to the inspection of the lunch menu for that day, which has been prepared by his head assistant, and also the dinner for breakfast following morning. He then prepares the dinner menu for the following day—a task that occupies him about a couple of hours.

No two dinners at the royal table are ever the same. Certain dishes are from time to time repeated, frequently by special request of the King, but what may be termed the general scheme of each dinner is always different. One of the side kitchens is reserved solely for Mr. Menager's use, where he carries out experimental culinary operations, and is constantly elaborating and working out new ideas. Some dishes have taken him months of preparation before he decides to [illegible] them into the menu. There is one particular sauce which Mr. Menager invented some years ago to which the King has a particular liking. Mr. Menager was making experiments for over three years before he served this sauce to the royal table.

There are many dishes, by the way, which can be tasted nowhere except at the royal table. The secret of their preparation is known only to Mr. Menager, and he guards such secrets with great care. None of his assistants have the least notion of how these special dishes and sauces are prepared. They simply have the handling of the raw materials, and each assistant carries out different directions in the [illegible] for table.

The dinner menu is submitted every day to their Majesties for approval, but this is a mere matter of form, for neither the King nor Queen ever think of altering or interfering with Mr. Menager's arrangements.

At three o'clock a report is laid before the great chef by the order-clerk of the various meals that have been ordered in accordance with Mr. Menager's instructions of the day before, and also what is called a station-report is given to him by the head assistant cook—which is a detailed statement of the manner in which the dinner for that night is to be prepared. After seeing that everything is in order for the evening's work, Mr. Menager generally leaves the palace about four o'clock, returning [illegible] of the various ranges, ovens, and stoves, and takes a careful note of the temperature in each.

The preparation of the [illegible] dinner is then begun. Mr Menager remains in the kitchen whilst the work is going forward, keeping a keen eye on everything and everyone, and issuing from time to time instructions to his first lieutenant. At ten minutes to nine exactly a bell is rung, and the servants who are in waiting carry dishes to the [illegible] the kitchen.

At [illegible] dinner is served and Mr. Menager's work for the day is over. He remains in the palace until ten o'clock, when he receives a message from the King's [illegible] to the effect that his services are no longer required. This message is usually never [illegible].

An Artistic Prince.

The young Duke of [illegible], who lately passed his seventeenth birthday, is stated to be the only Knight of the Garter who has become a member of the order by hereditary right. His grandmother, Prince Leopold's mother, showed a great predilection for music and the arts—a taste that has been transmitted to the son, who also inherits from his mother a cheerful and affable disposition, which [illegible] Prince Alexander of York, has won for him the love of Edinburgh. He presided [illegible] for the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, and was also a very [illegible] and very enthusiastic musician.

OXO

Problem for the Children

The OXO Cattle Farms carry 250,000 splendid cattle which are used to make OXO. If these cattle were marching in single file, one behind the other, each animal occupying a space of three yards, how long would the line of cattle be? Give the answer in miles and yards.

To the young people sending correct answers on postal card to Oxo Offices, 23 Lombard Street, Toronto, within 7 days of date of this paper, we will send a miniature colored panorama card of the Oxo Cattle Farms, ready for cutting out and fixing up into a model farm.

Don't forget this fact:—

OXO has the farms

This fact is of tremendous importance to you BECAUSE there exist no other fluid beefs made by firms who do not own a single ox—firms who buy their raw material from goodness knows where.

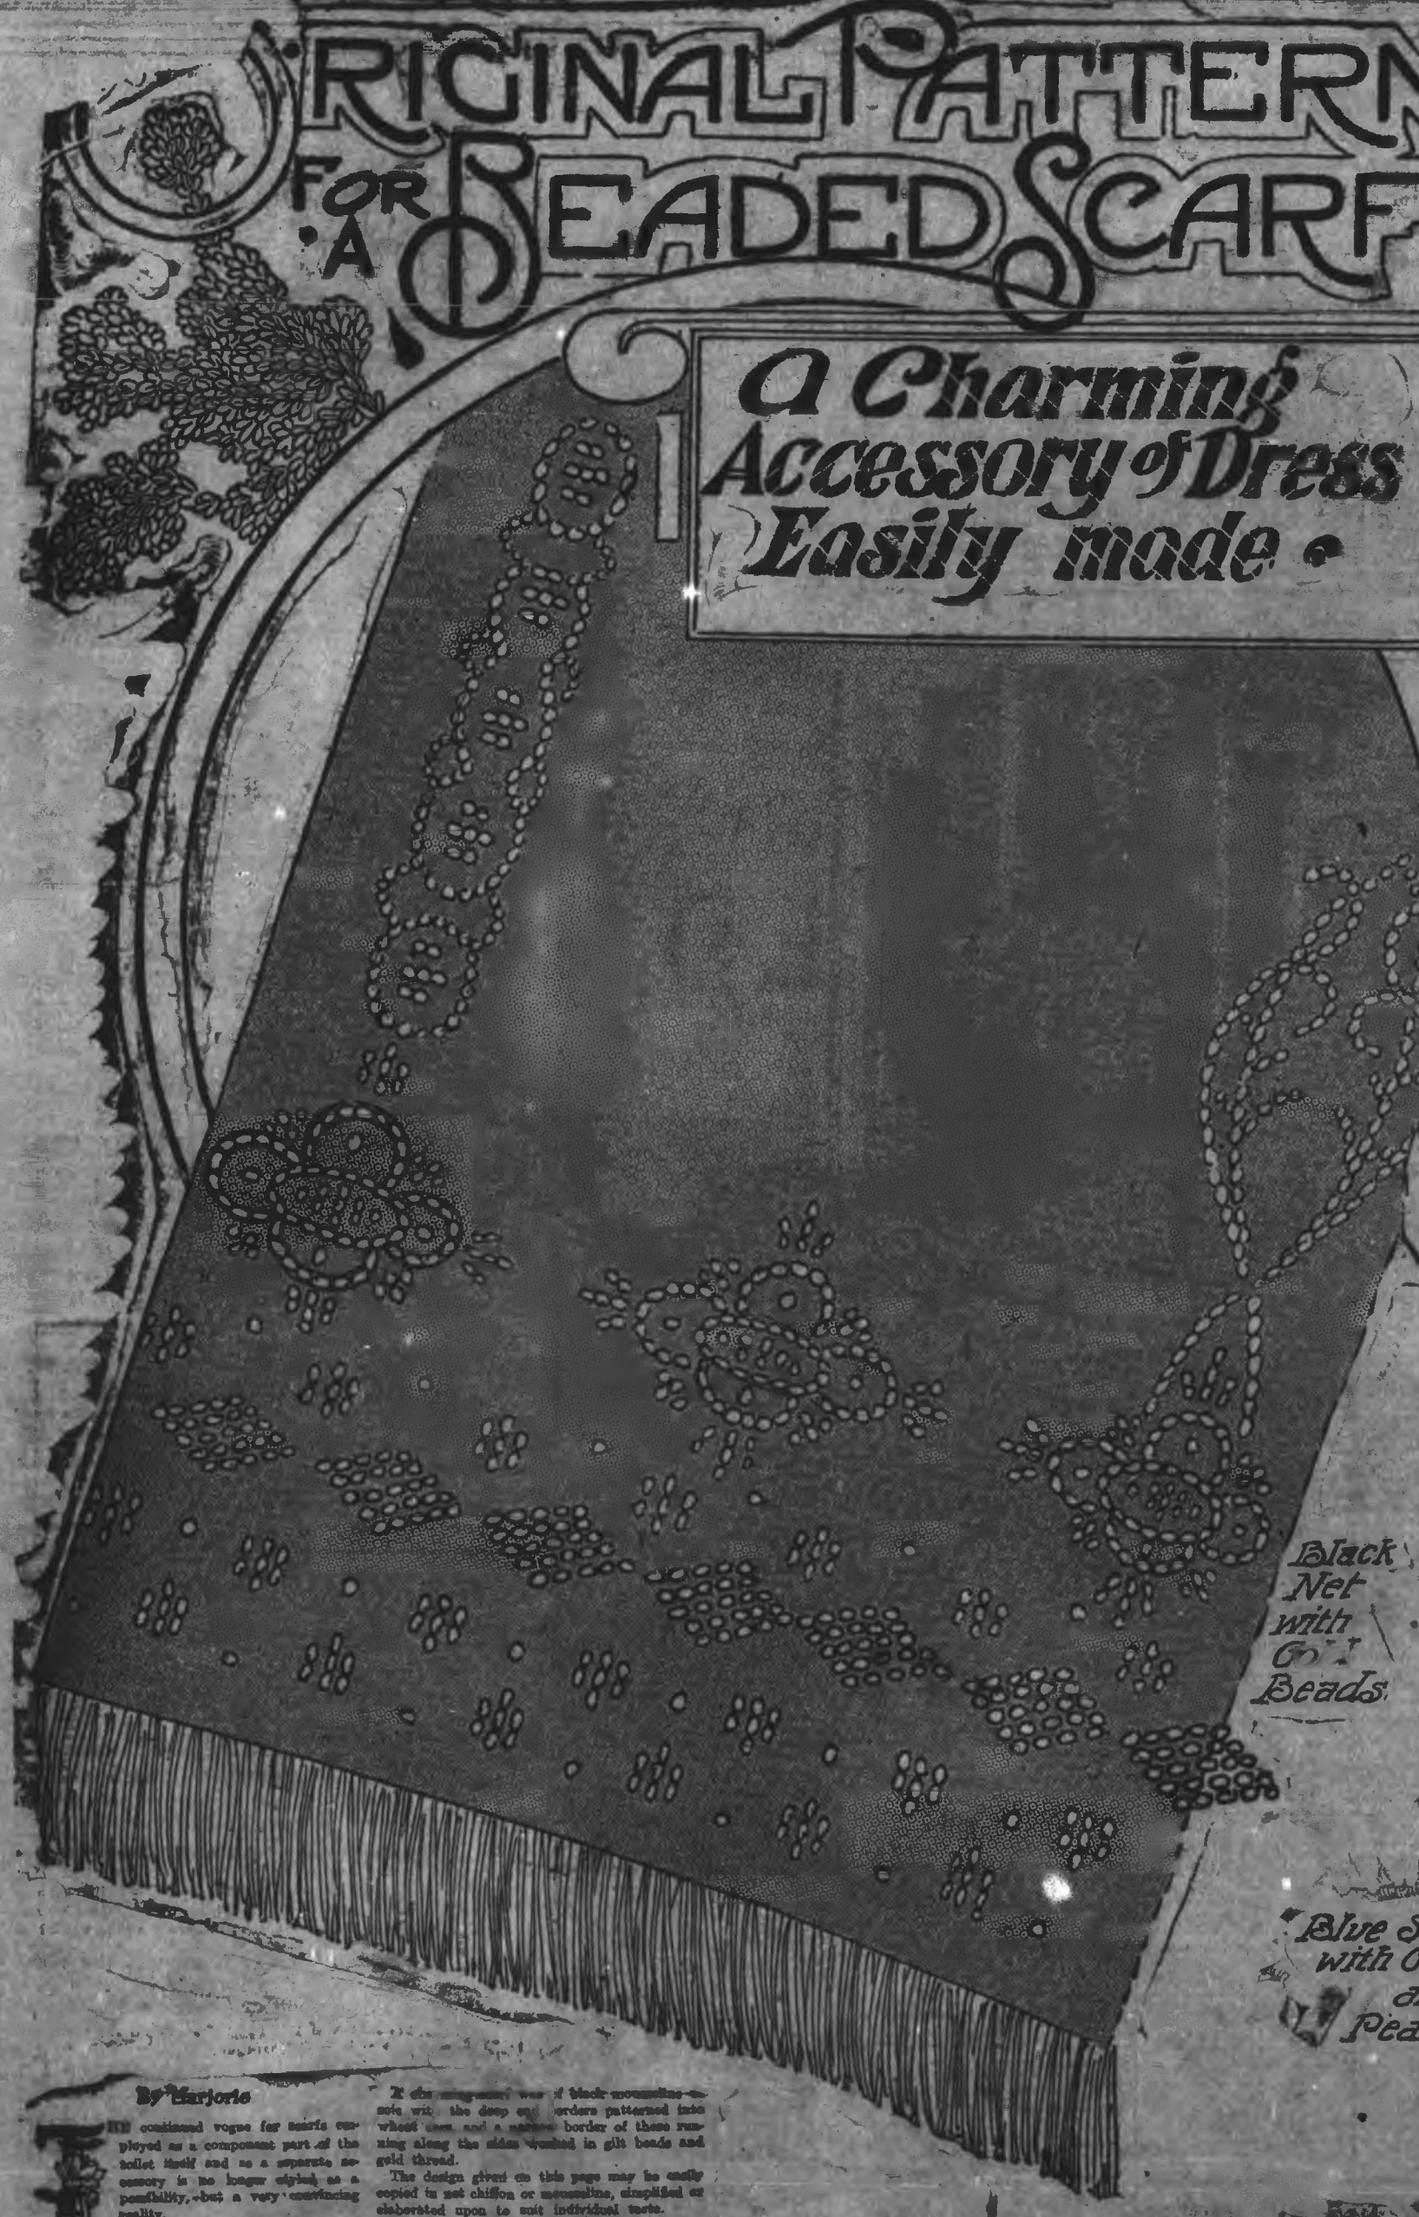
ORIGINAL PATTERN FOR A BEADED SCARF

A Charming Accessory of Dress Easily made.



Black Net with Gold Beads.

Blue Scarf with Gold and Pearls.

By Marjorie

THE continued vogue for scarfs employed as a component part of the toilet itself and as a separate accessory is no longer styled as a possibility, but a very convincing reality.

Not only are shoulder scarfs in demand but those coquettishly adjusted over the coiffure for evening wear are favored. In both lines the greatest diversity in color, style and material prevails; these range in length from half a yard to two and three yards, varying also in width, texture and weight.

The same demand for supple featherweight material which prevails throughout the details of a fashionable woman's wardrobe, is equally pronounced here. Transparencies of tulle, net, chiffon, filmy nets, laces and delicate metallic tissues have been christened "elephant breasts" by an appreciative critic, in their veiled-like beauty, carrying exquisite patterns and color schemes, they excel

METALLIC EFFECTS.

Gold, silver, steel and other metallic effects are very prominently introduced in all manner of designs. Grecian borders, all-over effects, [illegible] and even [illegible] things as a spangle-bodied spider [illegible] his long-waisted [illegible] with [illegible] and a [illegible] with [illegible] handlight [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] on a black background [illegible]

A dainty [illegible] was of black mousseline de soie with the deep end borders patterned into wheat stems and a narrow border of these running along the sides finished in gilt beads and gold thread.

The design given on this page may be easily copied in net chiffon or mousseline, simplified or elaborated upon to suit individual taste.

Two side borders are shown, the one to the left, however, is the better and more in keeping with the end borders. Black or gray chiffon harmonizes with the gray mesh. Equally effective would be white. On the figure to the right, gold and pearl beads have been employed on blue. On both scarfs deep gold fringe is used.

Very attractive in this same design in white or black with silver or cut steel beads; white silk may be substituted for the metallic fringe. Jet is another medium for this decoration admirably suited for garments.

Beads in all colors, including the crystal variety, produce the most exquisite effects when employed in pale tinted shades; but very striking when brilliant colors are chosen.

On a gray chiffon scarf veiled with brilliant blue were two proud peacocks worked in long, flat crystal beads, [illegible] the characteristic coloring. The scarf was [illegible] long, and the birds [illegible] midway between the knee and ankle, the heads [illegible] near the hip line.

Floral designs, most beautifully wrought with opalescent beads or pure white crystal relieved by gold or silver beads, are charming and a fad that may be copied by every woman who has any ability to draw and work the beads.

Besides these patterns, those of lace, tinsel, Filmsels, Chantilly and English meshes are [illegible] in [illegible] and [illegible] with the most distinct Oriental patterns, preferably Persian.

Quite the very latest caprice is a scarf of tulle, very long and wide, with deep borders suggesting the colors and designs of Russian embroidery.

Besides the application of beads and the painted or interwoven colors, hand-work in heavily [illegible] designs particularly florals are most fascinating. These are worked in silk [illegible] relieved by gold or silver thread.

women who possess a scarf or shawl of heirloom, with the prized antique tint, for she is very sure to be envied.

The finest and silkiest of crepe and liberty satin make bewitching accessories, the newest of these being trimmed with softest marabout.

Various silky and transparencies are shown with wide satin borders carrying pompadour patterns on the ends, and along the sides. These are offered in black, white and fashionable colors. Very effective are those in [illegible] white and pale [illegible] with the most distinct Oriental patterns, preferably Persian.

Senoritas as Suffragettes

ALL Italian women by the law of Italy has no right to her property after marriage and no control over her dowry, the interest of which her husband may spend as he likes, though he may not touch the capital, which must be returned to her in the event of a separation.

She cannot sign or draw a check on her own account even for her own money, and her evidence is not accepted in a law court without her husband. She is entirely subservient to him [illegible] has away from all her friends. She loses [illegible] when marriage [illegible] a foreigner.

Under these circumstances it is scarcely surprising that of late there has been a powerful agitation for the suffrage among Italian women and only two days ago [illegible] the law courts. A debate took place recently in Parliament on the subject and a committee was appointed to investigate the grievances affecting women and the desirability of extending the franchise upon them.

The Queen Dowager Margherita, who has a personal interest in the question and recently during the National Congress of Italian Women, held in Rome she entertained the delegates at a reception party at her palace, when she expressed her sympathy with the movement and the hope that Italy would be among the first of the modern nations [illegible]

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 66 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbor at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sister going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, [illegible] the family grew to [illegible] one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys!. Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

Ross Wanted in Detroit.

Detroit, Oct. 5.—That Joseph G. Ross, under arrest in Toronto on a charge of robbing hotels, is "J. G. Bowes," who a year ago swindled Miss Clara Brown, of Detroit out of $500 in cash, on a real estate deal, is the conclusion reached by the Detroit police yesterday after seeing a photograph of Ross. Miss Brown also identified the man as "Bowes."

She told the police that after leaving in some manner that she had a fine money saved, Bowes, (or Ross) called upon her and by specious promises succeeded in obtaining from her $300 as first payment on a house and lot.

The Detroit police will arrest Ross when Toronto is through with him.

Nationalists Oppose Duties.

London, Oct. 5.—The Nationalists have come out strongly against the clauses imposing additional duties on beer, spirits and tobaccos.

By an agreement between the Government and the Unionists, the committee stage of the bill is to be completed by Oct. 7, but it is likely the Nationalists will cause delay by protracted debates of remaining clauses.

Lord Rosebery in a letter declining to address further meetings on the budget says: "To make any further speeches of explication and reply would simply involve my return to political activity, which I have long withdrawn and to which I hope never to return."

BURNED HOUSED FOR SPITE.

Palatial Thousand Islands' Home Destroyed by Incendiaries.

Gananoque, Oct. 5.—The palatial summer residence among the Thousand Islands near here, belonging to Oliver Adams of Rosedale, has been completely destroyed by fire. Some friends of Mr. Adams (who has closed his house for the season) observed flames coming from the verandah and found the woodwork literally soaked with coal oil, which had apparently been poured on in pailfuls by incendiaries. Mr. Adams has been most active in his efforts to enforce the laws in regard to fishing, and particularly that section which prohibits the use of nets. He is known to have incurred the resentment of some men engaged in fishing in that part of the St. Lawrence.

Mr. Adams has offered a reward of $200 for information regarding the incendiaries.

Not Too Many Ancients.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier delivered an important speech here yesterday, the occasion being the laying of the corner-stone of the new Quebec Government Technical School. All of the leading Catholic and Protestant Church dignitaries were present.

Abbe Gauthier, the representative of the archbishop, asked that the State, which will control the school, should not wound anyone's opinion, and when Sir Wilfrid came to speak, he said that some people had been apprehensive, but their fears had no cause to exist.

The Premier said he did not want to change the present school system of Quebec, but simply to improve it. He wanted the young men to spend more time studying Shakespeare, Gibbon and Macauley, and less going over Virgil and Xenophon.

Transportation the Keynote.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—The chief complaints heard yesterday by the royal commission investigating trade relations between Canada and the West Indies centered round the question of transportation. Local merchants argued that there should be a regular line in summer between Montreal and the islands, and said that in competition with the service given from St. John and Halifax in winter, the New York service of a weekly steamer caught all the Canadian trade with the islands.

Portage la Prairie Progress.

Portage la Prairie, Man., Oct. 5.—The citizens of Portage la Prairie yesterday demonstrated in the most practical manner the fact that they stand solid for progress and a greater Portage. The by-law granting the Western Radiators, Ltd., a fixed assessment for twenty years was carried with hardly a dissenting ballot. The company will erect and equip a large plant for the manufacture of radiators and steamheating apparatus.

Knighted.

London, Oct. 5.—The King has conferred knighthood upon Lieut.-General Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, who was prominent in the South African war and recently founded the organization of Boy Scouts to promote good citizenship in the rising generation.

True Bill Against Mrs. Scott.

London, Ont., Oct. 5.—After being out nearly two hours, the grand jury returned a true bill against Mrs. Martha Scott, charged with the murder of her father-in-law, Harvey Scott, of Missouri, on September 13.

Gatherer's Auto Expenses.

New York, Oct. 5.—It is announced that the municipality of New York has 103 autos, which cost $253,338, while the annual maintenance cost totals $180,000.

Monterey, Mexico, Oct. 5.—The suffering among the poor for food is very acute and unless something is done thousands of people must starve.

Albert Pulitzer a Suicide.

BROKERS SUSPEND

Toronto Firm Whose Head Died Unexpectedly Last Thursday Announces on the Toronto Stock Exchange That It Cannot Go On—Was Heavily Interested in N. Y. Stocks and Cobalts.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—The suspension of Wyatt & Co., brokers, 46 King street west, which was announced yesterday morning, did not come as a surprise to those interested in financial circles. With the death of Major Wyatt on Thursday last, rumors in regard to the firm were prolific and his fellow brokers knew that the firm was in difficulties.

The assignment was made to E. R. C. Clarkson and the assignees immediately put their men to work on the books to straighten out the tangle which had ensued through the speculation of one of the members.

The shortage will probably run up to $150,000 when the outstanding accounts have been closed up and everything balanced. Mr. Maule, partner of the late Mr. Wyatt, has refused to make any statement in regard to the firm's affairs, preferring to wait until the assignees have gone fully into the books.

The first intimation of the assignment was received on the Toronto Stock Exchange yesterday morning by the secretary and prior to the opening of business for the day. Secretary Ogden read the notice of the assignment to the assembled brokers. Under the rules of the exchange, liabilities due to stock exchange members by another member, must be straightened out in the day of notice. This can only be done by creditors of the defaulting firm either buying or selling securities which the members had with the defaulting firm. The immediate demand for Dominion Steel yesterday morning on the announcement with cash purchase that this security was bought under the above rule, indicated that the firm of Wyatt & Co., were heavily short of Steel and the purchases were made to balance up the accounts.

Messrs. Wyatt & Co. have also been heavily interested in New York and to a small extent in Cobalts, and at the office at which the firm dealt with the agents of the New York brokers, it was learned that Assignee Clarkson had instructed them either to buy or sell certain securities in which the firm were interested. Most of these transactions were buying in orders showing that the firm was short of most of the stocks on the books of the company.

It has been known for some time that Mr. Wyatt was what is termed a "bear" on the market. He preferred to sell rather than buy, and the consensus of opinion is that his personal transactions were responsible for the failure of his firm.

It is understood that none of Mr. Wyatt's fellow brokers will be at all embarrassed through their dealings with his firm, as they have a first claim on the seat on the exchange, which is worth between $18,000 and $20,000, and any shortage on liabilities to his fellow brokers will be distributed from this before any balance is handed to the assignee.

Five Drown in Nova Scotia.

Mr. and Mrs. Stirara managed to grasp the upturned boat and were rescued.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 4.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending October 2, were 2235 cattle, 1200 sheep and lambs, 1275 hogs and 400 calves. While the offerings to-day amounted to 1400 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 200 calves. Fully 75 per cent. of the cattle offered consisted of Canadian domestic and northwest ranch stock in first-class condition. The undertone continues easy on account of the large supplies, but buyers were many and the feather end and prices show no change. The demand for exporters was very limited, as cable advices from Liverpool noted a further decline, owing to large arrivals. A few extra choice steers sold at 5½c, but the bulk of the trading was done in choice stock at 5¼c to 5c, good at 5¼c to 4¾c, fair at 3¾c to 4c, medium at 3½c to 3¾c, common at 3¼c to 3c, and inferior at 2c to 2½c per lb. Good bulls sold at 3c to 3½c, and canners 2½c to 2¾c per lb. A stronger feeling prevailed for lambs, owing to smaller offerings and prices ruled ½c per lb. higher at 5½c per lb. In sheep an easier feeling developed, with sales at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. Calves were scarce, for which there was a good enquiry at prices ranging from $3 to $12, each. Prices for pigs were steady under a fairly good demand and smaller supplies, and sales of selected lots were made at 7¾c per cwt., weighed off cars. Cable advices from all the leading foreign markets on Canadian bacon last week noted a further decline of 2s to 4s per cwt., in spite of continued light supplies.

The Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market reports for the week ending Oct. 2 were 2227 cattle for export account and 1000 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 200 calves, for local consumption. The offerings this morning consisted of 1200 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 200 calves, and large [illegible] Canadians.

C.P.R. GRAIN LINE WOULD CLOSE MANY OF THE CITY'S STREETS

According to One of the Plans Showing the Proposed Entrance into Peterborough—Junction With Main Line Will be [illegible]

The Council has received the following communication from the C.P.R., regarding the location of the junction of the new grain route with main line of the C.P.R.:

Mayor Bush,—

In connection with the interview with you and Alderman Phelan some weeks ago as to the entry of the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway and the connection between that railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway being made at Peterborough.

We have not yet satisfied definitely on the junction and it is a question between Peterborough and Havelock. I think, however, that if we could see our way to getting the room for tracks and facilities necessary to a junction point that we would probably decide [illegible] Peterborough.

We have given considerable study as to how this could be secured as well as to the entrance through the city, and in order to find sufficient [illegible] to take care of the traffic interchanged in junction point it would be necessary to find another location for tracks and freight shed facilities required in connection with the Peterborough local traffic.

I enclose two plans, one of which is intended to show how we would suggest to provide facilities to take care of the Peterborough local traffic, [illegible] the present tracking opposite the station to provide accommodation for the business contemplated if we make Peterborough the junction in connection with this line, we would propose that the city grant to us their title and interest in the property enclosed within the red lines commonly known as the waterfront.

The other shows our proposed entrance into and through the City for the Georgian Bay and Seaboard Railway and by reference to it you will see we propose to enter the city just [illegible] the line between Monaghan and Hornby crossing the following streets, Benacomi, Corbach avenue, McDonnel street, Walnut, Cedar, Elm, Weller street, and Homewood avenue, where the line enters Monaghan. In this territory we would ask that all the streets except McDonnel and Homewood be closed and that Monaghan road between Homewood and Weller streets be diverted and the railway carried under the diversion. The line again enters the city lights and joins the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks at Chamberlain street and we suggest the closing across the railway tracks of Chamberlain street, Park street, Stewart street and Rink street, and [illegible] four crossings [illegible] tracks on Park [illegible] on Rubidge street as indicated on plan.

The matter was referred to the Committee of the Whole Council.

WARD SYSTEM OF VOTING WAS "TIN-CANNED" FOR THE PRESENT

Ald. Morgan [illegible] been a motion to be prepared to the people at the January elections. This was in accordance with a petition signed by two hundred names, who wanted the ward system. The by-law could be at least submitted, and if the vote [illegible] no large count, at once the result.

The matter was put to a vote and resulted in a tie. It remained for Mayor Bush to settle the question.

"For Heaven's sake, Mr. Mayor, vote right," Ald. Morrow exclaimed.

"I will vote right," His Worship replied, [illegible]

A very choice programme of music was rendered and the members [illegible] and instrumental selections. At the conclusion refreshments were served.

King Solomon's Temple, From Descriptions in the Bible and by Josephus, the Famous Jewish Historian.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 4.—Will King Solomon's temple, famed in the Bible and history, rise again?

Masons all over the world, who believe that the author of the proverbs founded freemasonry; are talking of the plan of architects of the order here, to raise upon its old foundations the temple to take its place as the eighth modern wonder of the world.

The proposition has roused so much interest in England that the cost for wages of the original temple has been computed. The figures are staggering —$265,240,000!

It has been computed that each member of the king's levy who worked on the temple was paid about $6.50 a week. Their weekly wage would be $97,500, and for the three years $15,210,000. This latest account shows is appalling, yet Masons [illegible] believe that the work can be done [illegible]

Solomon raised his levy of 30,000 artificer men and worked them in three shifts. He also was assisted by another force of between 70,000 and 80,000 men, all under 3,300 foremen, who cut stone in the quarries and carried it down to the site of the temple.

The undertaking of such a work today would create a new crisis in the labour world. Yet it may be done.

King Solomon, according to Masonic legendary lore, was the first grand master of the craft of the Masonic order. The site of the temple through all history has been regarded sacred. Now, the chief stratum of stone which was the original foundation supports the Turkish Mosque, holy to Mohammedans.

This mosque would have to be bought, and all the toil of Solomon's men, all the treasure like that of King Solomon's mines and all the command that was a king's would have to be employed to rear the new and mighty structure.

In place of Adoniram, who was Solomon's right-hand man, a high-salaried architect and archaeologist would be employed.

Instead of calling on King Hiram of Tyre, as Solomon did, for his heavy timbers of cedar, woodmen would have to scour the forests of the world to furnish beams such as Solomon got at Lebanon.

The historian Josephus describes the temple so minutely that, with the aid of the Bible, scholars of to-day have a pretty fair idea of what it was like. It was at once a palace, temple and fortress. Its walls were of stone, and could withstand the onslaughts of a battery of modern field artillery.

The Sidonians, citizens of Sidon, went to Mt. Lebanon and devastated it of cedars for the temple. "For the Sidonians are more skilful than our people," the Bible relates. To do the work Solomon sent King Hiram of Tyre annually great stores of grain, corn, barley, oil and wine. Solomon's levy of 30,000 artisans was bossed by 3,300 men, and these were also 70,000 unskilled workmen to do the heavy work.

There were at least 183,000 men working on the temple for three years, according to the late Dr. Selsck, the noted German archaeologist.

In the accounting of wages paid to the men, totalling $265,500,000, no account is taken of the sawers, gilders, artists, workers in precious stones, and the osterners who made the vestments of the horde of priests who lived and did their duties in the sacred structure.

There were thousands of sacred clothing outfits, hundreds of thousands of golden vessels and other costly equipment for sacrifices and ceremonies.

Stables were built for the animals to be sacrificed, gold vessels holding hogsheads each were for drenching the altar after the rites, and the molten sea, established from its size, contained enough water for a swimming pool.

What this unending building of wealth and holiness, be duplicated in this day and age? Masons here say so, and the numbers of their order, over all the lands of the earth, support their plan. They even [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

"Peterborough Means Progress"

BRANTFORD AND PETERBOROUGH.

We do not wish to be unkindly critical of Brantford and Brantfordites, because they broke bread with us not long ago, through their visiting warriors. The Telephone City is quoted as a model type of a progressive and enterprising city. It is all that and more, for it pushes and prospers without putting its light under a bushel. The assessment returns show that Brantford increased 78 in population last year. Brantford in its slightly parochial pride may think that achievement something to be proud of; worthy of being sent by special despatch to be spread broadcast, in the press of the province. That shows an enterprise that shames Peterborough. We failed to Easson-ize our growth of last year, though it was between five or six times greater than Brantford had to record—476, Peterborough, as against 78, Brantford. We regret to have to record that our increase in population, in 1909, showed a falling off, as against the increase of 1900, when it was 491, in spite of the hard times flutter of 1908, but it is satisfactory to record that in two years the population of Peterborough has increased a 1,000. However, there is no doubt that both Brantford and Peterborough are live, wide-awake, go-ahead cities, typical of the prosperity and growth of the province and Dominion of which they form creditable urban ornaments.

DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE

Peterborough has a first-class water works system, on the eve of being vastly improved in efficiency by the construction of a new dam. We have a good stystem of sewerage, exept in one or two improvable spots. In these respects we have the conditions that make sanitation easy. But we have no system of garbage collection, something which is badly needed. There are sections of the city unserved by sewers. But there results in every part of the city an accumulation of garbage from household and other operations which, if not properly removed, as cannot be done by sewers, is sure to develop unsanitary conditions. These will be intensified by the fact that the increasing value of land leads to congestion of dwellings—building three houses on a space better occupied by two. This results in an overproduction of garbage in a concentrated space with increased danger to health. True the city has a by-law, more honoured in the breach than in the observance, requiring an annual cleaning of premises. This is well, so far as it goes, but is a good deal on the principle of a man who takes a bath once a year or the nominal Christian whose devotion is confined to taking communion at Easter. The housewife has a general cleaning once or twice a year, but, meantime, the daily process of keeping clean goes on. The city should be cleared of its garbage at short intervals to ensure the cleanliness that is an indispensable condition of health. The town of Cobalt, decimated by the plague in the form of typhoid, is an example or, rather, a warning of the danger of neglecting cleanliness. In, of course, much lesser degree, any considerable centre of population that has no provision for the collection and removal of garbage, courts the danger which has become a fatal reality in the case of Cobalt. We can learn a lesson in this regard from the city of Brantford. The Brantford Courier is referring to the matter of garbage collection, says:

"Any places which desire pointers with relation to this matter should send delegates to Brantford. Here we have a most complete and successful plan for garbage collection. Men and wagons are under direction of the health inspector and regular beats have been established throughout the municipality. A call is paid to each house once a week and the entire outlay is placed upon the general tax. The results here have been most satisfactory, both on behalf of cleanliness and its adjunct of improved general health. It pays a community to keep clean just as much as an individual."

Here is a pointer for our Aldermen. The matter is worth investigation. Peterborough beat Brantford last year in increase of population by 338. Shall we allow Brantford to lead us in the matter of attention to the public health? If Brantford adopts the means to protect the health and prolong the lives of its citizens and if Peterborough neglects the means, we may find the conditions reversed in the way of relative growth of population. In respect of disposal of garbage and provision for city cleanliness and tidiness, we have yet considerable to accomplish. Urban cleanliness is not only a civic duty but a religious duty.—See St. Matthew xxiii, 25 27.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Britain's exports of manufactures increased £38,000,000 more than Germany's, and $30,000,000 more than the United States', between 1895 and 1907. Britannia does not seem to be in her dotage; there's life in the old girl yet.

The treeless prairies should, says the Ottawa Free Press, soon be but a memory of the past. The Forestry branch of the Department of the Interior has this year provided 2,570,000 trees for planting on the plains and will give out many more next spring. There's practical aid for the farmer in its best form.

Recently a hotel was opened in London, Eng., on the "no-tip" plan, with accommodation for 1,000 guests. It is constantly filled to overflowing and the opening of other hotels upon the same plan is talked of. There seems to be a reason for the popularity of the no-tip hotel. The average guest likes to know what he is to pay with some certainty even though he may pay a little more than he would perhaps do under the tipping system. He would be willing to pay for security for putting his hand into his pocket at every turn. One payment at the office of the hotel would be better.

DIRTY KIDNEYS ARE CAUSE OF BACKACHE

A Few Doses Will Clean and Regulate the Kidneys and Make You Feel Fine.

If you take several doses of Pape's Diuretic, all backache and distress from out-of-order kidneys or bladder trouble will vanish, and you will feel fine.

Lame back, painful stitches, rheumatism, nervous headache, dizziness, irritability, sleeplessness, inflamed, or swollen eyelids, worn-out, sick feeling and other symptoms of sluggish, inactive kidneys disappear.

Uncontrollable, smarting, frequent urination (especially at night) and all bladder misery ends.

This unusual preparation goes at once to the disordered kidneys, bladder and urinary system and distributes its healing, cleansing and vitalizing influence directly upon the organs and glands affected, and completes the cure before you realize it.

The moment you suspect any kidney or urinary disorder or feel rheumatism pains, begin taking this harmless medicine with the knowledge that there is no other remedy at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will affect so thorough and prompt a cure as a fifty-cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker, or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

Only curative results can come from taking Pape's Diuretic, and a few days' treatment means clean, active, healthy kidneys, bladder and urinary organs—and no backache.

DID NOT INTEND TO LEAVE HUSBAND FOR GOOD

was no person there when he called, yet the fact was that there were several of the husband's friends in another part of the house at the time. The wife states that she was only temporarily absent and that shortly after Mr. Miller's departure she returned to the house.

It would be a matter of regret that the Examiner should at any time, make a statement other than the facts would bear out, and the matter would not have been stated in the light in which it was, were it not for a belief in their truth. In view of the lady's own previous statements, The Examiner is glad to take this opportunity to set the matter out in its true light so that any injury that may have been done might be set right and no responsible or dutiful wife may under any circumstances be caused annoyance by reason of any effort to present daily happenings of public interest.

OLD PEOPLE SUFFER TORTURES with their BACKS

Here is a Case in Point.

Of course you know a dull ache or sharp pains in the back come from sick Kidneys. Old age exacts its penalty. The Kidneys become weak or strained through the hard work of a lifetime. Plasters, ointments and liniments only ease the pain—they can't reach the Kidneys. As soon as the effects of such remedies wear off the pain returns worse than ever because the Kidneys are worse.

West Fort William, Nov. 7th, 1908.

"I have been troubled with a Lame Back for the past twenty years and have used plasters and ointment without effect. At last I tried Gin Pills, which proved just the thing, and I would highly recommend them to anyone who has Strained or Lame Back."

H. HARKNESS.

Gin Pills, you see, act directly on the Kidneys—relieving the pain—giving them new strength—and neutralizing Uric Acid, which is generally formed when there is Kidney Trouble.

Try Gin Pills, yourself, before buying the regular 50c boxes. Write the National Drug & Chemical Co. Dept. B., Toronto, Ont., and they will send you a free sample of Gin Pills by return mail. 5

BEAUTY CAUSES RIOT AT DANCE

The Affair Wound Up in a Free-for-All Fight.

Berlin, Oct. 4.—In Germany a music and dancing license is a matter of course for all houses of refreshment which can boast the necessary accommodation. Even the solitary inn of an obscure hamlet is seldom without a hall in which the young men and maidens of the neighborhood trip it lightly once a week to the strains of a jingling piano and a couple of fiddles. This association of the muse with alcoholic stimulants has not had the effect of increasing intoxication, which many people fear from it in England; nor is it often that it leads to so wild a scene as was enacted in and around the Black Eagle, in the Berlin suburb of Schoenberg. In the saloon of this establishment all had gone as merry as a marriage bell till the hour of midnight was approaching. Suddenly, however, harmony was transformed to discord of the savage order. The unedifying transformation was caused by one of the belles of the ball, who appears, either through carelessness or love of mischief, to have engaged herself to more than one partner for the same dance. At any rate, a dispute arose as to who was to lead her out. Soon words gave place to blows, and the company, which had gathered round to learn what was amiss, eagerly took sides. Presently all the dancers, male and female, were engaged in a fierce struggle. Every available weapon was hurriedly grasped at. Chairs were swung aloft, and beer glasses, cups, and bottles whizzed through the air. These flying missiles rapidly shivered to atoms the windows of the hall and the mirrors hanging on the walls. Tactical considerations then carried the conflict out into the street, and here it became really serious, as several of the men pulled revolvers and fired with them. In the meantime the nearest police station had been apprised, and a flying column of constables came charging to the spot. Before this common enemy the warring factions combined in fight, leaving, however, on the field of battle eight wounded, who were conveyed to an ambulance station to be bandaged. Among them was a maid servant, whose jaw had been broken. A number of other injured persons succeeded in making their escape.

NEW FORTS AT ST. PETERSBURG

Russians Fear for Safety of Capital in Case of War.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 14.—The destruction of the Russian navy during the Japanese war and the great growth in the German navy has brought home to the Russian military authorities the danger o fa raid on the capital in case of war, the sheres of the Gulf of Finland presenting many places quitable for landing troops within a short distance of St. Petersburg. It has therefore been determined to fringe the northern shore of the gulf from St. Petersburg to Viborg with a line of fortifications, capable of delaying a descent while troops were being assembled. Many St. Petersburg residents, whose summer homes line the Finnish coast, will be dispossessed to make room for the fortifications.

THE PAINS OF THE AGED

Are usually due to the tendency of the kidneys to wear out as age advances, giving rise to the accumulation of poisons in the blood and causing backache, lumbago, aching limbs and rheumatism. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are particularly prized by aged people because they can be relied upon to invigorate the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and so remove the cause of pains and aches.

GUY BROTHERS MINSTRELS.

A large audience greeted the appearance in Peterborough for the "n'th" time, at the Grand Opera House last night of Guy Brothers Minstrels. On the whole the performance was satisfactory, although the excellence of the olio overshadowed the first part, which was not any too strong. The quality of the singing brigade belonging to the organization has deteriorated considerably during recent years. The best number of the first part was Mr. Albert Guy's song "If I Had a Thousand Lives to Live," which fitted him like the proverbial glove. Ralph Kinter had one witty speech and his comic song "Me, Dat's Who," was well received. The olio was much superior to the first part, and contained some really praiseworthy features. The athletic act by the Mantell Brothers was alone worth the price of admission and was one of the best of its kind ever seen here. Harvey Dunn did some very clever things in the bag punching line in his act entitled "A few minutes in a gymnasium," keeping four bags going at once. Syner and Engel did a praiseworthy dancing turn and the posing by Albert Guy was well planned and carried out. There was nothing to the rest of the performance and one wonders that Guy Brothers should offer to a city audience a series of stereopticon views as a feature of a modern minstrel show.

LORD MAYOR OPENS LONDON'S WIDEST BRIDGE

Drives First Team Over Blackfriars—165 Feet Between the Parapets—Interesting Ceremony.

London, Oct. 2.—Blackfriars Bridge, London, has now 165 feet between the parapets, and is one of the widest road bridges in England. The reopening of the bridge and the inauguration of electric tramways over it by the Lord Mayor of London were made the occasion of an interesting and highly-picturesque ceremony. A gaily decorated pavilion had been erected at the north-east end of the bridge, and here a large company awaited the arrival of the Lord Mayor. His Lordship, who was accompanied by the Lady Mayoress, was received by Mr. Deputy Algar (chairman of the Bridge House Estates Committee), and conducted to a dais in the pavilion. In asking his lordship to perform the ceremony of declaring the bridge open, the chairman tendered an interesting history of the structure. The first Blackfriars Bridge, he said, was commenced by the Corporation in 1760. It was a structure with nine arches—the width 45 feet between parapets. The present arch of that bridge was opened in 1869 by the Lord Mayor, with the Aldermen, Sheriffs and others, who rowed under it in the city barge—a very different ceremony to that which they were taking part in. The first stone of the present bridge was laid in 1865—its width was 75 feet, between parapets. The widened bridge, as stated, has a width of 165 feet between parapets, and the contract for the work was let to Messrs. Sir William Arrol and Co. for the sum of £303,000. Mr. Deputy Algar added that, like other works carried out under the Bridge House Trust, no part of the cost of the undertaking will fall upon the ratepayers. Mr. Deputy Algar stepped back, and the Lord Mayor severed the cord which had been stretched across the tramway lines to constitute the barrier. His lordship having made a suitable response, Mr. Deputy Algar asked the Lord Mayor to accept, as a memento of the occasion a massive silver rose dish in the style of the celebrated Georgian silversmith, Paul Lamerie, bearing an exact illustration of the widened Blackfriars Bridge. A few words of acknowledgment, said, to the accompaniment of ringing cheers on the part of the crowd a tramcar, beautifully decorated, and driven by Mr. A. L. C. Fell, the Chief Officer of Tramways, swept round the corner from the Embankment and was stopped near the pavilion. Sir Melvill Beachcroft, Chairman of the L. C. C., stepped from the car, and standing bareheaded in the roadway, with a small band of councillors gathered round him, "amid acclamation of the Lord Mayor [illegible] County Council engineers on board across the bridge." The Lord Mayor signified his assent. "I am emboldened to make one further request," said Sir Melvill, "which is that your lordship will honour the County Council by entering this car and travelling with me across the bridge on this memorable occasion. I trust also that the Sheriffs and those of your lordship's guests whom you would wish to accompany you will also favour the Council by entering the car." There was a hurried movement towards the car. The Lord Mayor took the position of driver, being accompanied by Sir Melvill Beachcroft, Mr. John Burns, and the Commissioners, and, amid cheers, drove the car across the bridge as far as Stamford street. Immediately afterwards the new service was opened to the public.

SCIENCE PREVENTS BALDNESS.

The Fatal Germ and its Remedy Now Facts of Science.

It is the rarest thing in the world for a man to be necessarily bald. No man whose hair is not dead at the roots need be bald if he will use Newbro's Herpicide, the new scalp antiseptic. Herpicide destroys the germ that eats the hair off at the root; and cleans the scalp of dandruff and leaves it in a perfectly healthy condition. Mr. Maniece, of the Maryland Block, Butte, Mont., was entirely bald. In less than a month Herpicide had removed the enemies of hair growth, and nature did its work by covering his head with thick hair an inch long, and in six weeks he had a normal suit of hair. FLOGGING A SCHOOL BOY

Maximum Penalty Inflicted on a Schoolmaster.

London, Oct 4.—Surprising allegations, principally by a schoolboy, were made Monday against Cyril Marsh Mitchell, headmaster of the Middlesex County [illegible] National Schools, at Ashford, when he was charged with having assaulted a ten-year-old schoolboy named Hobday. The case came before the Feltham Petty Sessions Justices.

Police Constable Osborne, warrant officer to the court, said he had seen boys flogged by order of the Bench, but never like this one. He considered it very brutal and certainly outrageous to flog the boy in such a manner. He had never seen a boy in such a shocking state; twelve or fourteen were appearing as if they had been scalded with a stout cane stick.

The boy told the magistrate that during a dictation lesson the headmaster called him out of the class to show his work, and then said, "Stand aside, and I will deal with you in a minute. Afterwards the master told him [illegible] downstairs into one of the desks, called an assistant master to hold him down, and then flogged him until the cane broke in two.

The headmaster (the boy continued) then told him to sit down, and as he could not do so comfortably, said, "I will give you some more if you do not sit still." The boy added that he believed the headmaster flogged him for about five minutes before the cane broke. He cried out with pain, and when he got to bed that night he could not sleep for the pain of his bruises.

Mrs. Darling, the mother of the boy, stated that her son came home crying and covered with bruises. She counted at least thirteen distinct marks of the cane, and his back was red and inflamed "just like a jelly."

The schoolmaster, elected to give his version of the story on oath, and declared that he struck the boy only four times, and that was because he was insolent. He had found it necessary to punish the boy on several previous occasions. Once, when His Majesty's Inspector was in the school, this boy pulled the cap of another boy, and the inspector asked that he be caned.

Mr. Firth remarked that this was not the first time the parents of this boy had had a complaint of the headmaster's brutality. After this flogging, which was administered before the boy had had any boys drawing lesson to the headmaster's satisfaction, the boy was not able to sleep for several nights, and even that day he was not able to sit down in comfort though it was a week after the event.

Mr. Hotsley Wood, one of the school managers, and editor of a newspaper, was called for the prosecution, and said he examined the boy two days after the flogging, and was astonished by what he saw. He had black, red and blue marks on his body, and his legs were marked in a similar manner.

Mr. Firth: Would you say that violence must have been used? I think extraordinary [illegible] must have been used.

Mr. Thomas: Would it be possible for the bruises to be caused by [illegible] strokes of the cane?—Not unless they were sledge-hammer strokes.

The case was adjourned for a week.

The Rev. T. Thornton, Vicar of Ashford and chairman of the managers, said that unfortunately the schoolmaster was a nervous individual, but he had a full appreciation of the temper shed out to work—not more, and not less. He was, however, sympathetic and kind to the scholars, as was to be seen by various organizations he had started for their benefit.

Dr. Thompson, of Sunbury, also described the boy's bruises, and, being asked whether they were "properly placed," he replied, "Well, they were what I call very good shots!" (laughter.)

The chairman said the Bench unanimously decided to convict, and had determined to inflict the highest penalty they were allowed; a fine of £5 and the costs.

TREASURE CAR WRECKED BY BOMB

In Fetid Machine Hurled at a Passenger Train in India.

London, Oct. 4.—Another bomb outrage has occurred on the Eastern Bengal Railway.

Late on Wednesday night (says Reuter) a passenger train was fifty miles from Calcutta when a missile struck it and exploded, blowing off the roof of the treasure van. In the van was £100,000, the property of the Bank of Bengal.

The three natives in charge of the treasure showed great courage. They pulled the communication cord, but even when the train had pulled up they refused to leave the carriage. It is said to have been almost blown to pieces.

An extremely high explosive had been used, but the bomb struck the van at a sharp angle, and thus the train was not derailed.

This is the thirteenth bomb outrage on the Eastern Bengal line, and the police are still without a clue. The general impression is that this latest attempt, like others, is the work of extremists, who have stated on many occasions that they must obtain money for political purposes.

A bomb is reported to have also been thrown at a mill assistant named Gowrie, at Howrah.

The explosion gave Reuter's agent a panic, but the police state the bomb was not of a dangerous character.

POLICE CHIEF'S WANDERINGS

Takes Nightly Strolls Through the Streets of Paris.

London, Oct. 7.—With the collar of a shabby overcoat turned up, and an old hat over his eyes, a little, spare, elderly gentleman was captured the other evening by a party of students sojourning in the Latin Quarter. They danced around him in a ring made believe to scalp him, and generally ragged him.

A policeman sauntered up, then, after one look at the little, elderly gentleman, dashed into the party, hit out at all sides, and rescued him. It was his great chief, M. Lépine, Prefect of Police.

His identity revealed, the students, not much abashed, made amends by shouting "Vive Lepine," and insisted on forming themselves into a bodyguard to see him home and keep possible Apaches at bay.

M. Lepine rather enjoyed his wanderings. His great amusement (says the "Telegraph") is to play Haroun Al Raschid in Paris by night. Almost every evening after dinner he puts on an old coat and shabby hat and goes out exploring on foot. He listens with the idlest, and there is no more absorbed "Ladaud" when a horse falls down or a cabman and a taxi-driver have a few words. Nobody marks him, but he keeps his eyes open and notes every policeman on duty.

The next morning the constable may get a reprimand or a five-franc piece, and wonders what invisible power deterred him in remissness or sometimes do a kind deed, to peniphe rewarded him afterwards.

The other night a policeman found a new-born baby in a doorway, picked it up tenderly, and took it to the police station. Of course, M. Lepine managed to be there at the moment, was recognized, followed the man into the station, sat on a chair in a corner and watched.

The constable-nurse did his best in the awkward circumstances, but his chiefs did not. The Commissary of Police was not there, though he ought to have been on duty. The little, elderly gentleman in the corner asked timidly whether Monsieur the Commissary would come shortly.

"What's that to you?" asked the deputy. "I should like to see him."

"Would you, indeed? Then come again." "When shall I come?"

"Don't ask questions; the Commissary is not at your beck and call."

The little, elderly gentleman was crushed and went out. But the next day Messrs. the Commissary and his deputy were suspended.

On another night, a pouring wet one, M. Lepine, soaked, bespattered with mud, and umbrellaless, went up to a constable at the door of a police station and asked if he might go in and warm himself a bit.

"Come along in, old chap, and sit by the stove," said the policeman, and another poked the fire in the grate to make it burn up.

"I put your names down for a ten francs reward each," said M. Lepine, whittioning his coat, and taking off his hat to the astonished constables.

COUNCIL AGREES TO ELIMINATE USUAL PREAMBLE FROM LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW WHEN SUBMITTED

Large and Representative Body of Citizens, Who are Interested in Local Option, Were Present at Meeting Last Night—Careful to Protect City From Chance of Litigation.

A BUSY MEETING.

One of the most important measures carried by the Council last night at their regular meeting was a motion in regard to the local option by-law which is to be presented to the ratepayers at the municipal elections in January. The sitting capacity of the Council Chamber was taxed to its limit to accommodate the large number of members of the committee and their assistants who are working in the interests of local option. The City Solicitor has prepared the by-law as it has to be passed at a Council meeting and a copy was sent to the committee who are behind the movement. It will be recalled that early in the year when the petition was presented asking that a by-law be presented to the people it was moved and seconded that a by-law be prepared as requested provided the petition was found to be fully signed, the City Clerk and City Solicitor to examine the names attached thereto. This was done and according to the Solicitor it was found to be properly signed.

In preparing the by-law Mr. Hall had the following preamble as a sort of introduction.

"Whereas petitions in writing signed by at least twenty-five per cent. of the total number of persons appearing by the last revised voters' list of the Municipality of the City of Peterborough to be qualified to vote at Municipal elections have been presented to the Council of the said City in the words following, etc."

Upon request Mr. Hall abbreviated the preamble to read as follows:

"Whereas Petitions have been received by the Council of the City of Peterborough praying for the submission to the vote of the Municipal electors of the said City, of a by-law for the purposes herein provided."

The Corporation of the City of Peterborough by the Council thereof, thereof enacts as follows," etc.

The difference is that the necessary twenty-five per cent. of the ratepayers or those qualified to vote was left out of the by-law as prepared the second time.

The Reason

Rev. J. G. Potter, who acted as spokesman for the deputation last night explained the reason for the request that no preamble be affixed to the by-law. As first prepared it had been sent by the Executive Committee to Toronto and the report returned was that it was unwise to have the preamble. If the by-law were passed in that form it might tend to lead the Council into a prolonged litigation which no citizen desired. The petition had been simply signed and great care had been taken to see that the names tallied with those on the voters' list.

The members of the Council had briefly discussed the matter in committee before going upstairs and were acquainted with it. Ald. Morgan moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral that the preamble be struck out.

Ald. Morrow asked what difference that would make. The resolution had been passed that if the petition was found upon examination to be properly and sufficiently signed that the by-law be submitted to the people. "They have reported upon that, finding it all right and I cannot see what legal difficulty is in the way." Rev. Mr. Potter again explained the matter and Ald. Morrow suggested that a resolution to the following be moved, that whereas the petition has been found to be correctly signed the by-law be presented and that it contain no preamble.

Ald. Hicks held that it was because of the fact that the petition had been signed by 25 per cent. of the ratepayers, that a by-law was being submitted and for that reason he favoured the abbreviated preamble. It was moved by Ald. Hicks and Bradburn that the short preamble be retained.

Rev. Mr. Potter speaking again said that it made no difference to the Council and why insert it? The citizens knew that the council were not submitting the by-law of themselves but because it had been requested by a large number of the qualified electors. He was satisfied with Ald. Morrow's addition to Ald. Morgan's motion provided it was not incorporated with the by-law.

Ald. Duffus favoured it provided the city was fully protected.

The vote was called on Ald. Hicks' amendment which was defeated those supporting it being Ald. Bradburn, Phelan and Butler.

Ald. Morgan's motion with the slight change suggested by Ald. Morrow was passed, the Ayes and Nays as follows: Ayes, Ald. Morrow, McIntyre, Turner, Gillespie, Morgan and Duffus.

Nays, Ald. Bradburn, Hicks, Phelan and Butler.

Ald. Duncan was not present.

The by-law will not, as a result of the motion, contain the preamble.

Communications.

The following communications were received:

Mr. C. Griffin wrote stating that he considered he had been unjustly fined in the Police Court in connection with a dispute over a line fence, and asked that the money he had paid be remitted. — Finance Committee.

Wm. Irwin, East City, suggested in a letter that the Cereal Co. bridge, at the end of London street, be planked in order to provide access to the city for the residents in the northern part of the East Ward, while the Smith street bridge is closed to traffic.—Board of Works.

J. C. Higgins stated that he will proceed in an action against the city if an account for $31.00 for gravel used in repairing his property is not settled. Ald. Phelan stated that the Engineer had reported having left the Higgins property in better condition than it had been before and that Mr. Higgins had been paid for more gravel than was actually used.

W. Green, collector of taxes, submitted the following statement of roll for the month of September:

Total amount of roll for 1909	$138,089.12
Deposit	130,773.99
Balance	$ 51,255.13
Less dis. on first inst'm't	2,658.59
Total amt. taken	$ 48,602.54
Deposited in September	520.25

R. Redman stated that he considered he should have the money collected in fines from several boys who had stolen plums from his orchard as he was the sufferer. Finance Committee.

A communication from the Board of Health recommended the construction of a sewer on Antrim street, and also on Benson avenue.

A Call for Q. T. R.

On motion of Ald. Morrow and Ald. Metheral, the city clerk was instructed to write the officials of the Grand Trunk Railway requesting them to have less whistling of trains going through the city at night. The residents in the neighbourhood are complaining bitterly.

On motion of Aldermen Morrow and Metheral the city clerk was instructed to have the by-laws to be voted on at the municipal election in January next advertised the required number of times.

Ald. Duffus moved that the city clerk write the Toronto National Fair authorities and the Peterborough Industrial Fair authorities, thanking them for the courtesies extended to the aldermen of the city.

Finance Report.

The report of the Finance committee was adopted as read by Ald. Morrow, as follows:

That the Assessors be paid the balance of their salary for this year, they having returned the assessment rolls.

That the witness fee of $6.00 be paid John Steele, in King vs. Fallon, as certified by the Police Magistrate.

That Frank Garlo be refunded $20, half of a dollar's license fee paid by him, he having returned the license.

Legal Committee.

Ald. Turner presented the report of the Legal Committee as follows:

In regard to the letter from Mrs. Emma H. Campbell respecting a house built by A. Tamblin partly on Dorenal Street, we recommend that the property on which Mr. Tamblin has built be sold to him and that in doing so an agreement be made for diverting the Downie Street creek through his property at any time the Council may [illegible] do so.

We recommend that the request from the Central Canada Citizens asking the Council by petition the Legislature to authorize the taxing of improvements at a lower rate than land be referred to a committee of the Whole Council.

Your Committee has found a need, owing to the number of excursionists that come to Peterborough, for a small pamphlet setting out the advantages and places of interest in the city to give to visitors and recommend that the matter of having such a pamphlet published be taken up early next year.

Property Committee.

Ald. Bradburn presented the report of the Property Committee as follows:

We recommend that the specifications for the heating, lighting and plumbing for the Public Library be left in the hands of the Chairman, Ald Duncan and McIntyre, with authority to advertise for tenders.

An application from Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse of the Examiner staff for position of Librarian of the new Public Library was received.

Charles Cherry's first appearance here as the star will occur next Friday evening, at the "Grand" theatre, when the Shuberts present him in Clyde Fitch's latest comedy "The Bachelor." Mr. Cherry is an Englishman and a graduate of Oxford. He came to America about ten years ago, playing his first engagement in "A Ray of Sunshine." He then appeared successfully with Henrietta Crossman, Mary Mannering and Chas De Wolfe. With Maxine Elliott he played in "Her Own Way," "Her Great Match," and "Under the Greenwood Tree." Mr. Cherry has also played London engagements with Ethel Barrymore, Maxine Elliott, and Forbes Robertson. The Shuberts admired his work in "Girls" so much that they decided to advance him to a stellar position.

The original cast, which sent "The Bachelor" to success in New York, by the way, will be seen here. The plan opens to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

A GOOD BOTTOM

For the New Smith Street Bridge on Which Work Has Been Started.

The work of scraping the river bed under the Smith Street bridge, for the purpose of securing a suitable bottom for the piers of the new bridge is being rushed as fast as possible. Scrapers, to which long handles are attached, are held by several men, who walk along two floats which have been built for the purpose and which are pulled along underneath by means of a cable, which is drawn by an engine at the bank. The water is between ten and twelve feet deep at this place and this is a big disadvantage to the contractors. Mr. E. Conroy states that an exceptionally good rock bottom has been found.

ELEVATOR TO BE INSTALLED

Big Improvements Made to the "Beehive" Store—Now Third Storey.

Extensive improvements are being made at the Beehive store just now, among the most important innovations being the installation of a modern passenger elevator, one of the best of its type manufactured. It differs from the ordinary elevator inasmuch as it is not lifted on a cable. Instead it operates on the same principle as the lift jack, and is just as safe and reliable. There is not the slightest possibility of the elevator dropping through an accident to the machinery, owing to the construction of the mechanism. The elevator is operated by water pressure, and will be installed by the Otis Fenson Company of Toronto.

The third floor of the establishment is being fitted out for use as a sales room, with mirrors, handsome counters and other fittings along the same lines as the first floor. The improvements will make the Beehive, with which is now amalgamated the Port Hope Knitting Works, one of the best and most commodious stores in Peterborough.

Will Erect Warehouse If They Can Get A C.P.R. Siding

Peterborough Hardware Company Desirous of Building South of Kinnear's Warehouse, But Some of the Aldermen Do Not Want Another Track Over George St.

ASKED LAST NIGHT

If the city will allow another siding of the C. P. R. to be laid across George street, between Dalhousie St. and the main line, the Peterborough Hardware Co. will erect a warehouse on the property between the old Oxford Hotel and the Kinnear Company's warehouse, the work to be commenced immediately. The announcement was made to the Committee of the whole Council last night by Mr. R. F. McWilliams, solicitor for the Hardware Co., the members of which are hopeful of the request being granted as the new building will permit them to enlarge their wholesale business and also give them a spacious storehouse.

Mr. McWilliams stated that the Company desired to erect a warehouse between the Kinnear building and the Old Oxford Hotel. They had arranged for the purchase of the necessary property, but were unable to get a C. P. R. siding into the premises unless it crossed George street. It would serve both warehouses. An examination of the rear of the buildings had been made and it was found impossible to get a siding from that side. If the Houedry building were removed a siding, at a much greater expense, might be provided, but it would not be of service to the Kinnear Co. The Peterborough Hardware Co., itself, does not wish to cross George street, but they have no alternative. It is not a serious matter, Mr. McWilliams said, as there would not be many cars taken in and out daily, and the C. P. R. Co. were satisfied that a limitation be placed on the working hours and would use the siding when the street traffic was at low ebb. The Company hoped the city would grant them the privilege of crossing George street, as requested.

Ald. Gillespie, Metheral, and Dutfus of the Manufacturers' Committee, had visited the property and stated that Mr. McWilliams explained the situation as they had found it.

Ald. Buller Objects.

Ald. Buller objected to another crossing over George street. The question had been dealt with last year, when an effort had been made to give the Kinnear Co. a siding. The streets in the South end were already badly cut up, and many of the ratepayers in the South Ward had spoken to him, objecting to any other streets being crossed by railway lines.

Ald. Metheral did not see how a siding could be put into the two warehouses except by crossing George St. It might be a little inconvenience, but by using the siding at certain hours of the day he did not think public traffic on the street would be obstructed to any extent.

Mr. Dodd explained that a switch would be placed on the siding running into the Central Mill. It would be closed during the day except during one hour in the morning and one hour in the afternoon. The C. P. R. gateman would guard the crossing similarly to the main line.

Ald. Buller objected to crossing the street, on the grounds that ratepayers in the south end were complaining of the way in which the streets had been cut up. He would like to see the warehouses get a siding, but he held to his opinion, believing that the citizens objected to further railway trafficking across the streets.

Ald. Bradburn—"I believe that the block in question will be largely a warehouse district, and if limited hours are used by the railway company I would not object to it crossing the street."

It was decided that the Council would visit the property at nine o'clock this morning.

FUNERAL OF MR. WM. C. KIRKE

Large Number of Friends Paid Their Last Respects to the Deceased Yesterday.

The funeral of the late Wm. C. Kirke took place yesterday afternoon. A large number of friends gathered at his late residence and at St. Luke's Church, to pay their last respect to the departed. At two o'clock a private service was held at the home by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, for the members of the family, after which the funeral cortage proceeded to the Church of St. Luke the Evangelist, where the solemn funeral service of the Church of England was held. As the coffin was borne into the Church and placed in front of the Chancel, the organist played Chopin's Funeral March, the Rector reading the opening sentences. The Hymns sung were, "Peace, Perfect Peace, in this Dark World of Sin," and "There is a Land of Pure Delight," both being favourite hymns of the departed. The Rector, in a few words paid his testimony to the faith of the departed and spoke comforting words to the mourners, who occupied the front pew in the Church. As the body was taken out, the congregation sang the "Nunc Dimittis."

Interment took place at Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt officiating at the Grave. The pall-bearers were Messrs. A. Fitzgerald, J. B. Browning, J. J. Turner, Jr., A. Kingdon, Chas. Crane and Kenneth Shook.

JUNIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing and am under eighteen years of age. I wish to be entered in the Examiner Junior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter, and send in this coupon to the sporting editor of the Peterborough Examiner as soon as possible.

SCOPE OF EXAMINER RACES HAS BEEN MUCH ENLARGED

Residents of all the Counties Adjoining Peterborough May Enter the Events This Year---Biggest Field in the History of the Events is Looked Forward To---Conditions of the Race.

The scope of the Examiner Thanksgiving Road Races which have hitherto been confined to residents of Peterborough County has been greatly enlarged by the management this year and will include as well as Peterborough County, the counties of Haliburton, Victoria, Durham, Northumberland and Hastings. In other years the entries of runners living outside of Peterborough County have been reluctantly refused, owing to the rules but now that the conditions have been changed starters from any point in Peterborough or the adjoining counties will be cordially welcomed. Since its inception three years ago the Examiner Road Race for seniors has been the biggest athletic event of the year in the Midland district and this interest in the contest has been increasing year by year so that the race is eagerly looked forward to. The contestants have always been sure of fair treatment by the management while the prizes offered have been of the best. This feeling of confidence in teh promoters has been responsible for the great success of the races in other years and will help to make the senior race of 1909 the best on record.

The same is true of the junior race which was inaugurated two years ago and in which last year there were nearly thirty starters, nearly all of whom finished. This year there will be even more in the junior race.

For the benefit of competitors in outside places, the condition of the races may be repeated. The senior race is for amateur runners only and the course is from Lakefield to the Examiner office, a distance of ten miles. Competitors must be bona fide residents of one of the following counties: Peterborough, Haliburton, Hastings, Northumberland, Victoria and Durham. Entries must be sent in to the sporting editor of the Examiner before Saturday, October 23.

Junior runners must be under 18 years of age and must be residents of one of the following counties, Peterborough, Haliburton, Hastings, Northumberland, Victoria or Durham. The prizes for this year have not been announced but they will be as good if not better than last year, which is saying a good deal.

JUNIORS BEAT SENIORS BY OVER TWO MINUTES IN ROAD RACE
THE RESULT WAS A SURPRISE

The cross country runs in connection with the Peterborough Collegiate Institute sports were held yesterday afternoon and developed a somewhat remarkable state of affairs when the junior runners starting two minutes after the seniors and running over the same course beat their elders home. The wonderful running of Harold Hill, winner of the junior race was the feature. The youngster ran the course, which is estimated at three miles in 16 minutes 23 seconds, beating the senior winner by two minutes and five seconds and cutting a big slice off the record of the course. Not only did the junior winner beat the winner of the senior event but Nagle Phelan, the second man of the juniors breezed home well in the lead of the second man of the seniors. Last year the juniors made better time than the seniors but it was never anticipated this year that they would be two minutes faster over a three mile course.

The route for both races this year was the same as in other years. The contestants started at the Collegiate Institute at the McDonnel street side and ran to the boundary, along the boundary to Smith street, along that street to Water, down Water street to McDonnel and over to the Collegiate.

The seniors were started first, the field consisting of McCabe, Elmer Brown, Stan Cresswell and W. Thompson. Two minutes afterwards the junior squad composed of Harold Hill, Nagle Phelan and Ross Laing was sent out. Hill and Phelan cut a lively pace and rapidly picked up the seniors catching them one by one and passing all the junior runners before Smith street was reached. The two youngsters hung together all the way, Phelan leading slightly as they came down Water street but a few blocks from the finish Hill took the lead and running strongly and well crossed the finishing line the first home of either bunch. Elmer Brown the smallest of the seniors, was the next man to finish, five seconds behind the junior winner and then came Nagle Phelan well ahead of McCabe, the second man of the seniors. Cresswell was the third senior to finish and Ross Laing completed the junior total.

Following were the results:

Senior
1. Brown, 18.28.
2. McCabe.
3. Cresswell.

Junior Race
1. Harold Hill, 16.23.
2. N. Phelan.
3. Ross Laing.

The annual field day of sports will take place on Friday afternoon.

SOME INTERESTING HASTINGS ITEMS

Special to The Examiner.

Hastings, Oct. 5.—Fire broke out in the shoeing factory here just as the day laborers were dispensing of the noonday's supply of coffee. Prompt work was made to subdue the flames, but notwithstanding all that was done, it was soon a mass of ruins. The loss will be heavy as the building contained a large supply of cheese, which was to be shipped in a day or two. Mr. Wallace was away from home at the time, having gone to Campbellford to attend the Exhibition.

Quite a number from this place took in the Campbellford Fair on Friday, among them the local baseball team.

Another Hastings wedding was solemnized in the R. C. church here, when Miss Rose Conway became the bride of Mr. D. Meagher, of Campbellford. The bride was attended by Miss Meagher, sister of the groom, while Mr. P. Conway ably filled the duties of best man. After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the bride's house, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Meagher left for Rochester to enjoy their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Campbellford.

Mr. O. H. Bronis took in the Lakefield Fair on Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. T. Fraser and Miss Emmeline, of Alberta, have been visiting at the home of Mrs. Faulds.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Cameron, of Peterborough were in town last week.

Mr. J. Howard has returned to Ottawa after spending a few days at his home here.

Mr. Duncan Tucker left last week for London where he has secured a position. Before his departure, the teachers of the Presbyterian S. S. met at his home and presented him with a handsome present, in token of their esteem for him. Mr. Tucker will be much missed in the Sunday School, where he has held the position of Superintendent for some time, as well as in other social circles.

On Sabbath morning last the children of the Methodist congregation were addressed by their pastor, Mr. Barrett, on the subject, "Traps for the Tongue." The subject was very ably handled and deeply impressed on the children by the use of an object lesson. All who were present thoroughly enjoyed the service.

The dinner, under the auspices of St. George's Church, which was held in the town hall on Thursday evening was fairly well patronized and a most enjoyable time spent.

Mr. O'Brien gave us a call this week in his official capacity as Inspector of Separate schools.

Mr. Eric Faulds has gone to Toronto to further pursue his studies at the School of Practical Science.

Miss Bessie White of Toronto, has been the guest of Miss H. Tate.

Miss Harvey of Toronto, is spending a holiday with her friend, Mrs. J. Wilson.

The farmers in this vicinity who harvested their potatoes report an unusual yield both in quantity and quality.

BUFFALO AT LARGE

Government Herd of Eight Hundred Animals Brought From Pablo, Montana, Is Said to Be Roaming Northward—Homesteaders Have Lost Heavily as Result of the Flames—Have Asked Help.

Calgary, Oct. 6.—That Canada's buffalo park at Wainwright no longer exists, and that the herd of buffalo secured at Pablo, Mont., by the Canadian Government after so much trouble is scattered over the prairie, and being gradually driven northward by prairie fires, is the word brought to Calgary yesterday by a local auctioneer named Edwards.

Prairie fires have been raging in the Wainwright district for nearly a week, and though the fire-fighters were called out in an effort to save the park, they were unsuccessful, and the fencing being destroyed, 800 buffalo and herds of elk were driven out of the park confines and driven northward by the flames. It will be a difficult matter to corral them if they have escaped, as Mr. Edwards reports, as the country offers every facility for them to outwit their pursuers.

The losses sustained by the homesteaders is even greater than at first reported, the fires having swept over a greater distance than was stated.

Hon. Frank Oliver, who is now in the West, will be waited on by a delegation of homesteaders from the affected areas, and asked to give them a further chance to develop their land according to the latest requirements, and also to have the Department furnish them with seed.

AFTER LIFE OF LABOUR

Famous Canadian Methodist, Who Conducted Missionary Work For Years in the Far North, Succumbs to Accident of a Year Ago—Had Lectured All Over America and the British Isles.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Rev. Egerton Ryerson Young, noted Canadian missionary and author, died yesterday morning at his home in Bradford, from injuries received in a runaway accident about a year ago. At that time he was thrown from his rig and although it was not thought he was injured beyond a few bruises, internal troubles developed, and in June he was operated on. This, however, failed to afford permanent relief, and he sank gradually until the end.

Rev. Mr. Young was born in Smith's Falls in 1840, the son of Rev. William Young, pioneer Methodist preacher. He was educated in the rural and grammar schools of the county, and at the Toronto Model School. He left home at the age of 15 and taught school until 1863, when he entered the ministry, being stationed at Thorold, and vicinity for four years. After his ordination he became pastor of the First Church of Hamilton. In 1867 he married Elisabeth Bingham of Bradford, and the following spring was called by the mission authorities to Norway House, in the Northwest Territories. Here he began his famous missionary journeys, and as a result of his work, new missions were opened, and new tribes brought under Government control. Trusted by the Indians, as well as by the white men, he became a successful intermediary, and negotiated several treaties. After eight years of this work, Mrs. Young's health failed and he returned to Ontario to resume pastoral work, having charges at Port Perry, Colborne, Bowmanville, Meaford and Brampton.

From the last named post he was called to England where he began his career as a lecturer and author. His first work was "By Canoe and Dog Train," containing graphic sketches of native life and character, and he subsequently wrote "The Apostle of the North, James Evans," "My Dogs in Northland," and several other narratives of life among the Indians. During his lecture tour he met many distinguished people in America, England and Australia, having been entertained at the White House, and at the homes of many prominent English men of affairs. Mr. Young was planning another trip to Australia when he was laid low by the accident.

It was his work among the young men particularly that bound him to the hearts of the people. He was a man of fascinating conversation. He organized Young Men's Mission Bands and scores of young men are now in the ministry, as a result of their contact with this celebrated divine. At Richmond College, England, he was responsible for nine young men entering mission work.

His widow and family of five children survive. The children are: Rev. E. R. Young, B.A., Chatsworth; Mrs. R. N. Petine, Lethbridge, Alta.; Mrs. (Rev.) A. B. [illegible], Hilton, N.S., and Mrs. Newton H. Brown, Toronto.

The funeral will be held at Bradford at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, and interment will take place at Newmarket on the arrival of the 9.00 train on Thursday.

Train Crew Blamed.

Rainy River, Ont., Oct. 6.—A coroner's jury has declared that the crew of G.N.R. extra freight 932, excepting Fireman Sanderson, are to blame for Saturday's collision, when two lives were lost. The crew had been on duty twenty hours, and at Lasaline Conductor Murdock went to sleep. A [illegible] up over subsequent orders resulted in the wreck. Engineer Purdie and Brakeman Smith have disappeared.

30 MINERS ARE DEAD

Early Morning Fire In Wellington Colliery Co.'s Pit Results In the Imprisonment of Workmen—The Rescuers Successful In Saving Many From Horrible Death—Eight Bodies Taken Out.

Nanaimo, B.C., Oct. 6.—Thirty men are now known to be dead as a result of an explosion in No. 2 Mine Extension of the Wellington Colliery Co., 15 miles from here, at 7 a.m. yesterday.

Up to this morning eight bodies had been recovered, namely: T. Thomas, J. Molineaux, Thomas O'Connell, W. Davidson, E. Dunn and one unidentified.

The work of rescue still continues, but it is not expected that any more bodies will be recovered for some hours, as the portion of the mine where the explosion occurred is badly wrecked, the brattice being torn down, and the rescuing parties are very badly hampered by gas.

The majority of the men killed are old residents and well known.

There were over 50 men entombed, but about 20 were rescued, though all were more or less burned and injured.

The explosion was due to fire damp, the timbers in two levels at once catching fire and spreading with terrible rapidity.

Wives and relatives of the missing men are in a hysterical state of apprehension.

Residents of Nanaimo have been prevented from going to the extension and only rescuers, miners and officials are on the scene.

Only meagre details have filtered out owing to the distance of the mines from lines of communication, but it is known that the entombed men are in a very precarious position.

A miner who reached Ladysmith at noon yesterday from the mine said that as he and his father were leaving the mine, bringing out their gear, an explosion occurred. The shock was terrific. The sloping was blown out and doors unhinged. The effects of the explosion were confined to the slope where it occurred. All the men in other slopes and levels escaped.

[illegible] Will Open Hospital.

[illegible], Oct. 6.—A. P. Ogilvie, Regarding the King opening the hospital at Montreal, an official of the Eddie company said that such a thing as the King touching the button at Buckingham Palace, and [illegible] by that means performing the ceremony, was impossible. If such an arrangement could be made the King would touch the button at the palace, then the operator at the Irish Table station would touch the key, giving the signal to Carter, where the operator who would also touch the key, would give the signal to Montreal.

No Licenses For Aviators.

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 6.—Aviators need not have a state license to operate, according to a ruling made yesterday at the Secretary of State's office.

Herbert Sharpe of 700 Park avenue, New York City, who says he is at present a chauffeur, made application for an aviator's license. In his letter he said he wished to have license No. 1, and that any fee determined by law would be promptly paid.

Lived on Raw Blubber.

Copenhagen, Oct. 6.—A dispatch from Tromsoe says seven members of a Norwegian expedition, who spent last winter at King Charles Land, but had been presumed to be dead, have arrived at Tromsoe on a coal steamer from Spitsbergen. The men suffered tremendous hardships. They crossed on the ice from King Charles Land to Spitsbergen with extreme difficulty, living almost entirely on raw blubber.

A Freight Wreck at London.

London, Ont. 6.—Because the jar put his lantern out when he jumped from the westbound Sarnia freight train in the G.T.R. yards early yesterday morning, Switchman Gould was unable to signal the fast eastbound Sarnia freight to stop, and it tore in to the train, wrecking the engine and many cars and tearing up the main line.

Condemned For Conspiracy.

Agram, Austria, Oct. 6.—After a trial of the socialist "Omlaje Sarvia" conspiracy case lasting seven months, sentences were handed down yesterday on the fifty-two school teachers, priests and other persons accused of high treason. Thirty were condemned to rigorous imprisonment varying from [illegible] to twelve years, and 22 were acquitted.

SHELDON'S HOUSEKEEPER.

A Wager and What It Won For the One Who Lost.

By HAROLD STRONG LATHAM.

(Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.)

"I speak from experience, Stewart, and I say most emphatically that it is impossible to secure an all round satisfactory housekeeper."

"What's troubling you? Has that latest and most hopeful one of all departed?"

"Yes—today. She drank."

"Another one in view yet?"

"No, and how I wish there never had to be! They're all alike."

"Oh, pshaw! You're a pessimist."

"Well, they are—housekeepers and women in general; good to look at—some of them, anyway—but that's as far as they go."

"Hold on there, old man! Just remember that you're talking to one who has lately taken upto himself a spouse. You aren't fair. You pass judgment upon the whole sex when all that you really know about them is what you have learned from the few whom you have hired to work for you."

IT WAS WHILE SHE WAS DUSTING THE BOOKS IN THE LIBRARY.

"I'm judging from all the women that I ever knew. My mother died when I was a baby, and I have no sisters. Just look at the girls of my set. They dance and sing, but what earthly thing are they good for?"

"If that is the case it is about time that you made some new acquaintances."

"Seeing is believing with me."

There was a pause in the conversation. The two men were seasoning their argument with periods of thought and smoke. They were good friends, though differing widely in material circumstances and usually in convictions. One, Frank Sheldon, was rich and single; the other, Stewart Van Cleats, was rather poor and married. Both were young. The silence, which had lasted for several minutes, was finally broken by Van Cleats.

"Humph!" he said, drawing his pipe slowly from his mouth. "I've got an idea."

"How unusual!" Sheldon laughed.

"My wife is dying for a piano," the other went on, paying no attention to the raillery, "and I think I see how to get her one."

"Wish I saw how to get a housekeeper," came lazily through the tobacco smoke in reply.

"The two things are connected in my idea. You say women are all alike and that it is impossible to hire a good housekeeper. I dare you to back it up with a bet."

"A bet! On a housekeeper?"

"Yes."

"Well, fire ahead. What is it?"

"Simply this—that I can produce a housekeeper who will prove entirely satisfactory to you and that some of yours who lives with you."

"What are the terms?" Sheldon asked abruptly.

"If I win you buy me a piano. If I lose I pay the girl's wages. Is it a go?"

"Indeed it is. I've got to stir me out upon the housekeeper market again, and if you want to make an employment bureau out of yourself I'm sure I don't care. But you'll lose."

"Don't be too sure of that. But, by the way, there must be a time limit to this. You might like her, but she might not like you, you know. Suppose we say that she is to stay for three weeks, longer if you want her to and can persuade her to do so."

"Agreed. But, really, I'm awfully sorry for you. I hate to see you lose," Sheldon said in mock concern.

"You'd better spend your time visiting the piano dealers," the other retorted good naturedly.

Two days afterward "the girl" put in her appearance and was hired. Sheldon congratulated that business himself, for as had learned by old experience the wrong servants were concerned the more she too exacting aunt could be kept in the background the better.

"The girl" was at first shy and doubtful about her work, but day by day she grew more skilful until, at the end of the third week, Sheldon was forced to admit that she realized his highest ideals. And then he fell in love with her!

It was while she was dusting the books in the library that he asked her to be his wife. He had hardly begun his fervent avowal of love when she interrupted him.

"Mr. Sheldon, I cannot let you go on," she said and, turned her face away from him. "What you ask is impossible, or at least—oh, I cannot. I will not, say anything more! See Mr. Van Cleats. He will tell you that I, that we, have been deceiving you." With that she hurried out of the room.

Sheldon was very much bewildered at her actions, but he lost no time in going in search of Van Cleats. In less than an hour he returned.

He found "the girl" in the hall just ready to leave. He took her by the hand and led her to a seat and then sat down beside her. He did not speak for a moment, and when he did his voice was very low and gentle.

"Dear," he said, "I love you all the more now, my plucky little housekeeper."

"You knew, then?" she asked.

"I know that you, besides being the best girl that I ever knew, are the sister of my most intimate friend, Stewart Van Cleats. Tell me, why did you do it?"

"You said that women were only good to look at."

"And it was that remark that did it all?"

"Yes: I wanted you to see that there were women who were good for something, and then," she added hastily, "Stewart told me of your bet, and I wanted him to win that piano."

Sheldon smiled. "He certainly has won," he said. He took her hand and continued: "Once there was a fellow who was neither very good nor very bad, but he had a great dislike for women. He had never been fortunate enough to meet one that he could respect through and through, and so he had grown to believe that there was none who came up to his ideal. But one day, quite by chance, there came into his life one whom he saw to be the realization of his dreams. He knew then that his opinions were all wrong. Marie, I can't go on this way any longer. You are the only woman. You have restored my faith. Will you be my wife?"

He caught her to him, for he had read her answer in her eyes.

It was not until two weeks later however, that he was allowed to put the ring upon her finger, for she had argued that it would be better for them to meet on new conditions to which they were both a stranger and in their proper social sphere.

The lights were very low in the Van Cleats library on that happy evening. Old two chairs were very close together. What was said was spoken so softly that any one could hear. But finally the two came out of their seclusion and went into the parlor, where they found Mrs. Van Cleats seated at a new and shiny piano, happily playing.

"I bought you here your bet," Marie whispered.

"But I won a wife," Sheldon replied lovingly.

Mr. Asquith, K.C., M.P.

The present Premier of England has had a brilliant career, and all he has attained has been accomplished "off his own bat."

He was born in 1852. As a youth, he won a scholarship at the City of London School, and he has kept on educated himself ever since.

At the age of twenty-four he was called to the Bar, and soon got a good practice, and he succeeded in arousing the interest of Mr. Gladstone by a brilliant speech given at a political dinner. He first entered Parliament in 1886, and in 1892 he was made Home Secretary. In 1905 he became Chancellor of the Exchequer, and when Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman died last year he became Premier.

He is a hard fighter, without any soft ways, the Premier is by no means universally popular, and even by many he is dubbed a "superior person."

WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

A Picturesque Survival.

Along the Pfalz and on the hills of Thuringia and also in some parts of eastern Prussia the traveler on midsummer eve may still see the bonfires and even if he be favored the flaming wheel (image of the descending sun) hurled down the bank into the river; also in quite a number of places he may be present at the "fire dance," for though the dance round and over the midsummer fire is a heathen rite, it has come to be associated with a sort of superstitious loyalty to the house of Hohenzollern. It was while attending the rite of the fire dance in the market place at Tangermuende that "Fair Else of Bavaria" received from a witch woman the prophecy, "Of thy seed shall blossom a race of emperors." Now Fair Else—that is, Elizabeth of Bavaria—married Frederic I. of Hohenzollern, elector of Brandenburg, and his descendant now sits on the imperial throne. Between the prophecy and its fulfillment at Versailles there elapsed 440 years.—London Graphic.

Men's Lengthy Goodbye.

"What's the matter now?" asked the little office girl.

"Talk about women!" replied the stenographer. "Did you ever see any woman beat that record?"

"What record?"

"Why, those men saying goodby. Here I've been waiting for twenty minutes for that man to go. I want to take dictation. Every time he takes a step toward the door Mr. B. says 'Hold on a minute' or something. And if Mr. B. doesn't stop him he turns back of his own accord. For twenty minutes they've been bidding each other farewell and remembering something they'd forgotten. Every few seconds they get a little nearer the door I suppose they'll finish up by going out together. I've often heard how long it takes two women to say goodby to each other, but I get a good chance to see how long the men take, and I'm blessed if it isn't longer."—New York Press.

No Hair Splitting.

"But," argues the chauffeured automobilist who has been haled before the country justice, "you haven't the shadow of a reason for arresting and trying me. Why, man, my machine was standing stock still, absolutely motionless! Even the constable will tell you that."

"The automobull was a-standin' still all right," acknowledges the constable, "but its engine was runnin' full blast, an' it sounded just like they do when they go forty miles a hour."

"But my machine was not moving! Judge, this is preposterous"—

"The evidence is all against you," coldly decides the justice. "Twenty dollars and costs. This is not the time or place for idle technicalities."—Judge.

"What We Want Are Facts."

The sentence "What we want are facts" is correct, says The Literary Digest. This decision is based on the following from Gould Brown's "Grammar of English Grammars," page 289: "What is a 'kind of double relative, equivalent to that which or those which" (making it singular or plural according to the meaning). On page 300 of the same work occurs the following: "Obs. 9. The pronoun what is usually of the singular number, though sometimes plural, as: 'I must turn to the faults, or what appear such to me.—Byron.' 'All distortions and mimicries, as such, are what raise aversion instead of pleasure.—Steele. 'Every single impression, made even by the same object, is distinguishable from what have gone before and from what succeed.—Kames' "Elements of Criticism."'"

Rather Ambiguous.

Rev. Mr. Dosem had not gained the golden opinions of his congregation, who were unanimous in asserting that he was foolish and conceited.

He considered himself greatly slandered and, meeting an old German friend of his in the street one day, began to retail his woes, ending up by saying:

"And the churchwarden actually called me a perfect ass. My cloth prevents me from resenting insults, but I think I shall refer to it in the pulpit next Sunday. What would you advise?"

"Mine friend," replied the German soothingly, "I know not, but I vhat dat all you vas do vill be vhat to pray for them, as usual!"—Pearson's.

An Extraordinary Flower.

One of the most extraordinary flowers in cultivation is Hall's amaryllis, which reverses the order of nature by blooming in midsummer without any foliage. Ordinary bulbs bloom in the spring and rest in summer, but Hall's amaryllis suddenly appears out of the bare ground during the dry season. This extraordinary plant has fragrant, waxy lilac flowers which are banded with yellow. As the spring the leaves make their growth and die, and after a long interval of rest the flower stalks appear with the strange effect here described.—Garden Magazine.

PURITY FLOUR

And Its Keeping Qualities

SOME people find it necessary to buy a considerable quantity of flour at one time—sufficient to last for a long period. Naturally they are anxious to procure a flour of the kind best adapted to lengthy storage.

There are two important reasons why PURITY FLOUR possesses these qualities. One is that it is made entirely from Manitoba Hard Wheat. The other lies in the fact that the careful milling necessary to produce "Purity" absolutely excludes all low-grade particles of the wheat berry. It's the high grade Manitoba Hard Wheat Flour that keeps—stands longest storage. That's, "Purity."

"Purity" flour may cost a little more, but is more than worth the difference. Try it. Watch results both for quality and yield.

PHOTOGRAPHERS' RISKS.

THRILLING ADVENTURES OF SNAP-SHOTTERS.

Camera Men Who Risk Their Lives For Pictures Have to Possess Intrepid Courage and Unlimited Patience—S. J. Mortimer's Work Photographing Big Waves—Snapping Wild Birds.

Although the sensational photograph has provided a fund of amusement and interest to the readers of the up-to-date illustrated periodical, few realize that in many cases the intrepid photographer-journalist has risked his life in order to obtain such splendid results.

A professional photographer with years of experience said the other day recently to a man who desires to take up newspaper photography as a means of livelihood must have a constitution of iron, nerves of steel, and the abilities of an expert steeplejack to enable him to climb to any eminence to secure the snapshots the public are shrieking for." However that may be, fear must be subservient to the photographer, and he must frequently be prepared to run more than ordinary risks of serious injury.

Most photographers nowadays specialise. Mr. F. J. Mortimer has won renown by his daring and skill in obtaining photographs of big waves. His happy hunting-ground is in the Scilly Isles, where the full force of the Atlantic rollers itself felt on the numerous rocky islands which abound.

Clad in oilskins from head to foot, and with camera similarly protected, the daring photographer finds some cosign of vantage—then a rock, almost surrounded by the sea — from which to bag his prey. If he has to occupy some particularly dangerous position, he takes the precaution to have a rope fastened round his waist, held by someone nearer the shore. He has had some narrow escapes, and on several occasions a wave has dashed him to the rocks, smashing his camera to pieces. Mr. Mortimer has been most happy in his work, however, having taken over two thousand successful pictures of big waves.

The Kearton Brothers, who are, perhaps, the most wonderful nature photographers in the world, have taken photographs of wild birds in their nests, which required not only skill, but nerve and caution. The Kearton brothers adopted all sorts of subterfuges in order to get close to their subjects. Their favorite method is to work from a small tent, which, painted green and covered with twigs and leaves, looks like a mound or hillock. For photographing birds such as larks and whitethroats they have a special life-size model of a bull, with a hole in the chest for the lens; and for mountain birds a stuffed sheep made on the same principle. Sometimes the photographer must disguise himself as a bush, branch for bough or the bushes.

Most of the Kearton Brothers' thrills have been experienced in trying to "snap" a golden eagle. They have been trying eleven years, and have not succeeded yet.

Many photographs have been taken dangling in mid-air at the end of a rope, while once Mr. Cherry Kearton waited six hours a day for three days up to his shoulders in water to get a picture of an osprey. The climax on this occasion was pleurisy or stiffs. The most desperate efforts were made to photograph a certain golden eagle on a Highland estate. Every day for a fortnight Mr. Kearton tramped up the mountains in dreadful weather, and one day during a snowstorm he fell over a cliff, smashing the camera and injuring himself so that he was laid up for a week. Many other stories these brothers tell of stratagems and adventure in their work on cliff, crag, and moor.

Herr Schillings, the German explorer, is one of the most remarkable men among enterprising photographer-journalists. He has recently published a book of his fine sets of photographs of wild animals of the forest in their native element. For several years Herr Schillings has lived in Central Africa, and his wonderful stories of hair-breadth escapes furnish us with one of the most exciting books of adventure of recent times.

Apart from these cases the general news photographer has had adventures that might have given pause to the stoutest heart. As a case in point, reference may be made to the riots which occurred some months ago on the Lancashire racecourse, when the angry crowd broke down some of the stands and set fire to the remainder. A noted Paris photographer was present, and by the flames taking snapshots at the extraordinary scenes, that it was only at the last moment that he could be persuaded to leave by the fire. His enterprise nearly cost him his life, but he reaped a rich harvest from the number of extraordinary photographs he had obtained at the risk of his life.

The launching of great battleships and liners is a time for photographers to show their mettle. They climb the masts of ships, to be dislodged sometimes from their point of vantage by the huge coil that wave, and are often rescued from a position of extreme peril just in time. Then the intrepid photographer is expected to descend coal mines after disasters to get snap-shots; he must go down with a diver to inspect the hull of a vessel or photograph coral beds at the bottom of the ocean, or ascend to a dizzy height on the iron girder of a skyscraper, or, while troops are laying down their lives for their country, he must calmly make pictures of the scene, in order to arouse the enthusiasm of his countrymen at home.

PORTUGAL'S YOUNG KING.

From Being a Careless Boy, Manuel Has Become Grave and Serious.

One of the questions interesting Europe at present is who will be chosen to wed King Manuel of Portugal. England has authoritatively denied that Princess Alexandra of Fife, Duke Edward's granddaughter, is the lucky one, and Germany denies that the little Princess Victoria Louise has been betrothed to Don Manuel. As for the youthful King of Portugal himself, he bothers little about brides and weddings at present.

It was in February, 1908, that Manuel Marie Philip Charles Amelie Louis Michel Raphel Gabriel, Duke of Beja, then a lad of 18, busy with his studies and athletic sports, became King of Portugal and the Algraves through the assassination of his father and elder brother. Since then he has succeeded to his early life and the careless boy has become a grave young man taking life almost too seriously perhaps for his own good. He resembles greatly his beautiful mother and has a fine, expressive face with dark, heavily shadowed eyes and very black hair. In physique he is slight but erect, and although three or four years ago he was accounted a delicate boy now he seems sturdy and vigorous.

The greatest love and confidence exists between Queen Amelie and King Manuel. They are more than friends and companions than mother and son. Together they work for the state. Together they walk, drive and read. Queen Amelie is still beautiful, though since the tragedy which deprived her of husband and son she has aged somewhat and lost the vivacity which made her considered the "most charming Queen of Europe."

King Manuel takes his duties very earnestly. He is not as dashing or picturesque as the eccentric Alfonso of Spain, but is far more serious and painstaking and has arranged his life in such a manner that no duty is neglected.

Rising usually at 7, he has early breakfast, then goes to greet his mother. After a talk with her he takes a walk in the shady park of the Necessidades Palace, with his two favorite dogs, Rex, a bearhound, and Tago, an Irish setter. A little later he takes a short ride on the back of a pony, or plays a few sets of tennis. At 10 he has his bath and then begins the work of the day.

He first goes through his correspondence with his private secretary, the Marquis de Lavradio, and in this task his mother sometimes helps and advises. Then he receives ambassadors from Lisbon and Coimbra with greetings and pursues his studies with them till the second breakfast, at which great the members of the royal family remain.

After the day's work is done and private audiences begin. Then every day the King and Queen go motoring out into the country, and sometimes the King leaves the car and walks, talking with the passing peasants and country folk. After dining Don Manuel's recreation is having with his mother and two others till 11 o'clock. Then when all the ladies and gentlemen of the court have retired the King returned to his study and remains there working till late.

A Visit to Sextlegs.

When Harriet Beecher Stowe was alive Mark Twain, who lived near her in Hartford, had a way of running in to converse with her and her daughters, often in a somewhat negligee costume, usually in the raiment of Mrs. Clemens.

One morning as he returned from the Stowe's sans ceremonie Mrs. Clemens met him at the door with the exclamation: "Travis, Sam; you must have been seen in the Stowe's study without a necktie! It's really disgraceful the way you neglect your dress." Her husband said nothing, but went to his room. A few minutes later Mrs. Stowe was astonished to the door by a messenger, who presented her with a small box neatly done up. She opened it and found a black silk necktie, accompanied by the following note:

"Here is a necktie. Take it out and look at it. I think I allowed half an hour this morning. At the end of that time will you kindly return it, as it is the only one I have?

"Mark Twain."

Pebbles.

Pebbles are always valuable stones and diamonds and are proportionately valuable, except the first. While a flawless diamond of 1 carat may be worth roughly about $100, a perfect ruby of the same weight would be worth at least $300. With increase of size the difference becomes much greater.

PLANNED BEEFSTEAK.

How to Prepare and Serve This Tasty and Appetizing Dish.

To prepare in beefsteak the first important step is to select your plank. This should be of hard wood, well seasoned, preferably of live oak, hickory, cedar or cherry, and it can be made to order of a size to fit your oven, or you can buy a good one at the house furnishing stores costing from 50 cents up, according to size. One that is used for fish should not be used for meat, as the fish plank should not be, whatever care is exercised each time after using, and its flavor will impregnate the meat. If you have a homemade plank you can use galvanized wire hooks to hold the steak in place, but the purchased ones have a wire attachment for the purpose, and some of them have also grooves to hold the juices of the article that is being cooked.

For planking a sirloin or porterhouse steak is usually selected. It should be cut thick and be of the best quality. If you desire your steak well done it must first be placed on a broiler and broiled both sides, one side being better done than the other. Then fasten the plank securely aside to the plank, which should have been heated in the oven until sizzling hot. Finish the broiling under a gas flame or before a broiling fire of coals. For rare or medium done steak fasten raw on the hot plank—hot enough to char it at once.

When broiled to suit the taste sprinkle with salt, pepper and a little paprika, dot with bits of butter and set on the upper oven rack while you trim with the various vegetables. These should be all ready, as go to take no time. There should be light mashed creamy potatoes, which can be piped around the edge of the plank, using a pastry tube. The potato can be moulded into little rosettes at either end, as ornaments. Between these arrange little mounds of tiny boiled and well-seasoned onions, well-seasoned peas, carrots or garlic flower. Fill in open spaces with bits of parsley or watercress or mushrooms with a garnish of the green of lemon cup filled with melted butter can be placed at either end of the plank if desired. Mushrooms often appear as a part of the garnish, and from the meat juice caught in the broiler or from beef stock a well-seasoned gravy may be made to be passed when serving the meat. Of course the steak is sent to the table on the plank, resting if on a large salver or tray.

Flowers Which Won't Mix.

The florist frowned as he took up an order for a floral decoration. "That will never do," he muttered. After calling up the customer and suggesting a change, he told the new clerk a few things.

"You must never take an order that calls for a design of chrysanthemums and roses," he said. "A centerpiece of those two flowers wouldn't last half through the luncheon. They simply will not agree with one another. I don't know why, but they can't get along together.

"It is true of many flowers. Pansies and violets look better as bunches if they are not combined with any other flowers, and the same may be said of violets. Jonquils and daffodils, on the other hand, seem to get a new lease of life if you combine considerable green with them. Carnations will go all to pieces if you combine them with roses, although the roses do not seem to be affected.

"It is more striking in combinations of green with flowers. If you try to use an entirely different kind of foliage from what the flowers is used to, it won't last so long. So I never put feathery foliage with lilies of the valley, for you know its natural foliage is a think leaf. I never use thick leaves with carnations, for their foliage is of the feathery type. It isn't as though the flowers fought, but they seem to grieve at being misunderstood."

What Next?

East Preston, Sussex, England, chefdoeuvre will shortly become the most popular institution of its kind in England, for the inmates, the guardians have decided, are to be allowed to play "ladder" golf. On the recommendation of the visiting committee, the board promptly withdrew the offer to provide putters and balls made by Mrs. Lapthorne, of Littlehampton, and authorized the master "to prepare the necessary grounds. One guardian even suggested the provision of marbles for the inmates, but the board did not treat his suggestion seriously.

Migrant Rodents.

Manitoba is threatened with an invasion of rats, which have appeared in great numbers in the towns of Gretna and Emerson, near the international border. They are "invading" northward, and the Board of Control at Winnipeg is organizing a vigorous campaign against the pests. Western Canada, especially the great grain belt, has hitherto been free from these destructive rodents, and the farmers are much concerned for the safety of their harvested crops.

The PRUDENTIAL

The Pioneer of Industrial Insurance in America.

The Prudential introduced this form of insurance into this country, and practised it for four years earlier than the oldest of its competitors.

This system of insurance makes it possible for every healthy person—man, woman or child—between the ages of one and seventy, to obtain a policy of life insurance.

The premiums are collected by the Agents of the Company at the homes of the policyholders, and the payments being small and collected frequently, do not become a burden.

Death claims are paid immediately after due proof of death has been received.

The Prudential has a larger number of policyholders than has any other company of the same age in the world.

It issues the most liberal Industrial policy in this country.

The Prudential, in its Ordinary Department, issues policies in amounts of $500 to $100,000, premiums upon which are payable annually, semi-annually, or quarterly.

In this department it issues various forms of Life and Endowment policies, embodying advantages that appeal to the different requirements of the numerous classes of applicants.

BISHOP MOUNTAIN

Recollections of the Heroic Prelate at Grosse Isle.

Apropos of the recent erection of a monument to the Irish immigrants who perished at Grosse Isle, Quebec, in 1832-34, it is interesting to note that the Anglican clergy in Canada were very active at that time in sending aid to the sufferers, who were of Roman Catholic faith. And in this connection this extract from "The Last Three Bishops Appointed by the Crown for the Anglican Church of Canada," by Fennings Taylor, published by John Lovell, of Montreal, in 1869, is of present interest. It relates to the Right Reverend George Jehoshaphat Mountain, D.D., D.C.L., third Bishop of Quebec:

The immigrant station at Grosse Isle had been set apart by Government as the receiving station for immigrants who arrived in the great ships from Europe in the cholera years of 1832-34. The graveyard of the island was rapidly filled. The disease seemed to leap across the belt of water that separates that island from the shore, and having fallen like a firebrand in Quebec, it spread through the city like a flame. When the cholera broke out in 1832, the population of Quebec amounted to twenty-eight thousand; by the end of July, that is to say, in about two months' time, two thousand and eight hundred had died. On two consecutive days in June, upwards (thus loosely the record reads) of seventy-five persons were buried by the rector. Nevertheless, amidst such harrowing duty, provision was made for further service. A horse was kept saddled day and night in his stable to enable him or his assistant in the parish to attend to people who resided at a distance from [illegible] nights, days as nightmare, they were both out, and for whole days unable to return. Again, in 1847, the ship fever, the fatal product of famine in Ireland, was imported into Canada. The Anglican clergy, who were few in number, with devoted zeal took their duty at Grosse Isle week about, the Bishop taking the first week. Most of the clergy sickened, and two of them died of the fever.

The trial, we may well imagine, was acute enough, for in the summer of 1847 upwards of five thousand) interments took place at the Quarantine station at Grosse Isle. "He can lay down his life for his friends," wrote the heroic Bishop. "There was a chivalry as well as a gentleness in his nature which, like impressed wine, communicated its energy to all. It was the spirit of Christian knighthood, of unwavering devotion which animated his heart. Fear was expelled and cast out by love; and love being the twin of faith, found joy in duty. This spirit of self-sacrifice always shone in his character, and unquestionably added virtue, as well as beauty, to his life.

When, for example, the Church Missionary Society was desirous of establishing a bishopric in the heart of the Red River country, by was the prelate to whom that request applied to take the perplexing journey of nine thousand miles. Doubtless, he was happy to go, for the work was a mission work. It enabled him to teach and to pray with Indians and half-breeds, as well as to lay the foundation of a permanent episcopate. It was during that journey, in his bark canoe, or beneath the forest shade, that he wrote and perchance sang his "Songs of the Wilderness," a collection of small poems which are bright with beautiful thoughts.

Constipation Bad Breath Headache

When the bowels are constipated and you have stomach trouble and headache, try Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They are so mild you can scarcely feel their presence, yet so effective that the entire secretory apparatus is stimulated to healthy action.

DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS CURE QUICKLY

Thus writes Mrs. D. P. Fowler, from Tamworth: "I used to feel drowsy and heavy, my eyes had a shadow, and there was usually a bad taste in my mouth. I had vague pains all through my limbs, and an annoying headache as well.

"After one dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills there was a sudden change. I felt better, my appetite increased, and that exhaustion and depression gradually left me. Life seemed brighter and happier after I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I strongly recommend such a good medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills you certainly need; then why not get them now, and enjoy the abundant good health they are sure to bring us? Price, 25c per box. 5 for $1.00. At all dealers.

Money in Rats.

The only good rats are dead rats. Alive, the rat carries disease. Dead, it may have a commercial value. The skin is fine material for book covers and for making purses and photograph frames. It may also be used in the manufacture of gloves for women, and in several of the great silken the rat killing industry is carrying on proportions. The rat in Scandinavia, as well as the species known as the Mayweiser, a fish inhabiting rodent, because of its hunting proclivities, is particularly valuable for the purpose named. The rabbit can be classed with the domestic animal. Thus in many commercial centers abroad is the rat being killed by the many thousands, not because it is a menace to public safety, but because uses have been found for the departure worthless hide. The time may come when the rat will be hunted and to only in this country, and only because of the money there in it, but because it is or some other reason.—Philadelphia North American.

Eggs and Oats.

Lord Dewell, who has been advocating divorce reform, is a man of much wit, as well as profound learning. He it was who first gave utterance to the remark: "There are three classes of egg-eaters: fools, eggs, and pea-hen eggs," while he got his own back on the interrupter at a dinner meeting who, while he was speaking on the reduction or taxation on tea, sugar, and coffee, shouted, "What about oats?" His lordship, without a moment's hesitation, replied, "Oh, you eat oats do you? I am sorry I did not see your legs. I really thought you had only two." His comment, too, on the eloquent barrister who astonished everyone at the Law Court in London one day by appearing without a rose in his buttonhole is almost historic. "I wonder how the rose got there?" remarked a well-known K.C. to his lordship. "Probably it grew there," was the prompt reply.

Mad One After All.

Mabel had always insisted the fact that he had no grandmother. He was quite satisfied with the quality of his parents and his wife, but reluctantly realized, on the whole, to have any more people about the house than already lived there, but sometimes, as since it irked him very much to think that Mabel knew and something that he had not. "Please mum, Billie Robinson and Edgar Grigg, both chums of his—they both had grandmothers, and it didn't seem exactly fair that he were deprived of one.

One day, however, he had a happy thought.

"Ma," he said, "what does the word grand mean, mother?"

"Why, lofty, beautiful, noble, sublime," replied his mother.

A broad smile wreathed the boy's face as he jumped up and down on the floor in an excess of glee.

"Hurrah!" he cried. "I have got one after all."

"One what, son," asked his mother.

"A grandmother," he replied.

"Where is she, dear?" his mother inquired.

"Why, you're it, mother," said the boy. "You're my mother, and you're lofty, beautiful, noble and sublime, especially the beautiful."

Whatever the quality of the lad's logic, his course of reasoning made one "grandmother" very happy.—Lippincott's.

GRAND RALLY

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 33 1-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

BOYS

THE

EXAMINER

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Dr. F. R. McBrien, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., who was accused by Henry Williford and his wife at the inquest on Friday night into the death of Susie Clark, of Napanee, denies that he had anything to do with the affair, or any knowledge of it.

Emperor Francis Joseph has raised Countess Sophie Chotek Von Chotkova, the morganatic wife of the heir apparent, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, to the rank of duchess, with the title of highness. Domestic Takes Carbolic.

Cornwall, Oct. 6.—Miss Margaret Levan, aged 22, whose parents reside in Guelph, attempted suicide by carbolic poisoning. She is in a precarious condition in the hospital. She came here some months ago to work in T. Fletcher's home as a domestic. On Monday night the family were away from home and when they returned yesterday morning, they found the girl in her room unconscious on her bed.

Miss Levan left a letter to Mrs. Fletcher thanking her for many kindnesses and asking that an enclosed note be sent to her mother. This note explained, it is said, that she wanted money as requested and begged forgiveness.

Miss Levan was a well-educated, intelligent girl, whose position was no indication of her attainments.

Earl Grey Criticized.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—The Evening Free Press, local Government organ, takes Earl Grey to task for his recent remarks in the West on German war scare and naval situation. It says:

"If our Governor-General has to retain the great respect, which the fact that they are the direct representatives of the Throne entitles them to, they must keep out of politics. They must shun even an appearance of partisan discussion. We can imagine rumors that would be created among large sections of the people of the British Isles if King Edward were to express such opinions as those uttered by Lord Grey, and why should the Canadian Governor-General go further than the monarch whom he represents would dare to go?"

King Sends For Asquith.

BERNIER IS HOME

Canadian Explorer Believes Cook Reached the Pole

Quebec, Oct. 6.—The Government steamer Arctic arrived yesterday morning at 6 o'clock. She steamed up the harbor, looking as neat and trim as the day she sailed from the port of Quebec, fourteen months ago. As soon as the little vessel came alongside the King's wharf and a gangway was placed in position a number of members of the crew hastened ashore, and for a time all was confusion on the ship's deck. Captain Bernier and every member of the crew looked the picture of health, and were in the best of spirits.

A number of newspapermen from various parts of Canada were among those who crowded on board the Arctic after she was securely moored. They surrounded Captain Bernier and bombarded him with a multitude of questions. At first he was reluctant to speak, until Mr. Beland, Quebec agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department, came to the newspapermen's rescue and told the captain he was at liberty to tell his story to the scribes. Captain Bernier needed no second bidding; nevertheless, it was evident that he was cautious, and kept back something which he was determined the Minister of Marine and Fisheries should hear first. It was also evident that Captain Bernier believes in Dr. Cook, though he does not discredit the veracity of Commander Peary. He said he believed that both Dr. Cook and Commander Peary reached the Pole, or very near it, but was of the opinion that the member of the New York Arctic Club, Dr. Cook, reached the goal first. He said the Pole was 90 degrees north, and, according to Dr. Cook's statement, he reached that point, which made it clear that he was within a couple of days of the actual Pole.

France Becoming Uneasy.

Paris, Oct. 6.—The preparations for the extension of Spain's operations in Morocco, involving the sending of heavy reinforcements, are creating increasing uneasiness in Paris.

The Petit Parisian, a journal owned by Minister of Commerce Dupuy, in which is regarded as an inspired article, says that Spain's progress seems to go beyond the object originally communicated to the powers. It provokes apprehension in Europe, especially in London and Paris. The colonial authorities of Algeria have notified Paris of the existence of fanatical excitement in the interior, and speak of danger along the Algerian frontier if General Molina, the commander of the Spanish forces in Morocco, attempts to push his expedition southward from Melilan.

In conclusion, the paper intimates that the reports from the interior of Spain indicate that there is grave danger of serious trouble at Madrid as soon as the country is denuded of troops.

The dinner was given by the British residents of New York under the auspices of St. George's Society, St. David's, St. Andrew's, and the British School and University Clubs.

Aeroplane Motor Breaks.

New York, Oct. 6.—Wilbur Wright said yesterday: "The accident yesterday afternoon (when the explosion of an overheated motor damaged the canvas planes) taught me a lesson—that until motors are perfected we shall have no perfect machine. The science of flying now depends on the motor. My aeroplane was all right, but my motors are not."

$100,000 Jewel Robbery.

Pittsburg, Oct. 6.—Mrs. H. Robinson Rea, wife of the wealthy oil operator, has been robbed of $100,000 in jewels, and family heirlooms, and neighborhood gossip attributes the theft to a German nobleman who was employed in the summer home of the Reas as major-domo, and disappeared about a month ago.

WILL REVISE THEIR DUTIES

What Constitute Duties of Janitors at the Local Schools Discussed.

As to what constitute the duties of the janitors of the Public Schools of the cities came up for a good deal of discussion at the meeting of the Board of Education last night. A bill from one of the janitors for some repair done at one of the schools was the incentive for the discussion. Mr. W. H. Hill believed that such work should come under his regular duties and that there should be no extra charge. Dr. Morrison and Mr. Dumble were of the same opinion as Mr. Hill but Mr. Crane did not think that when the board was engaging janitors they should expect to get carpenters and mechanics.

Finally upon motion of Mr. D. W. Dumble and Dr. Burnham the supervision committee was authorized to revise the duties of the janitors as that Inspector Mowat reports work done by them.

DISCOVERS NEW LAND FOR CANADA

BERNIER'S PET ACHIEVEMENT

Special to The Examiner.

Quebec, Oct. 6.—What is considered a feature of Captain Bernier's expedition is the conquest of the North West passage, which was undertaken from the east for the first time, and successfully effected, while the planting of the Union Jack on the remained of the Arctic archipelago is the Captain's pet achievement, and it is believed the reports he is guarding so carefully are in regard to this land, which he took possession of.

Capt. Bernier of the Government Exploration Steamer Arctic in Letter to Rev. Dr. Marsh Tells of His Trip.

NEW ARCHIPELAGO

That Capt. Bernier, of the Canadian Government exportation steamer "Arctic" has discovered and claimed new lands for Canada in the frozen north is indicated by a letter which has been received from the explorer by Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville, who is a very warm friend of Capt. Bernier. In July over a year ago Rev. Dr. Marsh wrote to his friend, and has just received the answer, written as soon as Capt. Bernier reached Quebec. In his letter, which the Examiner is enabled through the kindness of Dr. Marsh to reproduce in full, he gives more information about his discovery than he has given out to the newspaper men who besieged him on his arrival at Quebec the other day. His letter, which is dated Quebec, Oct. 5, is as follows:

Dear Dr. Marsh:—

I received your letter dated July 29, 1908, and I am writing at the first place I have had the opportunity to answer. I have carried the Canadian exploration expedition to the largest Arctic archipelago islands, and I could have made the Northwest passage as easily as going to Quebec, but I had not the orders. But I must be thankful for having accomplished so much with the little "Arctic" which now people have to acknowledge has done her duty, as her commander tried to do his. Now that the north pole has been discovered it matters a good deal to me after having spent $20,000 of my own money and having had the privilege of helping the discoverer to get there. I have the consolation to see that Capt. Amundsen will do the drift with the old "Fram." Time will tell whether my plans were right in wanting to do the same thing many years ago. We have lost the honour of discovering the pole for Canada, but I have made claims for Canada to the last westward island and to all lands lying eastward and to the 90th degree of longitude. Time will tell if I am right, as I have on my side for Canada, Russia and America, who have passed their verdict, as I have collected licenses from American whalers as well as from Southern whalers, all admitting our claims without a single gun being fired. I have many friends on both sides who admit I was right in claiming for Canada what some of our fathers have laboured so hard to secure, such as poor Franklin and others.

But dear Doctor, I must stop and inquire how you and Mrs. Marsh and family are. I hope that they and inquiring friends in Hamilton, Toronto and Springville are all in good health. I will be in Ottawa later to finish my work. I must thank you for your hospitality while in your home at Hamilton for nearly a month.—Yours, etc.,

J. E. BERNIER,
S. S. Arctic.

Capt. Bernier is a member of the Royal Astronomical Society, having been admitted some time ago on the motion of Rev. Dr. Marsh. Efforts are being made to have the gallant captain come to Peterborough and lecture before the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada.

Young Man! You'll quit boasting of how you are going to remain single after you see what happens to "The Bachelor" at the Grand next Friday Evening. Plan open until 9 to-night.

BAD FIRES IN NORTH WEST

Special to The Examiner.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 6.—Disastrous prairie fires are raging in many parts of the west, and the damage to farms will be heavy. A despatch from Calgary states that fires are sweeping through portions of southern Alberta, wiping out whole districts. No loss of life has yet been reported, though it is feared that isolated homesteaders may have perished. Saskatchewan and Manitoba are also suffering from bad fires with heavy losses to crops. There has been no rain in the West for over a month, and the country is like tinder. It is the driest and warmest month in the history of the West. Yesterday was 81 in the shade.

RUSSIAN SHIPS LITTLE BETTER THAN PRISONS

Sailors are Treated Like Slaves—Said to be Underfed and Ill-treated—Often Put in Irons.

London, October 6.—Exciting scenes were witnessed at Bideford Quay in connection with the crew of the Russian schooner Setti, of Riga, which arrived with timber. The vessel is manned by Captain Kadakas and mate, and half a dozen youngsters, aged from 15 to 20. She was several weeks overdue, and the fact that boys had been set to work on such a vessel was much commented upon in the port. When the lads were put to the heavy task of helping to unload they could not keep pace with the burly hand stevedores and three of the men refused to work and went ashore, complaining to the police and harbour authorities that they were underfed and ill-treated. They said they had suffered in this way during the whole voyage, and brought ashore samples of their food. Their complaints excited great sympathy. At eight the lads, aged 16, 18 and 20, went aboard again and were confined. Next morning the captain and mate went to put them in irons. They succeeded with two, but the third escaped ashore and ran to the harbour master's office. Nothing could induce him to go back. A large and hostile crowd lined the quayside all day, and a collection was made to enable the youth to reach Cardiff to put his case before the Russian consul. Before leaving, however, he bought a loaf and got it into his comrades. When the crowd got the impression that this loaf had been taken from the sailors it was more than young Bideford could stand. Taking the advantage of the captain going to the cabin, they boarded the vessel, and soon the two young fellows with their handcuffs broken, were hustled out of the ship and taken away to have the remains of the irons filed off. The police did not interfere, and if the captain had interfered there would undoubtedly have been a serious conflict. A local magistrate and the police-sergeant had previously interviewed the captain without result. He denied all the allegations of ill-treatment. He said the lads would not work, that he had to take them back to their port of embarkation, and that he handcuffed them to prevent them deserting. The three lads were sent to Cardiff. It was recalled that from a Russian vessel at Teignmouth, about a year ago, one of the men jumped overboard while handcuffed in his endeavour to escape from the ship.

FROM MR. BAILEY

Letter to Council Referring to the Grand Stand at Driving Park.

Mr. Wm. A. Bailey has written to the Council calling the City Fathers' attention to the condition of the grandstand at the driving park. In the opinion of some too strong and with an exhibition crowd occupying all the seats it is practically dangerous. The letter was read and received.

CITY'S POOR

Committee Has Taken Up the Matter Which is Now Under Consideration.

The problem of dealing with the city's poor has been taken up by a committee of citizens, who are considering means of adequately providing for those who need public assistance. A letter was received by the Council asking that nothing be done in regard to the petition on behalf of the House of Providence until the committee had prepared their plans.

GOLDEN WEDDING WAS CELEBRATED AT LINDSAY

Mr. and Mrs. George Matthews Celebrated the Occasion With the Assistance of Their Sons and Daughters and Their Families—A Notable Gathering Yesterday—Souvenirs for Those Present.

With a grand re-union of their family, Mr. and Mrs. George Matthews of Lindsay, yesterday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. The affair was a great success in every way, the sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Matthews with their children coming from far and near to be present at the celebration.

Mr. Matthews who was married just fifty years ago yesterday to Ann Smithson of South Monaghan township has lived in Lindsay for many years and is one of the most prominent citizens of that town. He is the head of the George Matthews Company, Limited, with factories in Ottawa, Hull, Brantford and this city.

The sons and daughters and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Matthews assembled for dinner at the Benson House at Lindsay yesterday afternoon at half past two o'clock, and a very pleasant time was spent. The dining-room of that hotel was beautifully decorated. The colour scheme was russet brown and the pervading tints of autumn, and branches of [illegible] with the leaves in the most [illegible] autumnal tints, combined with the other decorations delightfully.

Mr. T. F. Matthews of Peterborough, was toast-master for the occasion, and after dinner had been served a toast list was honoured.

Mr. and Mrs. George Matthews received many gifts from their children, all expressive of the universal joy at the occasion of their re-union.

To each one present, Mr. Geo. Matthews presented a solid gold spoon engraved with the initials of himself and wife, and with the date of their marriage and the present occasion of their golden wedding.

The children present were as follows:

William E. Matthews, son, and wife and three children of Ottawa.

Mrs. John Proud Ryley, daughter, and husband and two children of Lindsay.

George S. Matthews, son, and wife and four children of Brantford.

T. F. Matthews, son, and wife and five children of Peterborough.

Robt. Charles Matthews, son, and wife and two children of Toronto.

Mrs. Harold Stanley Stewart, daughter, and husband of Coudersport, Penn.

Alfred J. Matthews, son, and wife and daughter of Halifax, N.S.

Miss Alice Maud Mary Matthews, daughter, at home in Lindsay.

Mr. George Matthews, the head of the family, was born in Birmingham, England, seventy-five years ago. His ascent from an ordinary farmer to the head of a big industry has been achieved through ability of no mean level.

When but a young man, Mr. Matthews came to Canada. In South Monaghan township he settled as a farmer, pioneering the land himself. His marriage to Ann Smithson, the fiftieth anniversary of which was celebrated yesterday, took place in the year 1859.

Shortly after his marriage he moved to Lindsay where he conducted a provision store which was among the earliest in that town. This store was destroyed by the big fire which laid waste the town in its early history.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Matthews went to Oshawa for a year or so, Mr. Matthews conducting a general business [illegible] there. On his return to Lindsay he was given the position of superintendent of the packing house of C. L. Baker. This packing house was acquired by him in 1873, and from then Mr. Matthews' rise in the world was rapid.

A few years later a packing house was built in Peterborough and afterwards another in Ottawa. The factory here was closed down in 1897. Previous to this the business had been formed into a limited liability company.

Branching Out

Another branch was added to the firm in 1903 when the business of the Brantford Packing Company was taken over. The three establishments are now [illegible] operated by the one company. [illegible] of Mr. Matthews are in charge of the various packing houses. Mr. T. F. Matthews has charge of the local plant, W. E. and A. E. Matthews are jointly in charge of the establishment at Ottawa, and Geo. S. Matthews at Brantford.

The history of the [illegible] company fits closely into [illegible] of the man whose golden wedding [illegible] celebrated to-day. Its success was [illegible] cess.

Collegiate Students To Receive Physical Culture At Y. M. C. A.

The students of the Collegiate Institute will henceforth have their gymnasium classes in the Y.M.C.A. "gym" under the direction of the Physical Instructor of that institution. This was the recommendation of the supervising committee in the report adopted at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education last evening.

The report read as follows:—

Chairman and members of Peterborough Board of Education,

Gentlemen,—

Your supervision committee beg to report as follows:

In view of the fact that the Government regulations regarding Collegiate Institutes call for a "satisfactory gymnasium, failing which the school shall forfeit its status" your committee have entered into negotiations with the Y.M.C.A. for the services and use of the equipment and gymnasium of the association, for a period of five months from November 1st, 1909, to March 31st, 1910. The cost to the Board will be $[illegible] being half salary of the instructor. This your committee feel, should meet the requirements for the present.

We recommend that the arrangements as outlined above be carried out.

The overcrowding of the lower forms in the Institute referred to in the Principal's communication of the 7th September has been to some extent relieved by the opening of another room.

The property committee has utilized [illegible] already on hand and the room was completed on the 1st of October.

Your committee recommend that the usual grant of $[illegible] be made to the schools sports.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

John Crane, Chairman.

The report was adopted.

Medical Health Officer May Be Appointed For City Schools

At the meeting of the Board of Education last evening, Mr. D. W. Dumble brought up the matter of the appointment of a medical health officer in the city schools. He believes that such an appointment should be made and that it would be in the best interests of the pupils. Such an officer's duties would be to visit the schools regularly and examine each one carefully. In that way the scholars would be kept healthy and clean and the environment would then be conducive to good progress being made. Mr. Dumble stated that he would bring the matter up at the next meeting of the board.

EXPLORE THE CAVE

Two Young Warsaw Girls Are First of Their Sex to Enter Mouth in the Strange Cavern Near Warsaw.

UNATTENDED BY GUIDE

Examiner Special.

Warsaw, Oct. 6.—To Misses Beatrice McKirk and Marjorie Choate belongs the honour of being the first of their sex to explore the cave at the head of the Quarry Lake, situated about three miles north of this place. These adventurous young ladies made a visit to the ominous appearing cavern one afternoon this week unattended by a guide, entered the dark and gloomy cavity in the earth's surface, into which the light of day does not penetrate but a very short distance, necessitating the use of artificial light, and a guide rope from the outside. The ladies are apparently none the worse for their experience, though their nerves are scarcely as steady as before, especially when speaking of the event or in relating any of the many weird and spectral stories of which they are bearers. It is apparent however, that none of the family of Lynx, that have been inhabiting the cave for some years past were home on this particular occasion.

KEENE FAIR

Grand Weather for Annual Event Which is Being Held To-day.

Keene's annual fall fair is being held to-day and a large representation of Peterborough's citizens are in attendance, not a few of whom motored. The affair should be a record breaker as the weather man has been most generous.

The plan for Clyde Fitch's most humorous comedy, "The Bachelor", opened at The Grand this morning. Reserve your seats early as a capacity house is assured.

MATCHED RACE

Prof. Turner and Mr. Crane Will Meet at Brock Street Rink.

Mr. Crane of the Brock Street Rink has stated that he has made arrangements with Prof. Turner for a matched roller skating race of one mile to be held in the Brock Street Rink.

There has been considerable talk about the race of late and a large crowd will likely be out to see the event. The date has been set for October 14th.

A BOON TO MOTHERS

When Children Are Ailing

Children are always contracting colds, bruises, burns, etc., and most infrequently contract ringworm, scaly [illegible] cases, and similar skin troubles of [illegible] school. Mothers will find Zam-Buk without equal for these accidents and diseases.

Mrs. Thomas Allen, 178 Water St., St. Mary's, Ont., says: "My daughter Mildred, 4 years old, was severely burned by falling on a hot flat iron. She was burned on the leg, instep and on the thigh very badly. I at once applied some Zam-Buk, which eased the pain, and as we kept on using it a few days the wounds were completely healed."

Mrs. George Aldridge, [illegible] street, Stratford, says: "My little daughter contracted about the [illegible] Bertram, six years old, [illegible] broken glass bottle. [illegible] deep and large, and [illegible] had the foot properly dressed, [illegible] for leaving a lotion to be applied daily. Under this treatment [illegible] the wound seemed to get no better, but on the contrary inflammation set in. A kindly neighbour then recommended Zam-Buk. We obtained a supply, and after a few applications the child seemed to rest better, and the pain was very much relieved. In a few days, under the Zam-Buk treatment, the wound assumed a healthy appearance, and from that time healing was very rapid. Inflammation and soreness were finally completely banished, and in ten days from the first application of Zam-Buk, we took the bandages from the foot. I feel sure that but for Zam-Buk the child would have had a very bad time, and might have had to sacrifice the toe."

Not only for cuts, burns, bruises, etc., is Zam-Buk effective, but also for serious skin diseases such as eczema, ringworm, [illegible] It also [illegible] poisoned sores, chronic wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, chapped hands, cold sores, frost-bite, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores everywhere sell at 50c a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations sometimes represented to be "just as good."

THE "CHEAP READERS."

The Whitney Government boasts that it has provided the children of the people of Ontario with cheap Readers. This is admitted, but it must also be admitted that the readers, in relation to price, come under the general rule that an article is worth what one pays for it. A shoddy suit of clothes at $10, is worth $10; a suit of first-rate tweed at $20, is, as a rule, worth $20. These remarks, read in connection with an article reprinted from the Globe in another column—headed "With Faint Praise"—seem to be well justified if applied to the Ontario "Readers." A careful reading of this article would indicate that their cheapness is the one commendable feature of a generally unsatisfactory set of readers. And there are those that say that this cheapness is only creditable to the Whitney Government through concessions that give the publishers favours in respect to a general business, such as an exclusive publishing house could not make useful. We have evidently not heard the last word about the character of the new Ontario Readers.

SIR WILFRID AND THE CLASSICS

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking at the opening of the new Quebec Technical School, advised young men to "spend more time studying Shakespeare, Gibbon and Macaulay, and less going over Virgil"—the new school, following the advice of Sam Weller, the elder, "spells it with a 'we'". Sir Wilfrid is generally level headed, but it is to be noted that his mother tongue was French, and in drinking from these wells of English undefiled, to better acquire our language, he became the master of classic English that he is, and in the process became prejudiced in favour of the authors mentioned. In a well-educated man, Sir Wilfrid to the contrary, notwithstanding, knowledge of Latin serves a most useful purpose. One would not expect to be an expert mathematician without a knowledge of the fundamental element of mathematics, arithmetic. One has a better understanding of English if one is familiar with its elementary constituents. Take a page of an etymological English dictionary at random and it will be found that the great majority of words are of Latin origin, either directly or through the French. One can have a much better appreciation of the finer significance of the words of the English language if one knows the root meaning of the words he employs. It's all very well for Sir Wilfrid to set up Shakspere as a model. Though rare Ben Jonson tells us that Will of Avon had "small Latin and less Greek," that proves little. We can't all be Shaksperes; we can not all use the blunt Anglo-Saxon, as it was used by Shakspere under the inspiration of his genius. We creatures of common clay and every-day brains, would make a sorry showing if we were confined to the vocabulary of Shakspere. We lack the mind that was behind the use he made of his verbal building blocks. This reminds one of Wordsworth, who was no admirer of Shakespeare. One day, he said to Lamb, in a tone of depreciation, that he "could write as good poetry as Shakespeare if he had a mind" "Bu-bu-but," replied Lamb, who stammered sadly, "yu-yu-you la-la-lack the mind." A pretty smart smattering of Latin is a most useful equipment for a young man who aspires to anything like literary pretence. It will help him to a better knowledge and appreciation of English classics. But Latin should be a means to an end, not an end. It should not be studied to the exclusion of—only in conjunction with—useful subjects. It should be an "entree," not the "piece de resistance" of an educational bill of fare.

In the course of its contention that the Conservative party is the low tariff party in Canada to-day, the Toronto News makes the amazing assertion that the scale of duties was lower under the Foster tariff than under the Fielding tariffs. What does the record show?

THE BUDGET AND THE PEOPLE.

In a recent issue of The London (Eng.) Westminster Gazette, we read:

So far as the opinion of the country is concerned, all indications continue to point to the general popularity of the budget, and in particular of the land-value taxes. We have even had the remarkable spectacle of a Unionist M. P., a brewer, of all people, explaining to his constituents why he has not voted against the land clauses. "As he looked around Burton," said Mr. Ratcliff, M.P., on Tuesday, "and realised the land monopoly of Lord Anglesey, he could not bring himself to vote against the land clauses of the Government's bill." The Observer has a sufficiently amusing theory to account for what it calls the "passivity" of Unionism. The hungry sheep look up and are not fed; they "are waiting for a lead," which, alas! can only come from the Lords after the budget is through the House of Commons. Lord Lansdowne, before he can decide if the ground is "favourable," wants to know what the country thinks, and the Unionist part of the country has to remain "passive" until it knows what Lord Lansdowne thinks. That is, indeed, a ludicrous state of things, or rather would be if it were anything more than a despairing attempt to explain away the comparative failure of the endeavour to demonstrate that the country is against the budget.

At first the Lloyd-George budget was popularly regarded with indifference, if not, hostility. But the more its provisions became known the more they commended themselves to the "common" people, who have for centuries borne the burden of national taxation. The people are coming to see that the budget aims at the connection of this jug-handled condition. It aims to the levelling of class standing, in regard to payment of taxes, at least. We can hardly look forward to human equality in all respects. As Balzac observes "equality is a right, but it can never become a fact." The Lloyd-George budget, however, is a step forward in a direction which can never be realised, but which brings correction of a hoary injustice with the mould of centuries upon it.

"WITH FAINT PRAISE"

(The Globe)

If ever a work that ought to have been great was condemned as mediocre with faint praise from disappointed friends that work is the new Ontario "Readers." Several reviewers have taken in hand to speak well of this, the most important task the Education Department has put its hand to under the new regime, but even the most enthusiastic, if his critical faculty was awake, found himself dealing in generalities and platitudes. The things of least importance have been approved, while the essential things have been indifferently praised or entirely ignored. Driven to despair in its search for a critic's commendation, The Mail and Empire, on Saturday last, had the following editorial comment:—

"Of the new Ontario 'Readers,' the only careful criticism that has yet appeared comes from the pen of Arnold Haultain and is published in the October Canadian Magazine. While this review of the books is thorough, it is not censorious. Mr. Haultain speaks well of the style and the price, and takes exception merely to ont or two of the editorial features. . . . That the books are not perfect will no doubt be admitted by those who compiled them. But whatever their faults, they are very good."

"They are very good!" That reminds one of the poor curate's eager defence of the eggs at the Bishop's breakfast. "I'm afraid the egg you got is not very good," said the Bishop. "O, my Lord," said the osbequious curate, "It will do very well, very well indeed. There is some of it not bad at all."

But it may be worth while noting Mr. Haultain's "careful criticism," which the chief journal of the Government says is "thorough but not censorious." Certainly no one will accuse him of political hostility or discount his right to judge. His first "criticism" is in these words:—

"To be candid, the new set of 'Readers' authorised by the Minister of Education of the Province of Ontario reflects more credit upon the publishers than it does upon the compilers. The cover is neat, the binding strong, the paper good, the type clear; and for all this excellence the price is astonishingly cheap. It should be remembered, however, that is no case has anyone been paid for copyright."

But cheapness in price is not the great desideratum in a set of school "Readers." "From the point of view of what may be called the ethical value of literature," says Mr. Haultain, "the compilers seem to have chosen judiciously." With "the inexhaustible treasure of English literature" open to them "it should not be so very difficult" to obtain passages inculcating the virtues. It is in "what may be called the purely literary value of literature" that, as Mr. Haultain thinks, the compilers display their "short-comings." "All four 'Readers' abound in seletions from writers now living or so very recently passed away that Time has no opportunity of sifting the excellent from the mediocre." And certainly "four selections from one and another young Canadian writer and only one from Milton does seem to warrant the suggestion that the compilers are quite ready to "pit their judgment against that of posterity."

Mr. Haultain's "careful" and "not censorious" criticism has to do with arrangement as well as with quality. "The selections," he says, "seem to be thrown together in the most haphazard of fashion. Order and classification there seems to be none." After giving examples of unscholary disorder, he says: "Surely this is rather hodge-podge!"

Then, too, this "careful" critic finds scattered through the books vagrant sentences and lines and phrases from unnamed authors, inserted "apparently to fill the page" He rails at these offences against all canons of literary art in a "Fourth Reader," and wonders how a pupil "can get any real knowledge and a cultivated taste from a perusal of these snippets of Literature." "In the whole volume there are not half a dozen explanatory notes; there is not even an index."

After pointing out other short-comings, some of which are not all short-comings, the Globe continues:

It is scarcely needful to note other examples of editorial slovinliness marked by Mr. Haultain. He gives instances to justify his criticism that "the choice of illutrations seems to have been as fortuitous as the choice of selections." But why multiply? The curate's comment, like The Mail and Empire's "faint praise," evidently does full justice to the work: "There is some of it not bad at all."

STOMACH DISTRESS AND DYSPEPSIA GO

Makes Your Out-of-Order Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes.

As there is often some one in your family who suffers from an attack of Indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort and overcome a sour, gassy stomach, five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes and relieves at once such miseries as Belching of Gas, Eructations of sour undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common every-day cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and, besides, poison the breath with nauseous odours.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slighest discomfort or misery of the stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

Kelly, Star Tackle, Is A College Hero

FRANK KELLY

Few athletes whose names are shouted by enthusiastic students deserve more credit than Tackle Kelly of the Chicago University eleven.

Kelly has worked his way through college by doing odd jobs. Despite his ability as a football player he has not been "helped" through school, as is so often the case with star performers. On the contrary, he has made his way, waiting on table, tending furnaces and doing other chores.

Do the students think any the less of him for this? Not on your life. On the contrary, Kelly is a college hero, and his splendid determination to win his way through the university in the face of all obstacles has won him the respect and friendship of everyone with whom he comes in contact.

GREAT INTEREST IN THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

The Attendance at Pittsburg Promises to Break All Records --37,000 Reserved Seats for the First Two Games have Been Disposed Of--Tickets are at a Premium and so is Hotel Accommodation.

Pittsburg, Oct. 5.—All of the box and reserved seat tickets for the Saturday game of the world's championship series have been sold, and no more orders will be filled for that day. All checks received at the office of the ball club to-day will be returned. There will, however, be in the neighbourhood of from ten to twelve thousand unreserved seats for this game, and these general admission tickets will be on sale on the day of the game.

A corps of experts, consisting of bank clerks, ticket sellers and handlers familiar with the work, was organized yesterday morning to take care of the orders for tickets. No mail was accepted from the post-office after ten o'clock Saturday morning, and it was not until midnight Saturday that all the mail received prior to that time had been opened. It was then found that the orders far exceeded the supply of reserved seat tickets, and it will be necessary to refund some of the money sent in.

On Sunday morning the balance of the mail that had been in the post-office for twenty-four hours was acquired, and the orders for Friday's game were separated and will be filled. All the Saturday orders received in the mail Sunday will be returned. This does not mean that there will be no room at all Saturday for the late comers, but there will be no reserved seats. The seats placed on sale have gone like hot cakes.

Twenty Experts at Work

It will require the present force two days to fill the orders that have been accepted. The first batch of tickets were put in the mail yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, and from that time until midnight mail was taken to the post-office as fast as the twenty experts could prepare it. While the number of orders was double that expected by the management, no change in the system of operation will result from this unexpected demand.

After the tickets were sent out the orders were filed alphabetically, and each ticket can be traced. Prior to the filing of the orders, however, there is no way of finding any order given, and there were hundreds of requests for changes that could not be complied with. Howard Cummits is determined to break into the world's series or able to stand up. He was on the grounds yesterday for the first time in nearly a week, and called at headquarters to say that he would begin practising Wednesday. He protested to feel fairly well, but did not look the part.

Why Tigers Will Win

That the Detroit fans are confident of their idols carrying off the world's championship title is putting it very mildly, some going so far as to tell one manner in which the Pirates are to be slaughtered. One Detroit writer states that the Tigers have four advantages over the Buccaneers, which are as follows:

First—The Tigers have a pitching staff superior to that of the Pirates.

Second—While the hitting strength is about equal, the Tigers far surpass the Pirates as base runners.

Third—The Tigers are seasoned to the grind, while the Pirates have several on their crew, who are young, nervous fellows.

Fourth—Both clubs play the same style of game. The Pirates have no defensive play, as the Cubs had, and pin the wonderful speed of the Detroit team on the bases, the Tigers will have a mighty advantage, unless Gibson, who has caught every game this year, and is there, can do three more than Johnny Kling. And Kling did not have Moriarty, T. Jones, Bush and Delehanty to throw against, but much slower men.

THREE RECORDS BROKEN IN THE COLLEGIATE JUMPS

M. O'Brien Cleaned up the Senior Events in Great Fashion, Breaking Three of the Old Marks--Juniors Also Did Excellent Work.

The great work of M. O'Brien in the senior events featured the jumping contests in connection with the annual sports of the Collegiate Institute Athletic Society. The jumps were held yesterday at Riverside Park and O'Brien broke three records in decisive fashion, easily winning all four events. The standing jump was the only one in which the previous mark was not surpassed. The winner is surely "some lepper." The results in the senior events were as follows:

Standing Broad Jump
1 M. O'Brien, 8 ft. 6 in.
2 Fessenden.
3 Ray Scott.

Running Broad Jump
1 M. O'Brien, 18 ft. 1 in. New record.
2 Fessenden.
3 Scott.

Standing Hop, Step and Jump.
1 M. O'Brien, 26 ft. 2 in. New record.
2 Fessenden.
3 Scott.

Running Hop, Step and Jump
1 M. O'Brien, 37 ft., 2 in. New record.
2 R. Scott.
3 G. Rankin.

The junior events resulted as follows:—

Standing Broad Jump
1 Hattrick, 7 ft., 2 in.
2 H. Hill.
3 R. Laing.

Running Broad Jump
1 R. Laing, 14 ft., 6 in.
2 H. Hill.
3 Hattrick.

Standing Hop, Step and Jump
1 Hattrick, 22 ft., 4 in.
2 Laing.
3 Hill.

Running Hop, Step and Jump
1 Hill, 31 ft., 10 in.
2 Laing.
3 Hattrick.

WILLIE PARKER LIKELY TO ENTER THE EXAMINER RACE

Mr. Arthur Johnston, who is handling Willie Parker, the Hiawatha runner, who has been making such a good showing in different races in the neighbourhood during the summer, stated to-day that in all probability he will start in the Examiner senior race on Thanksgiving Day, and if he does you can look out for a spectacular race between the Indian speed marvel and Charlie Thorpe, of the Victoria Harriers. Thorpe was a bang-up second to Adams last year, and just now is in the best shape that he has ever been. He has added speed to his staying power and he will be hard to beat out for the silverware on Thanksgiving Day. Parker, however, has the appearance of a coming star, and those two will have one grand race, while there are others who will have to be watched.

There promises to be a phenomenally large field of juniors this year, judging by the way in which the youngsters are entering. Four juniors have already entered and at least fifteen more have announced their intention of starting although they have not yet sent in their entry coupons.

Owing to the fact that the conditions of the race have been amended there will be more outside runners this year than ever before. Three or four Indian runners will start, including Smoke, the Chemong phenom. Hanlan Howard, of Hiawatha, who was fourth last year will, in all probability be a starter as well, so that there will be a classy field.

THE HEART A GREAT WORKER

What a wonder is the heart! Day and night it works away pumping tons of blood through the body and never tires or wears out so long as it is supplied with rich, red blood, such as is formed by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. While sending supplies of nutrition to other parts of the body the heart renews and rebuilds its own wasted cells and so retains health and strength. 50

"PICK 'EM RIPE," SAYS COACH YOST

"Pick 'em as though they were ripe!" yells Coach "Hurry Up" Yost of the Michigan football squad.

And a husky man leaps into the air to meet the ball as it hurtles toward him.

"How's that?" he will query.

"Well, you get it a little high. "Pick 'em as though they were ripe." And the coach walks away toward another man.

It is a favourite expression of Yost's. He always refers to punted balls as cherries—ripe cherries.

When talking to his men he'll get off something like this:

"And what did Pennay do? They got out ends 'way outside of their position. Then they said: "Cherries are ripe; we'll pick 'em.'

"Ding, ding—touchdown!"

STAKED HIS LIFE ON TOSS OF COIN

Mine Owner Lost and is Supposed to Have Died in the Desert.

Examiner Special.

Los Angeles, Oct. 6.—David Eldridge, the mine-owner who disappeared in the desert several weeks ago, staked his life on the toss of a coin and lost, according to Malapai Mike, a prospector, who says he was the last to see the missing man. Parties have searched the desert in vain for Eldridge and have given him up for dead.

Malapai came here from Green Water and says he and Eldridge who was the son of Benjamin Eldridge, an Illinois mining machine manufacturer, started for Telescope Peak to inspect a placer mine. On the way they lost most of their provisions and all but one of their burros. When their water supply was reduced to five gallons Malapai says Eldridge suggested tossing a coin to see which should take the burro and make a dash for Green Water for aid. Mike won, and taking a gallon of water, left him comparatively.

On arriving at Green Water he found a party in search of the missing man, but no trace of him was found.

Anaemic women and children who frequently feel chilly and pale and exhausted, will derive great benefit from the use of Ferrozone, the invigorating tonic, which consists of iron in a form they can assimilate, fresh lean beef and pure Grape Wine. Nothing could be better than his combination of strength giving agents in such easy to take form. 50c per bottle.

Report of Committee on Appointments

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education.

Gentlemen,—Your Committee on Appointments beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

As instructed, your Committee advertised for an additional teacher for the Collegiate Institute staff, and received 24 applications, but do not think any of the applicants are sufficiently well qualified, and recommend that Miss Muriel Fessenden be appointed for the balance of this term, viz., Oct. 1st to Dec. 31, at the rate of $1,100.00 per annum, and would ask that your committee be authorized to advertise immediately for a male teacher, duties to start January 1st, next.

The resignation of Miss Davidson from the Kindergarten staff necessitated the engaging of a teacher to fill the vacancy. It was considered by your committee that Miss Ada Gillespie of the Queen Alexandra staff, a duly qualified directress, and successful teacher, should be promoted to take charge of a class. This left the Directress of the Queen Alexandra Kindergarten without an assistant. Owing to this being the only kindergarten room where the Normal students observe the instruction, it was considered necessary to secure a fully qualified directress to do the work heretofore performed by Miss Gillespie.

For this position your committee received eight applications and after careful consideration recommend that Miss Mary Burgess, of London, be appointed to the position of Assistant Kindergarten Directress of the Queen Alexandra School at a fixed salary of $460.00 per annum. This is $100.00 more than was paid Miss Gillespie, but as this extra amount had to be paid to secure a teacher capable of taking up work with the Normal students, your committee feels that this Board should continue to pay but $300.00 of the salary, and that the remaining $100 be taken from the Government grant of $2,250.00 for extra remuneration of teachers in connection with the Normal Training schools. These changes will not increase the expense to the Board, and the Kindergarten classes will be presided over by a capable staff of teachers. The classes will be in charge of the following teachers:

Queen Alexandra—Miss Warner and Miss Burgess.

South Central and East City—Miss Rush and Miss A. Gillespie.

Respectfully submitted,

W. H. HILL, Chairman.

The report was adopted.

Property Committee.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education.

Gentlemen,—Your Property Committee begs leave to report as follows:

That the sum of $2.15 was paid Mr. Jas. Drain, to reimburse him for destroyed property by school children.

That Mr. Dumble was authorized to have two flower beds made at the Collegiate Institute, so as to make the beds uniform.

That the tender of J. E. A. Fitzgerald was accepted re East City School wood supply.

That an additional room in the Collegiate Institute has been seated and furnished.

That under existing monetary conditions your committee consider it advisable to defer the expense of replacing drinking fountains at the King Edward school.

W. F. NELSON, Chairman.

Canadian Cheese Must Hold Its Place On English Market

Mr. John Riddell Reminds Cheese Makers That New Zealand is Paying Special Attention to This Industry and is Striving for the Leadership.

BOARD MEETING TO-DAY

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held this morning in the Bank of Montreal chambers. President Coughlin of Hastings was absent, his factory Ormonde having been destroyed by fire last Friday. Mr. Hawthorne was selected for the position and fulfilled the duties satisfactorily.

The factories boarded their cheese as follows:—

Protecting the Trade.

Mr. John Riddell called the attention of the Board to the fact that New Zealand cheese was claiming a higher price than the Canadian article.

The price is from two to three shillings higher than for Canadian cheese. That means he said, that our trade is slowly slipping away from us. The New Zealand cheese comes into the English market at a different time of the year than ours. We should do all in our power to hold our trade and also to increase it."

Mr. Anderson replied that in the fall of the year New Zealand cheese claimed a higher price but the English Spring quotations gave Canadian cheese the higher price.

Mr. Riddell said he had recently spoken with the Commissioner from New Zealand who stated that many improvements were being made in the caring of cheese and constant attention was being given the trade with a view to improving the quality and putting it on a higher plane than the cheese of other countries.

The Bidding

Mr. Fitzgerald opened the bidding at 11 cents. Mr. W. H. Cook made it 11 1-4, Mr. Gillespie raised it to 11 5-16 and Mr. Fitzgerald made it 11 3-8 and was given first choice. He called Fleetwood, Warsaw, Warminster, Central Smith.

At 11 3-8 cents Mr. Gillespie named his selections as follows: Westwood, Villiars, Selwyn, Benafort.

His offer of 11 5-16 cents for further selections was boosted to 11 3-8 by Mr. Kerr. He called Shearer, Keene, Lang, Indian River, Maple Leaf, Fraserville, Cavanville, Trewern, Myrtle. Mr. Kerr offered 11 5-16 for further selections. W. S. Cook raised it to 11 3-8. He called Killarney, Norwood, Oakdale, Daisy D., Shamrock.

A tie bid at 11 5-16 resulted when Mr. Cook was through and to settle the matter Mr. Kerr made it 11 3-8c.

The factories he selected were Cedardale, North Dummer, Stony Lake.

Some of the factories refused his offer and Mr. Gillespie got them at 11 3-8 cents. They were Lakefield, Pine Grove, King Edward and Young's Point.

Mr. Gillespie asked the salesmen if they wanted a speaker for their annual meetings. Mr. G. H. Barr attended last year and the addresses he gave were much appreciated. It was moved that he be asked to attend this year. The directors are asked to notify Mr. Gillespie of the dates of their annual meetings.

SAVE THE SUMMER

It's up to Canada to lengthen her summers so as to keep the tourists here, keep the people out in the open, on the lakes, and by the sea, keep the children out of school for another fortnight. To save the summer two weeks longer there would have to be some readjustments. The Toronto fair would have to be shifted to the last half of September. This is no hardship. Many farmers and fruit growers are crying for just that change. How about the schools? Well, there are many colleges and schools that do not open till the middle of September anyway. The longer a boy lives out in the open, the stronger and better will he be for work through the winter. Then there is the tourist business of Canada. It is worth looking after. The rich people of the United States, having discovered our beautiful summer, part from it with regret. With small coaxing they could be induced to stretch it out two weeks more. The little State of Maine is reported as collecting twelve million dollars annually from tourists and sportsmen. If Maine can do that, our vast wilderness should do ten times as much. Thirteen years ago, thirty hundred tourists passed in, via Toronto, to the Highland every summer. Today these pilgrims of pleasure number thirty thousand, and this is only one of Canada's great playgrounds. How many visitors are induced to cross over in winter, lured by the sparkle of Quebec and the bracing outdoor sports, we can only estimate. It is surely large. Suppose there are fifty thousand tourists travelling on our railways, living in our hotels, shopping in our shops on September 1. At the very lowest they would spend two dollars a day. This is a golden stream, a Danae shower, that is worth cherishing. We take the stranger in and do well by him. If we can contrive to hold half a month longer, we can do him that much better. Therefore Save the Summer.—Collier's Sept. 18th, 1909.

Starvation Treatment a Failure

Probably because the taking of food causes such intense discomfort, many dyspeptics think that by abstaining from this and that—practically starving themselves—they can cure the trouble.

Of course, where Indigestion is caused by sheer gluttony, cutting down the food would no doubt do good. But in most cases Indigestion is caused, not by overeating, but by lack of physical exercise, and consequent lack of vigor in the organs of digestion. Partial starvation still further impairs the failing vigor, and makes the trouble worse.

The dyspeptic needs plenty of good, wholesome food. He can eat it, and DIGEST IT, TOO, if he takes a "Little Digester" after each meal. "Little Digesters" help the weakened stomach to do properly that which it cannot do alone—digest and assimilate the food needed to build up the system.

A pretty October wedding was solemnized this morning at 8 o'clock at St. Peter's Cathedral, when Miss Lauretta Helena, eldest daughter of Mr. Luke Milaney, Union street, was united in marriage to Mr. David Garvey, son of Mr. Timothy Garvey, of Douro. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. McColl, in the presence of only a few immediate friends.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a becoming travelling costume of striped wisteria Royalette, with hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Julia Callaghan, of Lindsay, cousin of the bride, was attired in a suit of taupe broadcloth with hat to match. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Jos. Garvey.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's parents, when a dainty wedding breakfast was served.

The bride received a number of handsome presents. The groom's gifts were a beautiful hand-painted brooch, to the bride, and a gold locket and chain to the bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Garvey left on the 4.38 train for Buffalo and Niagara, where the honeymoon will be spent. On their return they will reside in Douro.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLAND

One result of the development at Prince Rupert and the territory tributary to the new port, has been the formation of a million dollar syndicate headed by Mr. J. A. Moore of Seattle and which includes the Rev. Doctor Hillis of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, to develop the resources of Queen Charlotte Island. The syndicate controls 20,500 acres of timber. The intention is to build as rapidly as possible seventeen miles of standard gauge railway to bring out the native resources of the island. A bridge will carry the line over to Lena Island where wharfs and bunkers will be built. In addition to the timber wealth which is really of secondary consideration, valuable gold veins are said to underlie the surface of the island.

CZAR WILL HOLD COURT IN THE GREAT PALACE

Shuns the Seclusion at Tsarkoe-Selo—Comes to Town for Winter Months—Huge Building is Said to Contain More Faked Canvases Than Any in the World

St. Petersburg, Oct. 4.—At last the Czar has been advised to spend part of the winter in St. Petersburg instead of shutting himself up at Tsarkoe-Selo. His agreement to do so gives great satisfaction to all about the court, as it is more than six years since the Imperial family has made any stay in this city.

Alterations and repairs have been ordered in the winter palace and the court purveyors are getting instructions daily. New wax models are being made of the Imperial children's hands, and a good deal of finery as well.

The Czarina has been averse to court entertainments as has the Czar. She is by no means a favourite with the people, or rather the aristocratic class, who alone know anything about her.

Not Liked by Subjects.

"She is much too stiff and straight-laced," remarked one lady, who sees a great deal of her. "She objects to things we think quite allowable. She will develop into a counterpart of her grandmother, Queen Victoria, the corners of whose mouth always turned down.

"We Russians, even in the upper class, are too Bohemian for her to understand. The Dowager Czarina is far more popular. She nods and smiles at our ways and passes on. Not so the Czarina. Neither goes about opening hospitals and bazaars. That kind of activity would be misunderstood even if they practised it. People would think such efforts undignified."

English Spoken at Court.

One complaint against the Czarina is that she introduced the English language at court in preference to the French. The czar is very fond of speaking English and the Imperial nurseries are managed on English principles. The whole family has been brought up by English nurseries are managed on English nurses for three generations.

The winter palace, where the court will spend the winter season, is a huge rectangular building, painted red-dish brown. It contains vast quantities of objects of art and pictures, and more "faked" canvases are said to hang there than in any other gallery in the world. It always houses 800 people or more, even when the court is not there. These consist of old servants, the guard and officers' widows.

A TRAINING CLASS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

At the Y. M. C. A. last evening was held a conference of Ministers, Sunday School Superintendents, and other male workers in the Sunday Schools of the city with the Religious Work Committee of the Y. M. C. A.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. E. J. Devey of St. John's Sunday School.

The first part of the evening was given to the discussion of the relation of the Sunday to the boy, and Mr. Scarrow of the teaching staff of the city and Normal Schools, opened the discussion by pointing out the need of presenting the facts and teachings of the Bible to the boy in a natural and interesting manner. He showed that study of the characters of the Bible would be interesting and impressive if made real by the teacher to the student.

The second part of the evening was a discussion of the question of teachers and teacher training. Sheriff Hall led in this subject and emphasised the importance of having male teachers for boys' classes, although experience had often proven that lady teachers were very successful with boys. The need of some kind of training for teachers was pointed out as well as a means of enlisting and helping those who are not now teachers and who might become such with some instruction and encouragement.

At the close of the meeting, by unanimous vote, it was the conviction of those present that a training class should be formed and a committee composed of the Superintendents of the Sunday Schools and the Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. with Mr. Devey as convener, was instructed to make all arrangements for such a class as early as possible.

THE AUTO AND CHURCH-GOING

The Chicago Standard, the Baptist weekly religious paper, points out in an editorial that the automobile has become a factor in the present day Christian life. There is no objection to the automobile, when it is used as a truck or an ambulance, but in most cases it is purchased as a luxury and for personal gratification—and there lies the danger, for "many of the choicest blessings are turned into curses by misuse."

The Baptist Standard says:

"Christian people are under obligation to consider their relations to the work of the kingdom of God whenever they gratify themselves with that which ministers only to personal enjoyment. In this respect the machine is in the same class as any other luxury. If a man can afford to own an automobile he has a perfect right to do so; but as a Christian he should ask himself if he is giving to the cause of Christ in proportion to that which he is spending upon himself. It does not look just right for a professed disciple of Christ to hand over from $500 to $5,000 per year in ministering to his personal gratification, and then squirm and growl at being asked to contribute one-tenth of that sum for the work of the kingdom of God.

"Many owners of automobiles are thoughtful of others; many are not. If all were as some are the bitterness which has grown up on the part of the people who are compelled to jump for their lives when some machine comes whizzing down upon them would not exist. We may as well frankly confess that we do not own a machine, and that we belong to the great army of jumpers. It does not conduce to growth in grace to feel that your life is at the mercy of people who are utterly regardless of your welfare.

"No man has any business to go rushing down a street, which is being crossed and recrossed by human beings, at a rate of speed which endangers the life of pedestrians. And yet we have seen professed Christians doing just this thing, laughing when some one makes a mighty plunge to get out of the way of impending destruction.

"Those who are observant declare that the use of the automobile is contributing largely to disregard of the day of rest; at least, in so far as its use for religious worship is concerned. A gentleman who is a member of our denomination told the writer but a few days ago that his family were attending each Sunday in the country during the summer months. They start out Sunday morning with their luncheon, run as far as time will permit or their inclinations suggest, seek the shade of some woods and picnic there, returning in the evening. There are many worse ways of spending Sunday, but is it just what Jesus would have of his disciples?

'A' party of gentlemen who were making a distance test of a number of machines reached a certain city on Saturday and remained there until Monday. [illegible] and feted at the local automobile club, as was perfectly proper. The president of the local club was a prominent member of one of the evangelical denominations. It might be assumed that under the circumstances some regard would be paid to Sunday. On the contrary, Sunday was given over to feasting and entertainment under the leadership of this member of a Christian church. No one would have imagined from a reading of the Sunday programme that any one who was connected with it had any regard for the teachings of Christianity.

"The best in the world belongs to the followers of Christ. They have a right to joy and gladness, to recreation and amusements. But there are certain principles of their religion which must be kept in sight constantly or the things of this world will prove their undoing. We have no right to be inconsiderate of the well-being of others, no right so to centre self in self as to forget our obligations to God; no right to neglect the work the Master has left us; no right to forget the house of God; no right to turn the Lord's day into a day for merry-making."

PROTRUDING PILES

Read the evidence that this distressing ailment is cured by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Some people find it hard to believe that anything short of a surgical operation will cure protruding piles. The doctors have brought about this belief. There is any amount of proof that Dr. Chase's Ointment is a positive cure for this as well as all other forms of piles.

Captain Wm. Smith, Revelstoke, B. C., writes:

"It is with much pleasure I state that I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching, protruding piles of many years standing, and it has completely cured me. I had previously tried many other remedies but they did me no good. I would strongly recommend this Ointment to those suffering from this complaint, for it is a good and genuine cure."

Mrs. Captain Chasesmith, Salvation Army, Essex, Ont., writes:

"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two years ago I was taken with a severe attack of protruding piles and became so bad that I had to keep my bed and could lie in no position except on my stomach. Doctors could give me no help and the various oils and ointments used proved of no avail.

"One Saturday night when I was suffering untold agony my husband went to the drug store for a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which I had heard of as a cure for piles. Although I had almost given up hope, to the wonder of those around me, I was able to be up on Monday and have had no difficulty from piles since. As a treatment for all kinds of sores and burns, Dr. Chase's Ointment works like magic."

MONKEY BOBS POLICEMAN

New York—Adam Ward, an attendant at Roche's bathing pavilion, Far Rockaway Beach, was looking in the dressing rooms after the bathers had gone, when he found a monkey dressed in a red bathing suit. Ward took the monkey to the police station.

After the doorman had locked up the monkey, the lieutenant on duty missed a fifty cent piece that he had in his waistcoat pocket. The money was found in the monkey's jacket.

When one is robbed of money, it may be a misfortune; but when one is robbed of health, it is a calamity.

Faulty digestion, if neglected, quickly develops into chronic Indigestion and Dyspepsia. The way to prevent serious Stomach Trouble is to take a "Fruit-a-tives" tablet half an hour before meals.

"Fruit-a-tives", or fruit juice tablets, sweetens and strengthens the stomach, insures sound digestion, and corrects the tendency to Constipation which almost always accompanies Indigestion. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50—or trial box, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

GERMANY'S NEW WAR MACHINES

Are Now Being Tried Out at the Manoeuvres.

Frankfort, Germany, Oct. 5.—Carried out under the immediate supervision of the Emperor, the German Imperial Army manoeuvres are not only considered one of the most important since the yearly manoeuvres on a large scale were introduced fifteen years ago, but have introduced into them several new technical features, including the employment of the military dirigible airship Gross II. There are 90,000 men, with 540 guns and 20,000 horses, under arms, a grand total only once exceeded, at Frankfort in the Kaiser manoeuvres of 1897. The two commanders are Prince Leopold, of Bavaria, the Red army, and General Von Bock und Polach, Blue army. The emperor with his guests, who include the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the Kings of Wurtemberg and Saxony, the Grand Duke of Baden, Shefket Pasha, the Turkish generalissimo, Mr. Winston Churchill, and Lieutenant General Sir Bruce Hamilton, took up his residence at the Kurhaus. The military dirigible airship is attached to the army weakest in cavalry, and this is the first thorough trial of an airship for warlike purposes, and the conditions imposed on Gross II. are calculated to test its qualities for active service to the utmost. The airship is working together with cavalry in advance of the army, its wireless apparatus communicating to the general in command in the rear the positions of the enemy and the effect of its own side's artillery. The Gross II. holds the world's record for endurance flight, having spent thirteen hours in the air without descending. Wireless telegraphy is being used more extensively than hitherto. In addition to the field telephone and telegraph and heliograph, many church towers in the manoeuvres are being used as receiving stations for messages transmitted by portable apparatus carried by cavalry. The first day war was declared, the Gross II. ascended about noon, but, owing to the strong wind, was compelled to keep at a low altitude. She was fired at by the Red machine guns, and retired. She was said to have sustained an engine defect. News afterwards reached the Red troops holding Mergenthelm that the Gross II. had been caught in a tree at Assamstad, and captured by the Reds.

THE JURY DIVIDED

With a Vote of Seven to Convict of Manslaughter, and Five to Acquit, Trial of Mrs. Scott Ends In London—Further Details Given of Old Man's Cruelty to Her and Husband—Threatened Her.

London, Ont., Oct. 7.—"I trust that none of you will ever be shot," was Justice Latchford's parting remark to the jury when they returned last night with a disagreement in the case of Mrs. Wesley Scott, charged with the murder of her father-in-law, Harvey Scott, on Sept. 13. The jury stood seven for manslaughter and five for acquittal.

"I regret that you have been unable to agree," said the judge. "That is a matter, however, which concerns yourself more than me. It seems to me that if there was ever a case where a jury having regard for their oath could bring in a verdict, this is one."

The jury were out over two hours. In his half hour's charge to the jury, Justice Latchford practically eliminated the choice of murder or not guilty, plainly directing them to bring in a manslaughter verdict. He pointed out that, by their oath, they could not bring in a verdict of "not guilty."

The jury retired at 7 o'clock.

It was before a crowded court-room that Mrs. Wesley Scott took the stand in her own defence at the afternoon session. She walked steadily and rapidly to the stand. Her manner was one of cool indifference, and every movement of her hands and the muscles of her face gave vent to absolute resignation. She spoke quietly at first in modulated tones, which rose slightly when Justice Latchford complained that he could not hear her.

Then, led by Mr. Meredith, she began the story. Harvey Scott had come to her house in the early morning, about 7 o'clock, as far as she could remember. He seemed to be in one of his regular outbursts of temper. There was but one door to the house, and he was there, standing talking to the defenceless woman, with a huge stick in his hand, which he waved towards her as he emphasized his displeasure that some gate had been left open. He brandished it around her head, until she drew back, in absolute terror.

"What did he say?"

"He said something about the west gate being open. He had a big stick in his hand and he said 'I'll see that you don't leave my gates open,'" declared Mrs. Scott, who had replied that she would open the gate when she wished. Then he began hammering the dog, and she went and got the revolver.

"I showed it to him and said, 'Do you see that?' He came towards me with the stick."

"What did you do then?" asked Mr. Meredith.

"I let the revolver off."

"Did you believe your life was in danger?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Scott told of earlier occasions when the old man had gone after her. Mr. Meredith asked if she had ever seen him with a gun before. The witness said: "At one time he came to the house, and I looked through a keyhole, and he had the point sticking into the woodwork. Some time afterwards, as we were coming home from church, he blowed shot past the corner of the house. I was so close I could hear the whiz of the shot."

"Did he ever make threats towards you?"

"Yes. He threatened to strike me a dozen times."

"Did he ever call your names?"

"Yes, he called me 'lunatic,' 'devil' and another unpleasant name."

Once, she said, he had struck her with a piece of fencing and swelled her arm for months; another time he struck her while she was milking; several times when she went to his place for water he ordered her away, and once, when he was taking her cow to pound, he chased her away with a club.

She had twice had her father-in-law charged with assault before a magistrate. "He was fined, and took it out of my husband's wages. The second time the magistrate said he paid a little money to the church, and that it would not do to fine him," she said.

Mr. Meredith for the defence occupied forty minutes in his address to the jury. Mr. Reade took half an hour.

Thousands of names have been attached to petitions circulated throughout the country in behalf of Mrs. Scott.

UNUSUAL CHARGE

Farm Hand Named Hollis Says That His Employer Offered Him Fifty Dollars to Help In Conspiracy Against Insurance Companies—Insurance Not Sufficient Motive, Says the Defence.

Brampton, Ont., Oct. 7.—Justice MacMahon is presiding at the Peel fall assizes. A case of unusual interest is the King v. James Ruston, charged with burning his own house to procure insurance. The case was tried before Chief Justice Mulock at the spring assizes, but the jury disagreed.

The chief witness for the crown is John Hollis, an Englishman who had worked for Ruston from October, 1908, until shortly before the fire (Feb. 28, 1909). He testified that Ruston said to him in February: "I'm going to put this thing to hell," and enquired: "Do you want to make fifty bucks?" Hollis replied, "Fifty dollars is as good to me as to anyone."

Two nights were occupied in packing the household goods in boxes. They were driven to Toronto. Hollis agreed to meet Ruston at the Clyde Hotel, Toronto, and did so. It was then arranged that Hollis was to return by C.P.R., getting off at Snelgrove Station, loaf around until 10 or 11 o'clock, fire the barn, walk to Brampton and return to Toronto at 7 next morning. But he returned, and, seeking Ruston in Toronto, told him this was a fiendish thing and he would have nothing to do with it. The thought of the cattle and horses being burned influenced him, and he spoke to one of the insurance companies.

Dixon Rutherford, a young farmer living within a mile of the Ruston place, was returning home about 2 a.m. and was the first to see the fire. When he got there the little girl was sitting on a mattress with a quilt about her. There were also other articles of clothing beside her. Ruston said, "I just got out with my life. When I got up the house was in flames. I took my child out through the window." Ruston was without his coat and vest, but both of these and a good overcoat were found on the mattress.

The insurance on the house and outbuildings and contents, according to the evidence of the representatives of the Peel Farmers' Insurance Co. and the London Fire Insurance Co., was $3,300. James Hollis testified that he had offered $5,000 for the place.

The defence will rely on the insurance figures as showing that Ruston would have lost money on the fire. There was $1,000 on the house, which was valued at $1,500; $700 on contents, valued at $1,800; $1,000 on barn, valued at $600; $700 on grain and $600 on stock. Only the house house was burned. There was no grain in the barn, so that no claim could be made on it, while, though the prosecution claim the stock was over-insured, it brought $780 by auction after the fire.

Forest Fire In Manitoba.

Oak Point, Man., Oct. 7.—A fire is raging 32 miles north of Oak Point. It was started over a week ago on the Dog Creek Indian Reserve. Since then it has burned hundreds of square miles of prairie sod and timber.

Didn't Know 'Twas Loaded.

Canora, Sask., Oct. 7.—Fifty miles north of this place on Sunday Georgina Downs, an English-speaking girl, 13 years of age, was disemboweled by a shot fired from a shotgun in the hands of a Russian youth, 15 years old. He deliberately pointed the gun at the girl, exclaiming, "Your money or your life," at the same time pulling the trigger. He claims he did not know the gun was loaded.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 7.—Charged with embezzlement of society funds, John Osterholm was committed for trial at Welland yesterday by Magistrate Fraser. Osterholm was financial secretary of Lodge No. 44, A.O.U.W., for three years and $700 are alleged to have been embezzled by him.

HER SCARECROW.

He Proved to Be Even Good Enough For a Husband.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Olida walked down the green aisle of waving corn. The long green leaves flickered high over her sunny head, and the sound of the wind sweeping through the ten acre cornfield was like the roaring swell of the ocean in her ears.

Now and then she tore a plump ear from the juicy stalks and thrust it in her splint basket. She did this leisurely, for it was yet early morning, and there were hours before dinner, and she loved to walk in the corn.

The rustle of the leaves drowned all other sounds, and thus it was that she came suddenly upon a man crouching on the ground before her. As her pink skirts came into his range of vision he leaped to his feet and stood, half turned for flight.

The girl grew white with sudden fear and in her turn made as if to run away. The man's face lost its strained intensity and relaxed for an instant. She saw that he was young and good looking and that he was afraid of something.

"What do you want? Why are you here?"

"They're after me," he said grimly.

"Who?"

"The constables."

"What have you done?" She did not shrink away from him as he expected she might do.

"Nothing at all—if you will believe me! The Laurelton railroad station was robbed last night, and it seemed necessary to arrest some one on suspicion. As a matter of fact, I'm one of the faculty of the Moreton school, and I'm taking a walking tour through New England.

"I submitted to arrest, but on my way to the lockup my gorge rose at the thought of the unnecessary ignominy to be thrust upon me, so I broke away and lost myself in this field. I suppose they will get me in the end, for I am dog tired now."

"I THOUGHT YOU MIGHT TAKE IT DOWN AND PUT ON THE CLOTHES."

She lifted her troubled eyes to his and read truth in their steady brown depths.

Something black came into view among the stalks and then disappeared. For an instant she started and then laughed. Involuntarily the stranger's face relaxed into a smile.

"They will trace you by your clothes—your appearance?" she asked quickly.

He glanced down at his plain gray clothes and nodded assent.

"Come with me." She led the way through the corn, and he followed her, starting back with a muttered ejaculation as a black coat sleeve came into view.

"It's nothing—it's only one of the scarecrows in the corn," she reassured him. "I thought you might take it down and put on the clothes—they're black—and the hat is different. They're all clean. You see, they've been out in the rain and"— She hesitated.

"That's a glorious idea of yours," he said gratefully. He pulled the man of straw from the post and tore away the tattered garments.

"Now"— he said, but she had rustled away toward her basket, and he heard her plucking juicy ears in the distance.

When he came toward her with the gray clothes on his arm he forgave her the smile that lurked about her red lips.

"The truly great are modest," he said, looking quizzically at the torn and shrunken garments that were distributed more or less effectively over his large frame. "And now how shall I thank you?"

"By making good your escape," she said quickly. "We don't want to make a failure of it now. Give me your gray clothes. There—I'll put them in the bottom of my basket, and some day when it's all over you may come for them. Now follow this row down to the open field. Cross that to the orchard, and in one corner among the apple trees there is the shed where we sort apples for market. In the loft overhead there is clean straw where you can sleep till night, when it will be safe for you to go on. Goodby!"

In an instant she was gone and he was alone in the rustling corn. He heard the distant shout of a man's voice and another voice in reply. Then he turned and went swiftly down the green alley toward the orchard.

* * * * * * *

November winds were whistling through the lifeless stalks now gathered into great shocks over the stubbly field. Alida walked slowly over the brown earth, drinking in the tang of the coming frost and the zest of the dying year.

Suddenly she came upon the place where she had met the fleeing stranger whom she had aided in the midsummer. She looked at the fantastic figure perched on a shock of corn, and her lips parted in a joyous laugh.

"It is you—you have come back!" she asked.

The scarecrow man grinned happily. "I came back for my clothes," he admitted.

Alida flushed under the brown of her cheek. "They are in the house. I told mother about you. We have been expecting you to come back."

"I am glad of that," he said simply. "You saw the papers after I escaped? You know that I spoke the truth to you that day. They captured the real criminal." He regarded her steadily.

"I read all about it, and we were very glad."

"Thank you. And I hope you were not annoyed that day you met the constable and his men." He was standing beside her, looking down at her sweet face with a certain earnestness in his own that had never been there before.

"Yes; I met them and told them I had seen one man and that he looked like a scarecrow." She laughed and added mischievously, "The constable said that couldn't be the man because he was looking for a dude."

They laughed in unison as the stranger picked up a suit case and prepared to follow Alida toward the farmhouse.

When they were in sight of the comfortable dwelling the man stopped and looked wistfully at the girl beside him.

"Do you know, I rather hate to part with these 'scarecrow garments.' They have served me more than one good turn."

"More than once?" repeated Alida, faltering.

"More than one," with an enigmatic smile. "So with your permission I shall carry them away with me, that once in awhile I may come back and play the scarecrow as I did this morning."

"We shall not need a scarecrow until next May, when the corn is up, but you might come and practice."

And so it happened that when the following August came and the rustling corn formed arching green alleys Alida and the scarecrow man walked together in the cornfield.

"And you do not object to having a scarecrow for a husband?" he murmured.

Chairs.

Carlyle wins glory still with his reflections about clothes. Why has the chair never tempted essayists to rival "Sartor Resartus?" It, too, may reflect authority. It, too, changes with salary and station. The swivel gives orders to the high desk stool. The straight back chair of the stenographer differs much in meaning from the ample piece of furniture which stands before the roll top desk. In a wheel chair the child may see the world, and after his pilgrimage, now an aged man, he may collect a little air. There are the chair of state and the electric chair of execution. The empty chair is a metaphor for all that is most tragic in our lives. What are the dreams of the artist's stool and what of the milkmaid's and which signify the more? How the rocking chair has been written about and despised by the haughty traveler from abroad and how firm it stands, a great American conquest in domestic comfort! Around the chair also and the attitude in which we sit lie associations of mental state:

His mind at the bottom of business, his feet at the top of a chair.

When does thought come best from seat of ease and when from the severer bench on which the schoolboy of old was wont to sit? You get the idea. Now go ahead with the immortal essay. All you need are concentrated thought and literary genius.—Collier's.

Queer Postoffices.

Odd means of collection of mail in various regions are still in vogue. At Fulness, a little island off the coast of England, there is set up what the British call "a pillar box," from which collections of mail can be made only when the tide shall permit, a notice to which effect is posted above the box. This result of the "necessity of invention" came about by reason of the fact that the place in question is reached by road from the town of Wakerius only when the tide is very low.

There is a curious postoffice in Canada. It is situated in Lake Wahgoon, Ontario. It consists of a wooden box or trough fastened to a pole standing upright in a shallow portion of the lake. A steamer drops in this box such letters as may be carried for that region on her return voyage, and a canoe is sent out from the shore to collect them, at the same time leaving the outgoing mail ready to be taken up by the next vessel that passes outward.

The fishermen of the Grand banks have often employed a peculiar sea postoffice. This is the form of an open barrel lashed on a raised platform of crossed spars attached to a stationary buoy. Letters wrapped in oilskin are dropped into the barrel by passing trawlers and collected by others returning and reposted on landing.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Anti-speed Argument.

"Was that a novel your messenger boy was reading?"

"Worse than that," answered the man in charge of the office. "It was the fable of the hare and the tortoise."—Houston Post.

Linen of Snowy Whiteness

The real beauty of linen lies in its whiteness. It must come from the washing spotlessly clean. So, naturally enough, it is always rubbed twice as hard, and so wears out twice as fast.
But here is a new way to wash linen as well as other fabric—a way that saves half the rubbing and doubles the life of the garment.
This new way is the way of Taylor's Borax Soap. For no other soap saves both labor and garments as does this wonderful soap—it saves its own cost many times over.

Taylor's Soap

Here is the Taylor way: Place the white clothes in warm, soapy water and let them soak over night. Then draw them out one by one and rub them lightly with Taylor's Borax Soap. When well soaped, roll them up and lay them in the bottom of the tub under water. Let them soak in this way for half an hour. Then rub them gently on the washboard, rinse and wring them out. Hang them on a rope clothes line, for wire may put iron rust spots on the clothes.
Scalding is never necessary with this soap, for it removes the dirt by itself. The borax softens the water, so less soap is required, and also much less rubbing.
Colored clothes are washed the same, only they should not be left to soak over night, and never boiled.
Follow these simple directions and your clothes will come out fresh, clean and free from any "soapy smell." The white goods will be whiter, the colored goods brighter and the woolens softer than ever before.
Borax not only softens the water, but also softens the hands—it leaves them even whiter than ever before. Also it purifies and sweetens—it destroys every germ and prevents the possibility of contagion.
Don't be satisfied with common soaps that make it necessary to rub your clothes doubly long. Such soaps are more expensive than you ever imagine. This wonderful soap costs no more to buy than the ordinary—so why not have the best when you pay no more? Order a bar today.

THE CITY OF POMPEII.

Profoundly Interesting to the Scientist, From Every Point of View.

Strangely, weirdly fascinating is Pompeii. Its narrow streets, so many centuries ago gay with the life of a Roman pleasure resort, to-day echo to the sound of footsteps, so that one instinctively treads quietly, as in a place of mystery. But a little imagination is needed to picture this haunted city as it was when the aristocrats of Rome, including the great Cicero, occupied villas in its suburbs; when it was famed as a place of trade, and a community of wealth and luxury. One thinks always of days of sunshine in Pompeii, when under the bluest of skies men and women danced and feasted and there were only the sounds of laughter and singing. An English artist, however, contrary to custom, has sought to show us that Pompeii was much like other cities—like cities of to-day for that matter, and that it was not unacquainted with the dreariness of rain and deserted streets.

The artist's conception, is described freely by Pierre Gusman, who says:

"Besides the footways there ran a stream which collected the water from the kitchens and the tan yards and fell into a gutter beneath the footways. A great deal of refuse must have fallen into the stream, but this difficulty was met by an abundant supply of water all along the footway from aqueducts now destroyed. It was carried by numerous leaden pipes on many of which may still be read the name of the maker: 'ex officina Claudii') into stone or marble fountains. From these fountains the water ran in all directions, flushing the street and falling at last into large openings beneath the footway or at the end of streets, ending in a 'cule-sac.' There was a very good water supply for domestic purposes, and every house had its own tap. It would seem, however, that the Pompeiians must have been obliged to wade ankle-deep in mud, even on a fine day, when they crossed the road. But this was not the case. At once indolent and practical, the citizens avoided this discomfort by laying down one, two or three flat stepping stones at the same height as the footway at equal distances from one another. In many streets the heavy antique chariots, passing continually over the same track, have worn ruts in the flagstones deeper than those that a cart loaded with hay would make in a plowed field."

Overwhelmed in one brief day over 1,800 years ago by a terrific eruption of Vesuvius, for centuries Pompeii's site was unknown and the very memory of the city forgotten. At length in 1689 some strange ruins were noticed, but not until 1755 were any excavations made. The difficulty in discovering the city's true position was greatly increased by the changes which were produced by the fearful convulsion. The River Sarnus was hurled back from its former course and the sea beach raised to a considerable height, so that the town to which merchantmen resorted of old is now a mile from the coast and a considerable distance from the stream that in ancient times skirted its walls. People in general know how the task of excavation has progressed, until to-day one-third of the entire city is exposed. Valuable pieces of architecture and sculpture have been found and as a whole the work is of the profoundest interest to scientists and scholars the world over.

What Troubled Him.

The impecunious poet had long worshipped the editor's daughter, and now—oh, joy!—his dream of bliss had come true, for she had said that she would be His, with a capital H. Still, in the first throes of his rapture he seemed strangely ill at ease. She was quick to notice it, and a shadow chased the sunshine from her fair face.

"Are you not happy?" she whispered.

"Yes-es," he faltered.

"But something troubles you," she insisted. "What is it, darling?"

"Nun-nothing, dearest," he stammered.

"Tell me," she demanded. "There should be no secrets between us now that you have been accepted."

"Does your—does your father pay on acceptance or—or—publication?" faltered the impecunious poet.

The glad light died from the eyes of the editor's daughter, and for the rest of the evening they talked about the weather.

TIPS ON SANDWICHES.

How to Make Them Appetizing With Little Trouble.

The housewife who learns the art of making sandwiches is always well fortified against problems when serving an informal luncheon to guests. Close grained bread should be used for coarse bread will crumble. And bread baked in round tins is preferable to that cut into slices and cut with a biscuit cutter, since the baked edges preserve the shape. Moist fillings should be laid between lettuce leaves, and by buttering the bread the moisture cannot penetrate it, making it soggy. Melted butter can be used if it is not soft enough to spread. A salmon sandwich is a tempting article of food and should be half mixed with chopped boiled egg and very thin slices of olives and pickles. The wise hostess will make two different kind of sandwiches, some with the mixture moistened with vinegar or lemon juice, others without, for many persons cannot take acids. Practically all meat sandwiches are extremely rich, and strong condiments are noticeable in the filling, especially mustard and catchup. While white meat makes a delicate sandwich, yet the darker meats, mixed with mayonnaise and other relishes, are more appetizing in every way.

When the sandwiches are served at a noonday luncheon at home the contents of the sandwiches are placed between the layers of bread and fried, or the bread is toasted and covered with a cooked meat filling, then covered with buttered toast and served hot. Peanuts mixed with mayonnaise and sliced egg make a good sandwich. They make a fruit sandwich which is well liked by those who are fond of fruit and bread. The filling consists of chopped dates, figs, lemon juice and ground nuts, lightly mixed with tart jelly. The bread is buttered for this. Candied fruits are often used, but often the sandwich is a bread cake, more of the angel food cake variety, filled with fruits and moistened with cherry juice or the liquor from preserved pineapple or peaches.

Houseboats in China.

Houseboats have been in use by the natives of China for some hundreds of years and have been improved and largely used by occidentals living in the Chinese empire since their arrival in the country. At Shanghai large numbers are owned by the well to do Chinese merchants as well as by foreigners.

Spanish Conscripts.

Conscripts in Spain have, except in special cases, to serve three years in the active army, three in the first reserve and six in the second reserve.

Different Now.

In 1839 Velpeau, one of the greatest surgeons of his time, wrote as follows: "The escape from pain in surgical operations is a chimera which it is idle to follow up today. 'Knife' and 'pain' in surgery are two words which are always inseparable in the minds of patients, and this necessary association must be conceded."

CALUMNIATING IRELAND.

Unionist Papers Attribute Crime Where Crime Is Not.

Commenting upon the attitude of certain Unionist newspapers in charging that Ireland is seething with agrarian crime, the North American, of Philadelphia, says, editorially:

The summer assizes in Ireland, when the judges go on circuit to dispose of civil suits and criminal cases in the different counties, are just over, and a review of the situation, as indicated in the Irish newspapers, goes to prove incontestably that Ireland, instead of being a hotbed of agrarian outrage and of crime of the more serious nature, is remarkably crimeless.

According to the Irish Independent, we find that in Waterford Justice Andrews was presented with a pair of white gloves, emblematic of the fact that there were no criminal cases on the calendar. The same condition of affairs confronted the judge in Kilkenny County. Cork County was "in its normal condition of peace and order," and in Clare the lordship justice expressed his delight that "the calendar afforded him the opportunity of expressing in open court that there was no element of an agrarian character in the cases for trial."

Two cases of assault represented the criminal total in Kerry, while in Limerick Justice Kenny was "exceedingly glad to find that the returns were a gratification to every law-abiding citizen." Waterford County the lord chief justice found in a "satisfactory state," while Wexford, on the whole, was "very quiet." In Leitrim crime was, according to the judge of assizes, of the "most ordinary character," the condition of Wicklow was "good" and in Meath there was a large decrease in the number of ordinary cases.

Still quoting the judges, Donegal was "peaceable," Down "extremely satisfactory," Tyrone in a "satisfactory condition," while Antrim, in the words of Justice Dodd, had "a record on the lowest possible pitch of any county in the United Kingdom." In Mayo, Roscommon, Fermanagh, Tipperary, Cavan, Sligo and the King's County the judges bore testimony to the general quiet, while in Belfast Justice Wright observed that the general condition of the city, so far as crime was concerned, was satisfactory.

With such irrefutable evidence, and from such authoritative sources, of Ireland's immunity from crime, it is simply incomprehensible how any self-respecting and honest Unionist newspaper can indulge in the gross calumnies directed at the Irish people.

Mathematics and Launching.

The launching of a vessel is primarily a matter of mathematics. In a ship of immense size it calls for a vast amount of calculation before the first step is taken in the actual work. In the first place, the specific gravity of the vessel must be figured out so as to allow for the various strains to which the hull is subjected on its slanting journey into the water, with its sudden plunge as the bow drops from the ways. An enormous amount of data must be collected to fix this centre of gravity. The weight of all the material that has gone into the vessel up to the time of the launching, the distribution of this weight, the weight of chains and anchors and other material placed on board preparatory to the launch must all be considered. When the centre of gravity is fixed the successful shipbuilder knows just how to build his launching ways and just where to strengthen them. He knows then by a little calculation how long each part of the vessel will be subjected to certain strains and how best to prepare for them. He can figure almost to the second how long the ship will be in sliding into the water.

A Cruel Joke.

A Chicago girl recently played a cruel joke on her mother, and this is how it happened: She accidentally found a love letter that her father had written to her mother in the halcyon days of their courtship. She read the letter to her mother, substituting her own name and that of her lover. The mother raved with anger and stamped her foot in disgust, forbidding her daughter to have anything to do with a man who would write such nonsensical stuff to a girl. The girl then gave the letter to her mother to read, and the house became so suddenly quiet that she could hear the cat winking in the backyard.

Planting a Vine.

Remember when you plant a vine that you are planting for time, and make a good provision for its growth. Don't dig a hole just large enough for the plant and thrust it in, leaving it to "sink or swim, survive or perish," as best it may. Rather do you give it a fair show for its life. Choose a place in good sunlight. Dig a hole two feet deep and a foot and a half square. Cart away the earth and fill the hole with well-rotted compost, putting good garden soil on top in which to set the plant. You have thus supplied it with something to grow on, and the plant will reward you accordingly.

The Prussian Versailles.

Potsdam is the Prussian Versailles and contains four palaces. It was founded by the greate elector of Brandenburg, but owes most of its splendor to Frederick the Great, whose apartments, which are shown to visitors, remain almost exactly as they were when he was alive. Among the most interesting treasures is a copy of Frederick's works annotated in the handwriting of Voltaire.

Domesday Books.

The dew Domesday Book, which Mr. Herbert Gladstone says it will be necessary to prepare in connection with land taxation, will not be the first since William the Conqueror's great book, remarks The London Chronicle. What is frequently known as the Modern Domesday appeared in 1874 as a Parliamentary paper, under the title of "A Return of Owners of Land."

Mahogany.

Mahogany is said to have been introduced into England by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1508, but not to have gone into general use till 1720.

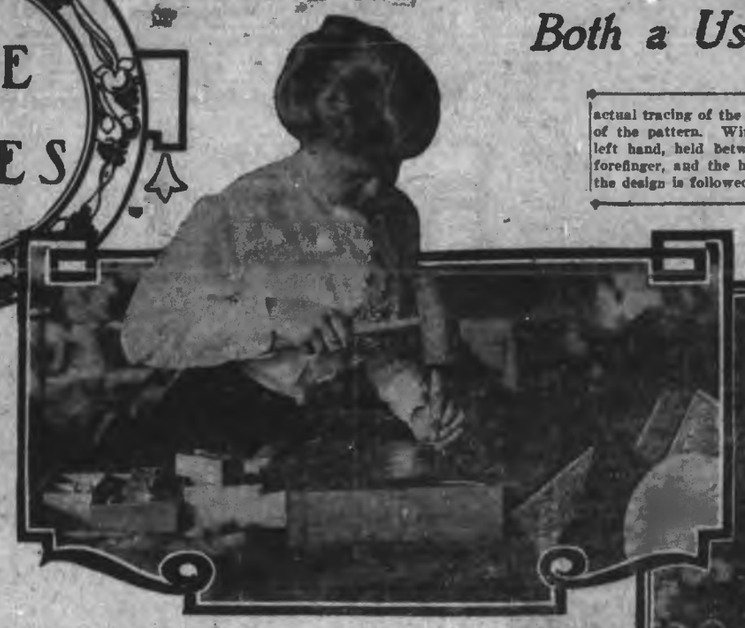
BRASS PIERCING WORK

Both a Useful and Ornamental Occupation



WITH its flavor of Orientalism and its easy adaptability from antique usage to the needs of modern life, the brass piercing work which is enjoying such a marked popularity just now bids fair to rival all the other crafts for holiday gifts.

For porch work this summer it was in great favor, and it was no unusual thing to see coteries of young girls on verandas of summer hotels applying themselves to the work with the same avidity they ordinarily gave to their sports. Quaint hall lanterns, candle shades for the dining room and the larger shades for the library are only a few of the artistic articles of household decoration and utility that can be constructed.

In taking up any craft there is always the question of the equipment. How elaborate must it be and what the outlay? Happily, in brass piercing, the expenditure outside the work bench is, one might say, nominal, taking into consideration the results obtained. To meet the growing demand for the work, certain shops have [illegible] sets of tools and materials which can be purchased for something like $2.50 per set.

Such a set includes the various tools needed to work with, such as a steel hammer, a vise and wooden mallet and a set of nails. The latter are to shape the articles. Naturally the work bench or [illegible] is of first importance, although it is quite within reason to make use of a table that is at hand; that is, provided it is firm and stable. It must not shift when working, else there is danger of a tool slipping and ruining the entire design as well as the material.

EVERY worker in this craft speaks with the greatest enthusiasm of the fascination of the work, and it is quite necessary to watch a novice bending over her bench to believe this to be true. It is pretty work, clean and with absolutely no disadvantageous features. A girl can go to work with her mallet and awl with a fresh shirt waist just as well as though enveloped in an ugly work apron, with no fear of being unpresentable should a visitor arrive.

Nothing is prettier to start on than one of the many pretty designs in candle shades. A hostess can never have too many of these artistic things, and they are always in demand for gifts, for birthday, holiday or wedding presents. As the surface to be covered is small the design must necessarily be simple. This obviously is an advantage to the novice. The shaping, too, is an easier process.

In choosing the sheet brass on which to trace the design the worker will get the most satisfactory results by selecting that which has a red or ruddy tint. It will be found to be softer, with less likelihood of cracking than the medium tone. Select that having a thickness of from twenty-two to twenty-six standard wire gauge or from six to ten metal gauge.

After having procured a work bench that will not rock or vibrate see that one's chair is the right height, so that it will be level with the middle of the chest. Some workers in brass prefer standing at their work, and it is always well to make a change in position occasionally to prevent tiring the muscles. The light should be directly on the work, as when the bench is facing the window. If this is not possible let it fall over the right shoulder.

Now that the question of bench and position is settled, the next thing in line is the transferring of the design to the brass. Just a word as to designs. Any motif suited for wood carving, embroidery and the like can be adapted to the brass piercing. With ingenuity many pretty patterns can be worked out. Lacking the taste for this detail there are patterns to be bought in the shops that sell the outfits which are in every way suitable.

ON the block of hard wood, cut across the grain to make it more elastic, which, with one of soft, is included in the layout, the sheet of metal is laid. Place a piece of carbon paper over it and over that the design. With a knitting needle or a bodkin the design is then gone over in every detail. See to it that the pattern does not shift. When the pattern is removed the design should be found legibly traced on the surface of the metal.

Now for the start of operations. With one of the metal points in the right hand, the left holding the sheet brass down firmly to the wood block, the craftsman begins to trace the design, scratching in all the lines. Girls with decidedly artistic bent sometimes draw the design directly on the brass, but this is not within the province of every one. To cleanse the transfer ink from the metal rub over with a little turpentine.

Everything is now ready to begin the actual tracing of the design, the outlining of the pattern. With the tracer in the left hand, held between the thumb and forefinger, and the hammer in the right, the design is followed minutely. Tilt the tool slightly back as the work progresses, strike just forcibly enough to strongly indent the metal and keep the operation up with a certain degree of regularity.

If the operator holds the tool at the right angle and gets the knack of striking evenly with the hammer she will be surprised to see how rapidly the work progresses. She gets into a certain swing as her tool moves along, and the work becomes almost mechanical, that is, the operation does. One must never lose sight of the artistic effect to be obtained. A slip means a break in if not the ruin of the design; but if there be not too tight a hold on the tool, and the latter's position be altered as the pattern changes, it is probable that no serious disaster will occur.

ONE veteran worker in this craft always makes use of this plan in working out her design. She always works from the upper left hand corner of her work down to the right lower corner, doing all curves the concave lines of which are toward her. Once the entire pattern has been gone over in this way she simply turns the work about and works down again in the same manner. This gives the requisite slant to the lines, and is of special aid to the novice in brass piercing.

Then, once the design is all vigorously outlined, comes the process of covering the background, which throws up the motif or pattern into relief. Care must be taken not to use too hard a stroke with the hammer, the idea being to obtain the repoussé effect without puncturing the metal.

If, for example, a candle shade is to be made, the first thing is to decide on the number of panels, whether four, five or six. A four panelled shade is very pretty, whether for lamp or candle, giving a greater chance for variety, both of design and shape. Each panel must have the pattern applied, and a very good way for such a small article is to paste a paper pattern to the metal, thus avoiding any possibility of its shifting. It is a simple thing to remove it afterward by washing once the design has been traced.

Some brass workers rub the surface of the metal with beeswax to facilitate their progress. Turpentine is another medium utilized for the same purpose. After the background has been stippled and the parts are ready for assembling comes another important detail, the locking of the seams. This may be done in precisely the same manner as a tinsmith uses a dipper, pan or any article of kitchen use. While he would perform the operation with a machine, the brass worker would do it with a mallet, simply flattening the edges over the block, hammering one down over the other.

If the sides are to be riveted together holes are first punched on the margins, the rivet inserted and "upset" by hammer. One or the other of these methods is employed in constructing all articles done in brass. There are no special rules governing the size of a candle shade, but safe and suitable dimensions for a shade are, say, sixteen inches across bottom, four inches across the top and ten inches deep.

A DAINTY, pretty way to finish a lamp or candle shade is with gold fringe that is inexpensive and can be bought at any department store. No handsomer lighting outfit could be suggested than the equipping of a rare vase or bowl with a pierced standard or shade, though this is for more ambitious for the novice than wise to attempt at first.

In the line of simple articles a beginner can make is one of the circular photograph frames suitable for cabinet picture cut down to suit the opening. A design of grapes and leaves is exceedingly effective and very simple to do, the boldness of the motif making for any deficiency in workmanship, for the same amount of care that a novice might expend on a piece of embroidery is necessary to achieve success in brass piercing, and there is no reason why one who can do one may not do the other. It is not to be expected that the first piece of work will be altogether satisfactory, but given an artistic eye and a fairly steady hand the second piece should possess real artistic value.

Low circular trays for cards, tall trays for jardinieres and scrap baskets are among the artistic things from the craftsman's workshop, and one girl is now engaged upon a small table-screen to keep out the glare of the drop light from the eyes. The lotus flower is one of the most popular motifs, both for the novice and the seasoned craftsman, and the poinsettia is simply stunning. In any arrangement one may see fit to use of it, its long, graceful petals standing out in bold relief in contrast to the closely stippled background. In short, both design and decoration there are to be found on every hand innumerable suggestions which may be most effectively applied to the brass piercing. There are many things to recommend it to those blessed with manual dexterity and artistic taste.

Petticoats for Ordinary Wear

PETTICOATS are an important detail of the wardrobe of the college girl, who rarely has much time to devote during the term to the repairing of her belongings. For ordinary wear in the class rooms and indoors the most practical petticoats are those made of fine but weighty gingham or madras, which comes in plain dark blue, taupe, brown and green, and will launder without fading or shrinking. For these petticoats the seven gored skirt pattern may be used, but cut enough longer to allow for three wide tucks above a four-inch hem, as tucks are more easily ironed than are ruffles and flounces. Striped galatea also makes a satisfactory petticoat for ordinary indoor service, and if something a little nicer is desired, there is [illegible] silk shantung, which is strong of texture, does not draw out of shape and comes in a variety of dark shades. It may be made up on the seven gored model, but instead of being laid in three deep tucks above the hem should be reinforced about the knees with several narrow bias ruffles, as shantung should not be given thinly starched.

Something heavier than all-cotton or silk and linen is needed for an autumn and winter petticoat, striped outing flannel of a fine grade may be used, but it will be necessary to face the garment from the knees to the hem with thick linen, as outing flannel, like sateen, has an unpleasant fashion of twisting itself about the figure and impeding the movements. Inexpensive cashmere does not pick up the dust quickly, and for that reason many college girls prefer it to flannel as a petticoat material. Moreover, it washes as readily as gingham and is almost as light of weight while retaining considerably to the warmth of the body. Cashmere petticoats, however, will cling to the knees unless they are lined about the bottom with some smooth faced fabric like India silk.

For long tramps in rough weather the college girl who does not wear dark flannel bloomers or serge knickerbockers or bloomers, has a short plain petticoat of some heavy worsted material attached to a deep, glove fitting silk yoke, or she wears a jersey cloth skirt with a wide, shaped flounce of dark colored wool, satin or cashmere.

In addition to the college girl's collection of practical and sanitary petticoats, she has at least two of the tailored type made from new silk or from the remnants of last season's gowns. While all of the soft, firmly textured silks are used for petticoats, taffeta is preferred and the multi-gored shape, which fits the hips closely and flares about the feet broadly, is still the popular model. But great diversity is seen in the flounces which finish these tailored petticoats.

They are from eight inches to a half yard wide, have five or more deep tucks edged with narrow ribbon, pencils with two rows of double pin tucks, forming Van Dycks, set between accordion pleatings or perpendicularly tucked through the centre to form deep V's and finished at the edge with several tiny ruffles.

There are petticoats of plain silk, carrying striped ruffles or a flounce, and striped silks made up with perpendicularly lined gores and with fullness showing unique arrangements in diagonal and Van Dyck effects. Dresden and plaided silks lend themselves readily to the development of novel ideas, and, like the plain taffetas, are frequently ribbon trimmed. Narrow ribbon is interlaced between panel effects and terminated with a bow; it outlines square panels and borders or it is ruched and arranged in wreath design at the upper and lower edges of Spanish flounces.

Motor Hoods of Fur and Felt.

MOTORING can be either the most delightful or the most uncomfortable of sports, dependent entirely upon whether or not one is sufficiently warmly wrapped up. There is nothing so delightful as touring through the days of late autumn, when the air is crisp and all nature has put on its most magnificent array, but one must be well protected against that early frostiness in order to fully appreciate the glory of the autumn coloring surrounding one on every side.

Next to one's nose the ears require to be snugly covered up when rushing through the wind at the rate of thirty to fifty miles an hour. Ear tabs and veils of all descriptions have been tried since the origin of the automobile itself, but at last in the introduction of the motor hood of fur, felt or heavy flannel has been found real comfort for motoring in cold weather. This hood, too, can be most becoming—an advantage not to be thought lightly of when it is taken into consideration how very becoming is the average automobile hat. In shape it is much like the ordinary infant's hood, which fits on closely over the head, held on firmly by ribbon strings fastened in a large bow knot under the chin. In white fur or cotton flannel, adorned with [illegible] of bright colored ribbon, these motor hoods are quite fascinating, while the darker shades the hoods are also seen are equally attractive, and of course more practical.

If a brim is preferred to protect the eyes somewhat from both glare and wind then a poke bonnet is excellent. Any felt hat with a large crown and a flat brim can be converted into a motor bonnet by simply cutting off the back of the brim to within about three inches of the crown and fastening about the crown a piece of ribbon, which is brought down on each side over the edge of the hat and tied under the chin. One or two roseties can be arranged to take away from any over-severity. In buying the shape care must be taken to find a crown that is of correct size to fit down firmly on the head, for if the crown is too small the hat can never be made to act as a bonnet.

Squirrel, coonskin, muskrat and also the more costly furs are all good for motor hoods, and from an old muff or stole that is too shabby for further use wonderfully pretty automobile hoods can be concocted.

Covering Boxes with Chintz or Lin

TO make the covered boxes which are now so popular with girls it is necessary to have for a foundation a good cardboard box of the size you want. Candy boxes do very well for the smaller sizes, and for larger sizes dressmakers' boxes are useful. It is necessary to use good glue and photographer's paste in making the box.

The material for covering the box both outside and inside may be anything that is desired. Chintz, flowered or striped; brocade; dull, heavy silk and plain linen are among the fabrics used for the outside of the box, while for the inside there is usually more fragile material, thin silk or satin or fine colored lawn or batiste. White cardboard and white mourning paper are also necessary.

The side pieces are torn away from the lid. Pieces of cardboard are cut to fit the top of the lid, the bottom of the box and its four sides. Lining material is then cut to fit these pieces. There is half an inch left all around for turning under the lining. Each piece of cardboard is covered with the lining material, which is pasted on the edges with photographer's paste. At the corners the material is cut away so that there are no thick places. If the lining is very thin it is wise to put in an interlining of cheesecloth. Cotton padding, if desired, may be used for the interlining, with sachet powder if the box is for gloves or handkerchiefs.

After the lining pieces have all been covered cover the outside of the box. The lid is covered with one piece and the edges are pasted under, particular attention being paid to the corners, where superfluous material should be cut away. The sides of the box are covered with one piece of material carried all the way around and pasted together at the back either in the middle or at one of the back corners.

The next step is to make the hinge. This should be of thin but strong cotton material and covered on one side with the lining and on the outer side with the cover material. It should be about two inches wide and the length of the box inside. Glue should be used to paste the upper half of this strip to the inside of the lid. The lining of the lid is then pasted to the outer piece and a weight put on to insure a neat and smooth jointure.

The lining pieces may then be pasted inside the box, with the exception of the back piece. Before this is pasted in place it is necessary to glue in the lower part of the hinge. The lining piece is then pasted in place. To press down the side pieces of the lid and the bottom it may be turned different ways and a weight put on each side. When it is pasted in and left there for a sufficient time to press the pieces well together. This should be done by all means with the hinge side.

These boxes are useful for the dressing table, the writing desk and the work table. The large ones may be used for shirt waists, and in the same fashion it is possible to make the sets of drawer linings which are so much used. The only additional requirement for the sets of drawer linings is the modern stand into which the boxes are slipped.

Bags for Linen and Other Us

ANY girl who has no lavender in the drawer with her underclothes is missing a good deal, and will be wise to set to work immediately and make some lavender bags. It is the cleanest, freshest odor that one can have with clothing or household linen, and always seems somehow to give the impression of great daintiness and carefulness. An especially appropriate use of these bags is to make them as a gift for an elder sister or friend who is going to be married. And she cannot have too many of them for her linen closet and bureau drawers.

There are many shapes and designs that can be used for them, some quite simple and others most beautifully embroidered. Some are made of silk and some of linen, but the most entirely satisfactory ones are made of a thin plain silk, with an outer case of white linen, like an envelope, that can be removed and washed. These linen cases will often outlast two or three supplies of the lavender, and so are well worth the trouble of some really pretty embroidery. They can be made square, oblong, round or triangular; can be sewed with a seam around the edge or the two pieces buttoned together. One thing is necessary, that is, to have one side of one open and arranged with small buttons and buttonholes, or hooks and eyes, so that the case can be easily taken from the inner bag when it needs washing.

A girl who wants to make a large number of these lavender bags can save trouble and get a very pretty effect by using handkerchiefs that are already embroidered. They may be folded over, with the corners together, making a square with one corner left open like the flap of an envelope; or they may be folded diagonally from one corner to the opposite one, making a triangle. The silk for the inside bag may, of course, be of the prevailing color of the room where it is to be used, but many people prefer lavender silk, as it seems especially to belong to the lavender flowers. These dried lavender flowers [illegible]

PART bags have lost no whit of their vogue, and they are of a infinite variety of shapes, although [illegible] and satin continue to be the favorite materials employed for their development. A capacious bag, which may be made from two yards of mull ribbon, has a square bottom formed by drawing the two lower corners toward the centre and staying it over a square of cardboard. Another bag has a square bottom, which is attached four upright sections, each one carrying a flat pocket upon the outer side. The [illegible] of each upper section is cut out in oval shape and finished with pink satin [illegible] the [illegible] strings are [illegible] upon the [illegible] bag resembles a [illegible] of huge [illegible] positions.

The upper edge of the silk strips is [illegible] over two pieces of the ring, [illegible] downward, and at their junction ends is [illegible] the handle of ribbon [illegible] heavy cord.

Satin edged and very [illegible] flowered ribbon, [illegible] is made into a [illegible] by [illegible] the ribbon to form a square, overcasting them together [illegible] and half way across each [illegible], turning backward the other [illegible] and forming them into [illegible] pockets by joining their [illegible] sides of the bag. SOCIAL AMENITIES FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL

MOST young girls are naturally so charming in their movements, having the unconscious, unstudied grace which characterizes youth, that it seems a great pity when any one of them does things which are awkward and make them, for the moment at least, unattractive.

When a girl tilts either forward or backward in the chair in which she is sitting she is doing not only an improper but an ungainly thing. As a smart dressmaker's the other day an older woman and her daughter were giving winter orders, and all the while the girl sat there inspecting fascinating fabrics she fidgetted on the edge of her chair, which she kept tilted on one leg, thereby throwing her body into a hideous position and imperilling her safety, not to mention risking breaking the chair. A great deal of this chair tilting goes on in public places, to the detriment of the girls who indulge in it, for it is not a pretty trick, and in consequence offers an opening for unpleasant criticism.

Another awkward and most undesirable habit is that of standing on one foot, one side of the body poised and the other slouching. No girl looks well in such a posture, and she further emphasizes awkwardness when, standing at a counter in this one-sided fashion, she leans her elbow or one elbow on the stand in front of her. Some girls always strike this attitude at the counters in the shops or in the drug stores when partaking of their favorite "sundaes," and one sees them, too, in the hotels leaning over the register in this fashion, but it is, happily, rare to see a figure at an offence against good manners as was witnessed the other day, when a pretty girl, who certainly looked as if she should know better, moistened her thumb in her mouth and then turned the pages of a hotel register with it!

There is a great deal of time spent in country hotels these days, for the autumn season follows the summer, and there is the winter as well. Life in a country hotel is naturally quite different from that led in the city boutleries, and it has many informal features, one of them the freedom of movement in the office, which is usually a big, attractive place in which the guests lounge about and spend rainy mornings. Visitors are naturally interested in new arrivals, and to daily inspect the register of the hotel is one of the forms of amusement indulged in by old and young.

No girl, however, should be seen alone at the hotel desk unless for a momentary pause necessary to ask for information. When she wishes to look over the register another girl should accompany her, and their inspection should be brief. It is not good form to hang over the book, or to gossip together over the names, or to ask questions of the clerks about newcomers. All intercourse with the clerks should be of a strictly formal character, and a girl demeans herself who forgets this and chatters with them familiarly.

On arriving at a hotel it may sometimes happen that your mother or other companions asks you to register your names for her, in which case she sends the maid or some other member of your party with you to the desk. The proper thing for you to do is to enter the name and residential city of each member of your party, giving a separate line to each, as the register indicates, and putting the older members of the party first. If you and your mother are together, travelling with a maid, register "Mrs. Blank Blank and maid, Blankville," and underneath your name, which, as you are probably not out in society, you should not write "Miss Blank," but "Miss Marjorie Blank," and then underneath Blankville put the dittos marks to indicate that you are from the same place.

If there are several of you in the family each member's name must be written. It is not good form to put, "Mrs. Blank Blank and family," known as "Mrs. Blank Blank and family," which is an incorrect usage as to register, "Mr. Blank Blank and wife." The proper form is "Mr. and Mrs. Blank Blank," and where there are several children each name must be given, even of the little tots, and no name should be written without the formal prefix of Miss or Master. Where there is a baby and a nurse the baby gets her own line, as "Miss Blankie Blank and nurse," or "Master Walter Blank and nurse," as the case may be. If you have a chauffeur to register you do not put down his name, but after you have written the rest of the party you write beneath, in the middle of the next line, "and chauffeur." Though a paid menial a chauffeur is not, in the same class with a maid, nurse or valet, and it is the custom among those who properly observe social laws to give him a line on the hotel register to himself.

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

STOCK AT PREMIUM

Discussion In Last Session of Commons Results In Marketing of Thirty Millions of New Stock at Big Advance — Announcement Made at the Annual Board Meeting In Montreal Yesterday.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—The Canadian Pacific Railway will issue $30,000,000 of new stock at $125 per share. The announcement was made at the annual meeting held at noon yesterday. That the issue is a premium of 25, is due to the attention which was directed toward the last issue in Parliament last session.

A feature of the meeting was the presence of Miss Charlotte Stopford of Dublin, Ireland, who wanted to see the men who are running the C.P.R., while Albert G. Neville and Harry W. Birks, two leaders of the London Stock Exchange, congratulated the president upon the splendid position of the C.P.R. in the financial world. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy announced that the cash on hand from the sale of land and town sites amounted to $14,000,000, while there was an additional $18,000,000 near at hand as the amount of deferred payments on land.

The president, Sir Wm. Van Horne, announced that authorization for the additional issue of $50,000,000 common stock had been secured, and stated that "anticipating future general requirements of the company, and to meet them as they arise, the directors think it prudent at this time to make provision for the necessary funds by offering to the holders of the ordinary capital stock a portion of the unissued shares.

"It is proposed that the issue shall be in the proportion of 20 per cent. of the shares registered in the name of each individual holder in the books of the company in London, New York, and Montreal, on Nov. 15. Previous. The usual practice of having payments made in instalments at intervals of about sixty days will be followed and interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum will be allowed on such payments."

Change In C.N.R. Route.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—The Minister of Railways has approved of two important changes in the route of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway.

One is in the Township of Scarboro, east of Toronto. There the new route leaves the original line of Davis road, striking the Grand Trunk just above Scarboro Junction and going under the Grand Trunk line. It hits the original route near Cherrywood, and then proceeds east as originally approved.

The other change approves of the construction of a line to connect the Toronto and Western with the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo, starting west of Fruitland and continuing to near Bartonville, where the line will enter Hamilton over the T., H. & B. tracks.

Dying Girl's Pathetic Request.

Windsor, Oct. 7.—Ald. Eanser, whose little 11-year-old daughter Ruth was buried in St. Alphonsus' Cemetery, Windsor, on Tuesday, yesterday carried out a pathetic request which she asked of him a few hours before her death. A shaggy-haired Shetland pony which the child won at the Windsor midwinter fair last year, will be given her chum, the young daughter of Fire Chief Murray. Ruth Eanser won the animal by receiving the most votes in the popularity contest conducted by the fair officials. The little Murray girl was Ruth's closest competitor.

She Was Married Six Times.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 7.—Grace M. Chapman pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy yesterday, admitting that she had married six men without having obtained a divorce from any of them.

"Yes, I'm guilty," she testified. "I've had six husbands and I'm sick of matrimony. Most of the men I married were farmers. I would live with them until I got tired of them and then I'd leave. They were so tiresome."

Imported Labor From Toronto.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—The Meyercord Co., lithographers, are on trial before Judge K. M. Landis, in the United States District Court, on the charge of importing contract labor. The company is said to have brought eleven laborers from Toronto in June, 1908, to take the places of strikers. There is a fine of $1,000 for each alliance.

A Sudden Death.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 7.—Harry Foster, employed at blast furnace No. 2, of the Lake Superior Corporation, was killed yesterday morning by a premature explosion of dynamite. Foster was standing near the explosive when it went off, and a piece of debris struck him in the neck. He leaves a young wife.

To Reach Pole by Balloon.

Friederichshafen, Oct. 7.—Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of Emperor William, presided at a meeting of persons interested in north pole research by means of a dirigible balloon. It was decided to organize a society to be known as the German society for the exploration of polar regions.

Port Colborne, Oct. 7.—Andrew Kiss, Hungarian, committed suicide by hanging in the police station here Tuesday night. He had been locked up during the afternoon for being drunk.

Owen Sound May Build Railway.

Owen Sound, Oct. 7.—The long-talked-of railway between Meaford and Owen Sound will likely be built by the corporation of Owen Sound. The proposed line is over a distance of 25 miles, and has long been agitated for by citizens of Owen Sound and Meaford.

The Board of Trade is taking up the matter. The Government subsidy of $96,000 is available, which would go a long way toward building the road. The Grand Trunk offers to lease it at a yearly rental of 40 per cent. of the receipts.

May Get Means.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King has extended sympathy to the relatives and friends of the victims of the disaster at Extension, Que., in a message to Ralph Smith, M.P., and has asked for the names of those who risked their lives in the hope of effecting a rescue, that they may be nominated for the King Edward medal.

One-Legged Wicketkeeper.

The Knotty Ash Cricket Club in England possesses a wonderful one-legged wicketkeeper in Mr. J. Lunt. When quite young he had the misfortune to lose his left leg just below the hip, but his interest in the game of cricket was so keen that even that did not deter him from pursuing the game he loved so well. Resting his crutch under his arm in a diagonal position he stands with hands together in the most approved fashion, and can take the ball in a facile and finished manner and with equal ease on either the "off" or "leg" side. His agility is nothing short of amazing against fast bowlers.

CHANGE IN BUDGET.

Suggestion Is Made That It Be Toned Down.

London, Oct. 7.—The budget bill has undergone so many changes, some of a radical nature, during the six weeks' debate, and the chancellor of the exchequer has promised to introduce so many amendments on the report stage, that the Government has decided to give the House of Commons a week's holiday in order to enable members to digest the revised proposals.

The original budget estimates do not hold good any longer, and Mr. Lloyd-George is preparing a revised estimate of the yield expected to be produced by his financial proposals as amended during the debates in the House. This will be placed in the hands of the members when they adjourn on Nov. 9, to re-assemble on Nov. 16.

It is suggested in some circles that modifications enough may be introduced into the amended bill to make it more acceptable to the House of Lords.

A particularly interesting turn is given to the situation by the announcement yesterday afternoon that Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition in the House of Lords, is going to Balmoral Castle for the week end.

Whether Mr. Asquith, the Premier, will still be there when the Unionist leader arrives, and what King Edward may be able to do in the way of reconciling them are matters of keen discussion in political circles.

Besides Earl Cawder and Premier Asquith, Reginald McKenna and Lord Hereford have already been consulted.

It is suggested that a compromise might be arranged by the Government slightly modifying its proposals, the Lords agreeing then to pass the bill, on the understanding that there should be an immediate appeal to the country.

Dundas Woman Missing.

Dundas, Oct. 7.—The police are puzzled over the disappearance of Mrs. Charles Stratford, wife of Chas. Stratford, a respected resident, and mother of his four small children.

Stratford gave his wife some money on Saturday to pay the household expenses, and when she failed to return late Saturday night Stratford asked the aid of the police in finding her.

Tuesday Jos. Taylor and his son George were charged with procuring Mrs. Stratford and were remanded for a week. Evidence was given that one of the Taylors had been seen going into the Osborne Hotel with Mrs. Stratford on Saturday, and the woman, it is alleged, was seen in a field outside the town limits drinking from a bottle that afternoon. Taylor and his son were with the woman at the point where she was last seen.

Stratford left yesterday for Toronto to see if his wife is there, as a Toronto bricklayer, by name of Owens, was here Saturday in company with the Taylors and is thought to know something about the case.

Burned Way Out of Jail.

Cobourg, Oct. 7.—An unusual escape was effected by C. Peters of Haldimand Township, who was arrested by a Warkworth constable and lodged in the lockup at Castleton on a charge of theft. The prisoner succeeded in setting fire to the floor and got through to a cellar underneath and dug his way out. He remained all the night working his way to liberty. Peters at Castleton after a short taste of freedom gave himself up and was brought to Cobourg jail. He was remanded until next Tuesday. He is charged with stealing a number of articles, including a watch, from a resident of Burnley, Northumberland County. He is a married man with four children.

In the same way the article on "The Characteristics of a Fine Hartz-mountain Guide, will recall numerous instances of character features shown by their own guides, and revive many pleasant memories of the attendance of which is the ambition of every sportsman. Fish culture in Newfoundland will receive attention from every hunter of the red, and its increasing value, that once at such a time the interests of the fisheries of the Dominion are not neglected. Other readable pages are given, making the number one that should be the companion of every sportsman either at home or on his vacation, giving him many pleasant half hours in recalling what others have done and enabling him to tell many of his own hunting o'er again.

ST. PAUL'S CONGREGATION SAID FAREWELL TO JUDGE ROGER

One of the Most Faithful Workers of That Church Remembered by His Fellow-Officers and the Members of the Congregation---An Address and Presentation.

After the regular mid-weekly prayer meeting of St. Paul's Church last night the pastor and congregation bade a formal farewell to His Honour Judge G. M. Roger and Mrs. Roger. The occasion was a very felicitous one and attracted a large number of the officers and members of the church, all of whom have laboured with Judge Roger in its advancement. The event was held in the Sunday School room, the pastor, Rev. Robert Pogue acting as chairman. In opening the proceedings he referred to Judge Roger's recent appointment, which has necessitated his removal to Cobourg. The congregation did not wish to allow Judge Roger depart from the church, in the founding of which his late father, the Rev. J. Morrice Roger, M.A., was largely instrumental, without expressing some mark of esteem and love. Rev. Mr. Pogue call upon Mr. J. C. Shook to read the address of farewell from the officers and members of the church and on their behalf to make the presentation of a cut-glass water set.

The Address

The address was read as follows:

His Honour, Judge Roger.

Sir,—

The Pastor, Elders, Managers, Members and Adherents of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church desire to congratulate you on your recent appointment to the Junior Judgeship of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

From what we know of your past we believe you will discharge the duties of that important office with credit to yourself and with benefit to the people of the territory under your jurisdiction.

We also desire to congratulate you on your marriage, and sincerely hope that you and Mrs. Roger may realize all the happiness you anticipate from that important event.

We regret, more than we can express, that the duties now incumbent on you force you to sever your connection with St. Paul's Church with which you have been identified from its beginning, occupying many important positions in connection therewith, for many years being [illegible] of its most prominent Elders.

We unfeignedly trust that your new relations both as a citizen and a Church member may be as cordial and mutually beneficial as those of this old.

We also sincerely hope that we may occasionally have an opportunity of seeing you in our city and in our church, renewing the pleasant and hearty greetings of the past.

Signed on behalf of the congregation of St. Paul's Church,

Robert Pogue, Pastor.

Peterborough, Ont.
October 6, 1909.

Judge Roger's Reply

Judge Roger made a brief reply, expressing his deep appreciation of the kind regards expressed by the officers and members of St. Paul's towards himself and Mrs. Roger.

Addresses were also made by Sheriff Hall on behalf of the session and in his remarks he voiced the feelings of the session and the congregation; and on behalf of the Sunday School by Mr. Madill, in which the latter was also a prominent worker.

Following the addresses light refreshments were served and a pleasant hour spent during which time those present personally said good-bye to Judge and Mrs. Roger and wished them all happiness in their new home.

Judge G. M. Roger is the last member of the family of the late Rev. J. Morrice Roger, who was the founder of St. Paul's church in Peterborough. Rev. J. Morrice Roger, M.A., was the son of a Scotch Presbyterian minister of Aberdeenshire, Scotland. He came to Canada in 1833. Soon after his arrival he proceeded to Peterborough. There was no church here, but the young minister soon gathered around him a flock of devoted followers, and laid the foundation for St. Andrew's Church, and later became the pastor of St. Paul's church, which position he held for 40 years.

His Honour Judge Roger was born in Peterborough, and lived here all his life. He is one of the best known men in the city and county, and the one characteristic which has marked his career has been his desire to assist in the uplifting of humanity. Not only was he always a prominent and earnest worker in St. Paul's church but he was actively engaged in the Y.M.C.A., and other societies and institutions which were for the moral betterment of the community. He is a man who has spent a very useful life here and has allowed no opportunity to go by to perform some duty for the city. As one of the municipal rulers he held a very prominent position and in all walks of life he made himself felt and in moving to Cobourg he leaves behind only friends who will miss him [illegible] his absence.

Said That Man Leaving For The Woods Gave Him Liquor

Another man promised Magistrate Dumble to leave for the woods this evening if he would allow him to go. He was charged with a breach of the Liquor License Act, being a blacklisted person, was drunk yesterday. He pleaded guilty, but His Worship reserved judgment for a week. The accused stated in the witness box that he got his liquor from a man at the G. T. R. station, who left yesterday morning for the woods. He only had one drink.

Benjamin Hobson again strayed from the straight and narrow path yesterday, and found himself before Magistrate Dumble this morning in the police court. Just three days ago he was in court and was allowed to go, his case being eclarged for a week in order to see if he would carry out his promise to leave for the woods at once. This morning he pleaded hard for the Magistrate to let him go. He would start right out to walk to Buckhorn. His Worship consented, and allowed him to go.

BANDAGE FROM WOUNDED HAND USED AS ROPE TO HANG HIMSELF

Suicide Was in Port Colborne Cells Waiting Trial for Shooting at His Son-in-Law With Intent to Kill, When Detective Found Him Dead.

Examiner Special:

Port Colborne, Oct. 17.—Detective Moriarity of the Ontario Police Force, when he went to the cells yesterday morning to get Andrew Kiss, of Welland, who had been charged with shooting with intent to kill, found that the prisoner had hanged himself. Kiss had a wounded hand, and he took the bandage from it to make a rope, and tied it about a perpendicular bar. His feet were resting on the ground, but he was quite dead.

Kiss was a Hungarian, a laborer in Welland. He came to Port Colborne on Tuesday morning, and at once went out to the home of his wife and daughter, who live in the boarding house of the Canadian Portland Cement Company. He had not been on good terms with his family for some time, and they had been living apart. Kiss took a revolver belonging to his son-in-law, Stephan Markos, and declared he would shoot Mrs. Markos. Markos was notified, and coming up, Kiss fired at him twice before he was overpowered. Detective Moriarity was summoned, and made the arrest.

Kiss appeared before Magistrate Steele on Tuesday evening, and created a scene in court by a vigorous denunciation of his wife. He was under the influence of liquor, and Magistrate Steele decided to defer sentence until Wednesday morning.

Coroner Old conducted an inquest this morning and the jury, of which Reeve Smith was foreman, returned a verdict of death by suicide.

KEENE SHOW SURPASSES USUAL ANNUAL SUCCESS

Magnificent Weather—Fine Exhibits---Entries Ahead of Last Year---Attendance of 2000---Great Speeding Events---List of Principal Exhibitors.

Yesterday beautiful Keene was in the celestial limelight. The solar luminary shed his genial rays through the translucent haze of the amber autumn air, and as far as the thirty-second annual exhibition of the Otonabee Society's grounds were concerned, seemed to shine only for that event. These grounds, elaborate and delightfully situated, were alive with life, and both the judging crowds and the crowded animal pens seemed to enjoy the environment. The grounds border the west slope of the deep valley of the five-forked Indian river at this point, and the opposite declivity of the valley made a beautiful picture, one to delight the eye of an artist. Even the pigs in their pens, the sheep in their folds could look to the north-eastward and take in the beauty of the eastern scarp of the valley, blazing with the multicoloured tints of autumn—mingled and blended green and gold, russet and crimson. No doubt in their silent souls, or what answer for souls, they pondered deeply upon the wonders of the autumn tableau, the mysterious movements in nature's laboratory, the forces brewed in nature's alembic—upon the wondrous processes in which the oxygenation of the chlorophyy in leaf and frond, yields the varying tints and colours that convert a blank mass of monotonous green into iridescent splendour. To the delight of the eye was added the charm of the ear the West End brass band of Alnwick was present, and discoursed sweet music, not loud, but deep, that sounded amidst the hum of the throng either—as the mind inclined—like a tid-bit from "Ernani;" or a warble of "The Turkey in the Straw."

The day was perfect for the event and attracted a large attendance; the hills and valleys of fertile Otonabee sent their stores of exhibits, steeds and steers, sheep and swine, poultry and potatoes, fruits and flowers, and roots and vegetables of gigantic mould. As is invariable at Keene Fair, there was a splendid exhibit of horse flesh of all kinds, heavy and light drivers and saddle horses, and horses of speed. The race track was well patronized and some of the events keenly contested were the centre of attraction and were worthy of it. It was no trouble for any horse that possessed an ounce more of speed than another to give the dust to his opponent. The track was rather heavy with dust, which, at times, hid the horses and their drivers from the view. The occasion developed some splendid lady drivers and graceful equestrienes mounted a la mode and a la demi-selle.

The showing of horned stock was not large, but it held some fine animals; there was a creditable display of sheep and swine and a good exhibit of poultry.

The Inside Exhibits.

Within the skating rink there was an especially excellent display of all kinds and a keen competition. In house and cut flowers a very creditable showing was made as also in the fine arts department, oils and pencil. A magnificent display of ladies fancy work attracted great attention, and the display of domestic work, blankets, counterpanes, etc., showed that Otonabee housewives cultivate the useful as well as the beautiful. Two fine selections of the various weeds that play havoc with crop raising, were shown by two young ladies, Miss Lolo Kent and Miss Beatrice Scriver. A fine exhibit of grains testified to the bounty of this year's harvest, and this was further evident in a splendid display of potatoes, roots, and vegetables, something in which Otonabee has always excelled. A magnificent collection of apples made a brave show, and kitchen triumphs in the form of delicious home-baked bread formed another item of distinction for Otonabee housewives.

It was to be expected that the beauty of the day added to the attractions of the exhibition should attract a large attendance, which totalled 2,000, coming from distances as far as Toronto. Peterborough sent a large contingent and from across the lakes, from the southern county, about 500 came up the Indian river by steamers Rainbow, Monarch, Mrs. Schomberg's steam yacht and two launches.

In point of entries the exhibition was considerably ahead of last year, the entries being 114 in excess. The directors are to be congratulated, not only on the general success in the way of entries, attendance, etc., but upon their excellent management. This was evident especially upon the race track, and in the horse ring. It was an all-round good show and Keene and Otonabee have good reason to be proud of it, and particularly grateful to the clerk of the weather for the great success achieved.

The Principal Exhibitors.

The following were the principal exhibits in the classes mentioned:

Horses.

For agricultural purposes, heavy, John C. Hope, brood mare and foal; 2 year old colt; 1 year old colt; pair of horses in waggon.

SET FIRE TO HIS CELL

Haldimand Prisoner Took a Novel and Effective Method of Escaping From Jail—Burned a Large Hole.

HE WAS RECAPTURED

Cobourg, October .—Many novel schemes have been tried by those under the hand of the law in attempts to regain freedom, but a Haldimand township man named Clarence Peters hit upon a novel one the other day. He had been arrested on a charge of stealing a number of articles, among which a watch and a small sum of money are mentioned, from Jas. Wilson, who resides near Burnley. Peters was lodged in the Castleton lockup, where he managed to set fire to the floor of his solitary chamber, burned a hole sufficiently large to crawl through, and dug himself out through the wall. In the early morning the lockup was discovered to be on fire. The fire was put out, but the man was not there. Yesterday at Castleton Peters gave himself up. He appeared before John Miller, J.P., and was remanded. Yesterday afternoon he was brought to the counties' jail here. He is a married man, with four children.

REV. DR. MARSH GIVES AN ADDRESS

The Hamilton Herald says: The Hamilton centre of the Royal Astronomical Society opened its season last night, when Rev. Dr. Marsh of Peterborough, formerly president of the local branch, gave an illustrated address on Stellar Evolution, and How the Student of Astro-Physics Attacks the Problem. The society is now holding its meetings in the art gallery in the library building, and the new quarters are much more roomy and comfortable than the old ones, the place was filled to its capacity last night. Dr. Marsh made his lecture of unusual interest, and, assisted by a number of excellent lantern slides, very instructive as well.

Adam Brown introduced the speaker and expressed his pleasure at seeing such a large audience. He said Dr. Marsh was always sure of a welcome at the Hamilton centre, and he was pleased to be present to extend him one on behalf of the audience.

Dr. Marsh expressed his appreciation of the welcome and his pleasure at again being in Hamilton with so many of his old friends, and said he was particularly pleased to see Mr. Brown in the chair, and hoped he would long be spared to show his interest in that work. Incidentally Dr. Marsh referred to the discovery of the North Pole, and said he believed that both Cook and Peary might have been there, and in this connection Captain Bernier had returned from his northern trip. He said that he believed Captain Bernier could have reached the pole had he gone out for that purpose, more easily than either Cook or Peary did, as his method was simpler. It was to sail up the Pacific coast and through the straits and drift into the Polar sea, after which he believed the current would carry him past the pole and out into the Arctic ocean.

In opening the subject, Dr. Marsh said that it was the great question before the astronomical world to-day. He briefly traced the history of the several theories which resulted in the nebular theory, which was the one that was universally accepted by astronomers to-day. The astronomer of to-day was not simply a star gazer; he was a physicist, a mathematician and a chemist as well, as all these branches of science were called into use by him in his researches. Through the invention of the spectroscope, and other instruments, the astronomer was able to take the planets into his study and there analyze them. In this way, their chemical components were known, and of the 120,000 nebulous groups that had been discovered it was found that 60,000 had a spiral motion, and the remainder would likely be found to also have this motion. This discovery enables astronomer to know how the earth on which we stand and the other planets came into existence.

In an incidental reference to the bible story of creation, Dr. Marsh said that it should not be taken as an historical and scientific account of the creation, as the bible did not pretend to be a scientific text book. He then, by means of a number of lantern slides, explained the nebular theory, showing how all the planets came out of a great nebulous mass—the original creation—which, in course, threw off smaller masses, which formed into the various planets, star and satellite that we know in the heavens.

DEALING WITH DOMINION LANDS

The largest measure of success of the Liberal Government has, perhaps, been achieved in connection with its administration and exploitation of the public domain; and the greatest unsuccess in administration has been achieved by the critics of the Conservatives in the same connection.

The amount received in cash for Dominion lands for ten years ending 1896, under Conservative rule, was $2,343,835.

The amount received in cash for Dominion lands from 1896 up to 1909, under Liberal rule, was $18,870,744—eight times greater.

The amount received last year in cash for Dominion lands was $2,254,263, the largest in the history of the country, or within $89,552 of the total receipt for ten years previous to 1896.

The amount received from the sale of school lands for the ten years previous to 1896 was $584,692. The amount received from the sale of school lands from 1896 up to 1909 was $4,267,962.

The amount received from timber dues and bonuses from 1873 to 1896—twenty-five years—was $1,381,578.

The amount received from timber dues and bonuses from 1896 to 1909—thirteen years—was $3,381,578.

The number of free homesteads granted in 1896 was 1,857. The number of free homesteads granted in 1909 was 29,081.

The amount of money received in homestead fees from 1873 to 1896—twenty-five years—was $674,086.

The amount of money received in homestead fees, from 1896 to 1909—thirteen years—was $2,605,295.

From Ontario	4,038
Canadians from Quebec	790
Canadians from Nova Scotia	212
Canadians from New Brunswick	51
Canadians from Prince Edward Island	33
Canadians from Manitoba	1,494
Canadians from Saskatchewan	2,372
Canadians from Alberta	1,048
Canadians form B. C.	131
From Newoundland	5
From United States	9,889
From England	5,649
From Austro-Hungary	3,[illegible]
From Scotland	1,510
From Sweden	846
From France	27
From Ireland	[illegible]
From Germany	651
From Norway	656
Previous entry	3,587
Canadians returning from United States	603

This will give an idea of the character of the immigrants being secured. The immigration was less last fiscal year than in former years, but the number of those who took up free homesteads last year was greater than the previous year.

In 1896 the number of patents issued amounted to 2,865.

In 1909 the number of patents issued amounted to 22,431.

The expansion of the work of a department may be ascertained by the amount of correspondence conducted. The following table illustrates how the work of the Department of the Interior has accumulated since 1896. It shows number of letters sent and received:

	Received.	Sent.	Total.
1909.	721,217	1-114,380	1,835,597

The department has been busy in this branch. During the past fiscal year 7,412,870 acres of land were subdivided into sections, a larger amount than in the previous year. Resurveys were also made of 1,000,960 acres. Four hundred and sixty-seven miles of base lines initial meridians, and various miscellaneous surveys were run. Seventy parties in all were employed on the survey of Dominion lands, thirty-one working under contract and thirty-nine being paid by the day.

Those who are disposed to think that the Interior Department is going to seed, runining down or losing its usefulness, may change their minds after reading the new figures submitted here.

The Government of the day are dealing justly and fairly by the the people. All they ask is that the truth be circulated and they don't fear public opinion. It is to be regretted that papers saturated with party feeling are so careless as to the effect of erroneous statements that they do injury to their country and a grave injustice to the Government of the day in their deisre to assist their party. The people of Canada are too intelligent to be deceived and will suspend judment upon all questions until both sides have been heard.

A GOOD START.

Montreal Herald.

As always, the speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the laying of the corner stone of the new technical school was a model of good taste and good sense. There are those who, because they favour the old style of instruction, based on the study of the classics and the humanities, are offended at what they consider the undue concern given to studies whose end is material, practical. And there are those who in their zeal for scientific research and the diffusion of practical knowledge are prone to deride the schooling which devotes itself almost wholly to the training and development of the mind of the pupil. What Sir Wilfrid says, and it is only commonsense, is that the classical colleges are well worth preserving because they prepare now as they always have done a class of men trained and equipped for great tasks, the elite of the political society, but that as the march of industrialism has brought into being problems not covered by the classical method, the only proper thing to do is to extend the scope of the teaching system to take in these things, and to leave the youth of the land the choice. To train the brain that guides the hand, surely that is the way to acquire the high order of skill in particular employments for which the intense specialisation of this age calls. This view presented with all the charm of Sir Wilfrid's oratory, was enforced by all who spoke, from Canon Gauthier and Bishop Farthing to Mr. Monk and Sir Lomer Gouin. A desire for increased efficiency in developing the natural riches of the Province for the benefit of its people was the sentiment that premeated all the speeches. And that is good. Mr. Deserres and his colleagues have every reason to be pleased with the way their project has been launched.

Mr. Wick. Lonergan's barn and livery stables were burned to the ground on Monday night. Fire was first noticed at about eleven o'clock, but before the fire alarm was given it was in a mass of flames. For some little time it was thought that several of the residences around would surely go, but the night was very calm, and with the assistance of the 'always ready' bucket brigade, the fire was kept to the one building.

Mr. Lonergan is at considerable loss, in that all the sleighs and cutters were burned, although he carries some insurance. It is not known how the fire first started as nobody was there at the time, but it is thought it must have been by a match having fallen somewhere, or else from the electric wires.

Mr. John Foman, jr., has moved into his beautiful new residence on King street and Mr. Feeling from Ottawa street has taken possession of his former residence.

The prize winner in the euchre was Miss McDill of Toronto, receiving a beautiful euchre deck in black leather case. From six o'clock until 8 o'clock dainty refreshments were served. The following gentlemen joining the party: Messrs. P. J. Wright, A. Ormston, Dr. Crawford, T. E. Dineen and T. P. Lancaster. The event proved most delightful.

Miss Lillian Campbell is visiting with friends at Westwood.

Miss Loretta Kelly was the guest of Miss Maria Overend on Sunday.

The Guy Bros. minstrels held forth in the town hall on Saturday evening to a large crowd. A big street parade was held at 12 o'clock on Saturday, by the Company.

The Thanksgiving services on Sunday in St. John's church were largely attended, both morning and evening. The church looked beautiful; everything so artistically arranged. Rev. Mr. Daniel of Port Hope, delivered most appropriate and interesting sermons on both occasions. Special music was rendered by the choir, and at the evening service during the offertory, Misses Eva Lancaster and Lillian Webb sang a duet, "You'll Reap Whatsoever You Sow."

Mr. Henry Pacey, while assisting at the threshing at his home yesterday, met with a misfortune. His hand, in some way, became entangled in the machinery, thus severing one of his fingers. Medical aid was at once summoned and the injured member attended to.

THE EXAMINER ROAD RACES
Thanksgiving Day, Monday, Oct. 25th, 1909

SENIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing, and fulfil the required conditions in other ways and wish to be entered in the Examiner Senior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

JUNIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing and am under eighteen years of age. I wish to be entered in the Examiner Junior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter and send in this coupon to the sporting editor of the Peterborough Examiner as soon as possible.

MANY YOUNGSTERS IN LINE FOR EXAMINER JUNIOR RACE

Judging by the way the entries are coming in for the junior Examiner Road Race on Thanksgiving Day there will be a record bunch of youngsters out for the big event. Just how the kids manage to do the five miles without any particular training is hard to figure out but they do it nevertheless. Last year there were thirty entries while the year before there were but twelve. At the present rate this year's total may reach fifty. Good prizes will be given and the youngsters will be well looked after as complete arrangements are being made.

The senior race will be a classy affair, as there will be a big bunch of runners let loose in this class. It begins to look as if the Y.M.C.A. Harriers who have won the senior race since its inauguration, Ray Best in 1906, Ernie Wilson in 1907 and J. H. Adams in 1908 will not have a candidate this year that is likely to have a chance to carry off the honours. Since the departure from Peterborough of Wilson and Adams the Harriers have practically disorganized although as Secretary Hassard remarked yesterday, "We have a dark horse on hand."

The Victoria Harriers, a new organization on the other hand will be very strong. They have half a dozen men in training for the senior event but chiefly pin their hopes on Charlie Thorpe. The English boy was fifth in 1907 and was second last year being beaten out by only a few yards. With the experience he has gained since and the training he has done, Thorpe will be a hot contender this year. The Victoria Harriers have a number of dark horses also that they will uncork for the Thanksgiving Day event.

SENIOR RUGBY TEAM WILL HOLD PRACTICE TO-NIGHT

There will be a full practice of the Peterborough Rugby Club at Riverside Park to-night at 7.30 o'clock. Every member of the team is expected to be out in uniform as there is not much time left to get in shape before the big game with the Parkdale Canoe Club here a week from Saturday. The Toronto teams are out and working hard and the Canoe men will have the advantage over Peterborough as they play an O.R.F.U. game with the T.A.A.S. on Saturday. Lights have been installed at Riverside Park and everything is convenient for a good practice A big squad was out last night and put in some hard work. Dr. MacPherson will be out to coach the boys to-night and every one of last year's seniors as well as anyone else wishing to play the game this year is expected to be out.

GLOOM REIGNS IN PITTSBURG CAMNITZ CANNOT PITCH

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 6.—Howard Camnitz, the star pitcher of the Pittsburg team, the man who had most to do with winning the National League championship for Pittsburg, will not be able to take part in the world's series with Detroit, which begins here Friday.

Manager Fred Clarke admitted this late to-day, when he also announced that since being unable to open the series with his best pitcher he would send Adams to the centre for Pittsburg. Adams has done good work he is comparatively new to the big league. The fact that he has been chosen to take up the work at the start in opposition to the great Mullin has not been well received among hte fans, and there is more or less gloom about baseball headquarters, as the eliminating of Camnitz will be a bitter blow. Why Willis, the older head, has not been chosen to oppose Mullin is something the fans cannot understand to-night. Camnitz suffered a severe cold on the day the game needed to win the championship was played here, and a bad case of quinsy developed.

Barney Dreyfuss gave out a statement to-day on the sale of tickets and the return of money to fans in Pittsburg. The startling announcement is made that not less than $20,000 has been returned to the fans, there being no reserved seats for them. This is at least double what had been thought.

The Detroit team will spend to-morrow afternoon trying out Forbes Field, which is new to all of them. The squad will reach Pittsburg to-morrow morning and will take three hours on the grounds, Manager Clark this afternoon wired Jennings that he would give his boys from 1 to 4 in the afternoon for practice. The Pittsburgs will practise in the morning.

Supt. of Police McQuaide this evening gave orders for all members of the Pittsburg Police force to be on hand to-morrow morning for final instructions in handling what is expected to be the largest crowd ever seen at any sporting event in Pittsburg. About one-third of the force will go on duty at the following midnight near the ball park as there is a rumour that several hundred disappointed and ticketless fans have decided to rush the park and gain entrance at or before daybreak and there make a stand against the authorities. Anyone found scalping tickets is also liable to arrest, according to orders handed down by the police.

Nervous People

SALT OF THE EARTH

But when overstrained their highly strung systems ache very soon depression and suffering is intense.

Money is made these days at the expense of brain and nerve rather than muscular tissues.

The successful men and women are often of the highest strung nervous type—keen and active—but with two little reserve force.

A little extra worry and anxiety and soon goes the nervous system. Weeks and months are often required before energy and vigour are regained.

Rest helps, so does fresh air and exercise but the blood must also be made rich and red by the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Much as they may disagree on some points the best physicians are unanimous in claiming that an abundance of rich, red, life-sustaining nerve invigorating blood is positively necessary for the restoration of the exhausted nervous system.

There is too often little sympathy for the nervous sufferer. When as a matter of fact his sufferings are most intense, being of mind as well as body.

Headaches, neuralgia, indigestion, sleeplessness, irritability, pains and cramps are often the lesser felt because of the depressed spirits and discouragements which come with loss of memory and gloomy forebodings of the future.

The sufferer from nervous exhaustion and prostration can use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with positive assurance that the benefits derived therefrom will be both thorough and lasting.

There is no reaction from this great nerve-builder because it is not a stimulant but a restorative and reconstructor of the wasted nervous system. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

GREAT POTATOES

Mr. Oscar Matchett planted two pails of potatoes in a little plot, 20 by 20 feet, and a few days ago gathered in his harvest. The ground in the East Ward must be particularly fertile for the two pails had multiplied into four bags. In addition they were all of mammoth size, averaging from 13 to 18 oz. and are of splendid quality.

NERVOUS AND SLEEPLESS

Thousands are in this pitiable condition—blood is colorless, thin, and watery. Digestion is generally imperfect and needs attention. Appetite is fickle and requires pampering. Pretty soon the Kidneys and Liver cease to act properly—and then everything goes wrong.

Ferrozone is a positive cure for Nervousness. It possesses marvelous tonic properties that quickly restore the nerves to a normal condition.

"Last year I suffered from a run-down condition and Nervousness. I had the best doctors and used quantities of medicine in the city but was not helped. FERROZONE soon put me strength and made me well." (Mrs.) I. Warren, St. John, N.B.

It strengthens the heart, improves the blood circulation, aids digestion and assimilation of food. Ferrozone has a specific action on the Kidneys and Liver and causes these organs to eliminate all poisonous secretions. Ferrozone brings rest and quiet to the excited brain and is guaranteed to cure Nervousness, Nervous Prostration, Nerve Exhaustion, Tiredness, Languor, and all diseases arising from poverty of the blood. Refuse a substitute for Ferrozone, which costs 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50 Sold by druggists everywhere.

Where Living Is Cheap And The Sunshine Is Unbroken

In Barbadoes — There Servants Work Almost for Nothing—The Clothing Bills are Small and the Only Things to Dread are Earthquakes and Cyclones.

ADJT. WATSON'S LECTURE

If any one is searching for a land where the cost of living is at a minimum it must surely be on Barbadoes, one of the many islands that compose the West Indian archipelgo. This statement is made after listening to Mrs. Adjt. Watson of the Salvation Army, in her address last night in the Bethany Tabernacle. A man could could save up several hundred dollars in this northern clime, and, saying farewell to the temperate zone, could spend the rest of his life on the island where icicles never form on the eve trough and where the women never ask for a $200 coat of Persian Lamb.

Cheapness of Living.

Adjt. and Mrs. Watson have spent four years in the service of the Salvation Army in Barbadoes, and are well acquainted with the customs of the natives. It was Mrs. Watson who agreed to give a lecture on the island and conditions of life there and the large number who were present were instructed and amused by her interesting and humourous address. One of the vexations of domestic life as experienced north of the tropic of Cancer, the servant problem, is eliminated, for you can secure a nurse for practically nothing, and a cook who does not virtually own your home, can be hired at a dollar a month. Fuel is required only to cook the meals and as for raiment, cotton is a la mode during summer, which is the whole four seasons combined into one. Houses are built almost entirely of wood. You could have a brick residence if you desired, but the frequency of earthquakes, cyclones etc., make the wooden building preferable. It will not fall down in a heap with probable disastrous results to the residents, but will follow the Salome maxes of the earth without anything more than a creak or two, as the joints part under the strain.

Adjt. Watson told of the cheapness of the food, which is staple with the natives. The prices are ridiculous, a cent or two a day being sufficient. There is to be taken into consideration however, the fact that wages are small. Six cents a day is the showing of the average man's "envelope," and women get much less. Adjt. Watson has never seen a round-shouldered negro or a stooped negress. "The bearing of the women would cause a duchess to envy them," she said. "Head erect and shoulders squared they walk along with a poise that has been taught them from earliest childhood. When young they are instructed in the art of balancing weights on their heads, and this of necessity develops a straight, graceful figure. Everything, practically, is carried in this manner, and not only is it marvellous that they should be so skilled in the art, but they also show surprising strength, being able to bear great burdens for long distances."

Are Not Workers.

The saying that anyone works as hard as a "nigger," does not fit the black people of to-day. That was given them when they were in slavery. It is only 76 years since they were emancipated, and while they were made to work hard under the old regime, as soon as they secured their freedom they decided to work no more as it were, and their methods now are leisurely and slow."

Adjt. Watson says that a negro does not know the crime of thieving. True, they steal, but to them it is no crime, and they even pervert a passage of the Bible to substantiate their argument. Every thing belongs to the great "Massa," as they call the Master, and who shall say this is mine and that is mine? Tobacco is sold by the yard, and has the appearance of rope. For three cents you can buy a yard and often can get a "smoke" of that length for a cent. Adjt. Watson promised to send any of the audience some of this rope, if they wished. She guaranteed the user would never smoke again.

Negro Hates Rain.

If there is anything the negro hates it is rain. When a storm breaks every one is seen scurrying for their humble shacks, which are designated homes for the want of a more suitable term. They are superstitious of being caught in a shower, believing that it will bring on fever. Adjt. Watson told of a man whose wife died. Because of the hot climate interment takes place the same day as death. In this case it was raining at the time, and the husband would not go out in the rain. So he pulled up a board of the floor (there are no cellars) dug a hole and therein deposited all that was mortal of his wife. The next day the sun appeared and the man, instead of removing the body, as might be expected, to another grave, simply moved his house to another section. Moving the houses of the natives is a simple operation, and is likewise a frequent occurrence.

Adjt. Watson told many interesting things about the people, among whom she and her husband have been labouring, but space will not permit further reference. Suffice to say that she stated that in spite of many obstacles the Army has been very successful as a missionary to these people, and in many cases the officers are themselves natives. The Army began about ten years ago, and from the first their efforts were fruitful. When they first arived small pox was raging, and the zeal and care the pioneer officers showed in their ministrations won for the Army a lasting prestige, which gave it a footing it might not as easily have gained. There are 196,000 people inhabiting There are the 1,157 square miles of the island, and to use Mrs. Watson's expression, they are "as thick as arts."

THE STOCK MARKET

New York, October 6, 1909.

Owing to the advance of United States Steel the stock market frequently presents an appearance of great strength. The rise in this issue has been phenomenal, and must be attributed to the unprecedented activity of the steel industry. The demand for steel has marvellously increased, and as prices have advanced this great corporation is of necessity enjoying a period of unequalled prosperity. The output this month has been record breaking, and our railroads, after a period of economy, are now making improvements and extensions which were deferred as long as possible. The outlook for some months to come if not for a full year, is that the railroads will be heavy buyers of steel in its various forms; and since they are the largest consumers of steel products it is easy to understand the optimistic feeling regarding steel securities. The great rise in the latter will of course assist their distribution, and the immense holdings which have been concentrated in Wall Street will eventually be widely scattered. It is useless to belittle this spectacular movement in steel shares. The latter simply reflect the rise of his industry from pauper to prince within a few short months and constitute one more proof of the remarkable vitality and mercurial buoyancy of the American Steel industry. Nothing like it has ever been seen in any other country, and probably nothing will, for nowhere else does such a lusty and youthful industrial giant exist as in the United States.

As just said, the stock market is entirely overshadowed, or, in fact, dominated by the rise in the Steel shares. There are other conditions affecting the stock market, but they are overlooked or going through a series of changes, some of which are beneficial and some of which are not. Prosperity—a better term would be activity—is very unevenly distributed; for while some industries and some sections of the country are enjoying the flood-tide, there are others still patiently awaiting their share, and some are facing reactionary conditions. It cannot be concealed that the falling of the cotton and corn crops below expectations is a distinct detriment. Some compensation may be found in the high and very profitable prices which these staples now command, but the planter who has little cotton to sell and the consumer whose purchasing abilities are dwarfed by the high prices will hardly consider themselves in the ranks of prosperity. It is well known also that the high level of prices generally imposes more or less discomfiture upon many classes who are not sharing our so-called prosperity. Moreover, the situation is not favourable to large exports, which are necessary to pay for our big imports, unless we are ready to send gold or securities instead. It must, also, be recognised that the high price level of many articles must soon begin to check consumption, if it has not already done so to an extent larger than supposed. Retailers are exceedingly cautious in making their purchases, not being inclined to be caught with large stocks of high priced merchandise. Those with fixed incomes must either deny themselves many purchases or save less and thus join the procession of extravagance.

The point of these remarks is that in spite of the enthusiasm created by the great rise in a few stocks considerations of an adverse character now developing are too easily lost sight of. Not only are conditions changing, but men, too, are shifting, several of the great leaders having been lost lately either through death or retirement. The market is still under the control of a few big operators whose main interest is to distribute their heavy surplus holdings of stocks. It is an open secret that thus far they have not succeeded as well as intended, and their last resort is to keep the market as active and as high as circumstances will permit. Their resources have been strained to the utmost for this end, the great abundance and prolonged ease of money having been a most powerful instrument for that purpose. Now that monetary conditions are changing it remains to be seen how long they will be able to continue their recent tactics. Bank reserves are steadily declining. Money is now being withdrawn for crop movements, and as prices are high the amount of funds thus employed is large. The increasing activity of business and the high price of merchandise is also making itself felt in the interior markets. Meanwhile Canada has been withdrawing her surplus funds from New York, while Japan, too, has already taken some $18,000,000 of gold to strengthen the reserves of its own banks. Idle funds no longer come to New York to aid the schemes of our great speculators, but are now returning to the fields of normal activity. Our loans abroad have increased tremendously, and it isquestionable if Europe would care to extend these materially for speculative ends. Very soon the Bank of England rate may be advanced. The meaning of all this is that speculative resources of the money market have been used to the limit. In future they must diminish rather than increase. The question is, Does this mean a coming liquidation of stocks by large holders? And the answer can only be discovered by watching future events. In this connection it must be noted that none of the several large new issues which our leading bankers had arranged to come out during September have been forthcoming. Several of our big railroad corporations were expected to be in the market ere this with an aggregate of between $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 of new capital applications. No reason has been given for their deferment, and the presumption is that the delay is due either to the very unsatisfactory condition of the bond market or else to the fact that the big leaders have not yet sufficiently distributed their surplus holdings of other securities. Whatever the cause, the delay is actual and must be regarded as significant.

One of the most encouraging features connected with the money market is the recovery in Government receipts and a consequent decrease in the deficit. It now looks as if the Government would not be obliged to use temporary certificates as at one time anticipated. Customs receipts have been very heavy during the last few weeks, and in spite of heavy Government expenses the outlook for the Treasury is much better than for many months. The bond issue to cover expenditures for the Panama Canal has not yet been announced, and this of itself proves the extremities of the Treasury are disappearing. Another good feature is the continued increase of earnings, gross and net, of both railroads and industrials, reflecting the revival of business activity.

As to the future of the market, its prospects are not discouraging, though somewhat confused. So long as present favourable conditions exist, there is little danger of serious re-action, unless from speculative excesses. Of course, liquidation on a big scale must come sooner or later, but no movements of that kind are imminent at this time. The probabilities are for considerable fluctuations in either direction, though the higher the point reached the greater the necessity for caution.

GLAD TO MARRY AGAIN

Had a Tiff, Got Divorce, Met by Chance and Decided to Hunt Again for Parson.

Examiner Special.

Los Angeles, Oct. 6.—Meeting by chance on the streets here, William D. Garland and wife, who were married in Newfoundland twelve years ago and divorced six years ago, were reconciled and remarried.

When they separated Garland went to the great Northwest and his wife to Arizona. Garland secured an interlocutory decree of divorce in the State of Washington. Mrs. Garland was granted a similar decree in Arizona.

Garland had no idea where Mrs. Garland was and Mrs. Garland was totally unaware of her former husband's whereabouts.

Garland settled here a short time ago. Mrs. Garland came to see Los Angeles, never giving her former husband a thought.

By a strange play of fate they met on the street.

"Hello, Will," said she.

"Hello, Amelia;" said he.

"How've you been?"

"Fine, but lonely. How've you been?"

"Same."

"I got a divorce in Washington."

"I got one in Arizona."

"Did you? Well, let's get a marriage license and try the thing again."

"All right; just as you say," was Mrs. Garland's reply, and it was done.

FITTING TRIBUTE TO ONE OF ENGLAND'S GREAT HEROES

Great Banquet Held in Memory of General Wolfe--King Sends Message--The Conquest of Quebec Recalled.

London, Oct. 4.—Fitting tribute to the memory of one of England's great heroes was paid at a banquet, which was held recently at the Garden Club at the White City in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the battle of Quebec and the death of General Wolfe. The guests included Mr. George Wolfe, the present head of the family, the Rev. B. G. R. Hale, great-grandson of Colonel Hale of the 47th Regiment, who brought home the news of Wolfe's victory, and Major General H. Hallam Parr, great grandson of Wolfe's adjutant in the 20th Regiment. During the reception of the guests by Field Marshall Sir George White, the following telegrom was sent to the King:

Field Marshall Sir George White and company met to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the conquest of Quebec by that sterling soldier and patriot, General James Wolfe, offer loyal duty to your Majesty and pray for a message which will further signalise a memorable occasion.

Later in the evening Sir George White read the following telegram from the King:

The King is always glad to hear of the memory of a great soldier being honoured, and His Majesty sends his sincere thanks for their loyal good wishes to yourself and all those who are commemorating a memorable anniversary.

In proposing the toast of "The Memory of Wolfe," Sir George White said that if the value of victories was to be appraised by after-effects, the battle of Quebec must always stand high on the roll of the decisive battles of the world. Mr. George Wolfe, responding, said this was the first time any really genuine effort had been made to mark what General Wolfe did for the country. He had undertaken at his own expense, with the permission of the Home Office, to put in order General Wolfe's tomb at Greenwich, so that those who came from Canada and other parts of the Empire might see and might not blush with shame at the state in which it was kept. Sir Frederick Young submitted the toast of "The Naval and Military Forces of the Empire." Admiral Sir Archibald Douglas, responding for the Navy, said he was born in the city of Quebec, and was the first Colonial cadet that came from Canada. Referring to the conquest of Quebec, he paid a tribute to the gallant part played by the fleet under Admiral Saunders and by the Royal Marines. With regard to the Navy to-day, he said: "The Navy is as good to-day as it ever was, and a little better." Dr. Macnamara told a personal story of a very appropriate character. "Sixty years ago," he said, "A young Irish lad from County Clare, joined the old 47th, Wolfe's Own, as a private soldier. He went out from here, and fought with the 47th in the trenches before Sebastopol. Then he went to Canada as a young sergeant, and on August 28, 1861, in the barracks at Montreal, I was born his son. I am very proud indeed," continued Dr. Macnamara, "to wear the King's uniform as commissioned officer, Minister of the Crown; but you will believe me when I say that I am very much more proud of being the son of Sergeant Thomas Macnamara of the old 47th—Wolfe's Own. I spent my very early days in its barrack rooms and upon its parade ground and in its alley, and its guard room and its canteen. I even with great daring explored its orderly room and its cells. When I went to the Admiralty eighteen months ago the first message I received was a telegram from the members of the sergeant's mess of the old 47th, although it was forty years since my father left the regiment, and I with him as a little boy. I received a lot of other telegrams, but—and I am sure the senders of those messages will not think I am ungrateful—this one was worth all the others put together, so far as I was concerned."

CORDIAL RECEPTION TENDERED TO FORMER PASTOR LAST EVENING

Rev. J. Bastow of New York Meets Congregation of Murray Street Church—An Enjoyable Function

CONGREGATIONAL REUNION

A unique gathering was that which assembled in the basement of the Murray Street Baptist Church last evening. It was a congregational reunion and a reception tendered by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Webb and Mrs. Webb. The occasion was marked by the presence of Rev. Jonathan Bastow of New York, and a former pastor of the church. There was a large number present, all of whom listened with great interest to the remarks of Mr. Bastow, who spoke reminiscently of his pastorate here and of the present work that he is carrying on.

The chair was occupied by Rev. Mr. Webb, who addressed words of welcome to the large congregation present. Messages of regret at their inability to be present were read from Rev. W. C. Riddiford, Rev. J. G. Potter and Rev. Canon Davidson. During the evening a vocal solo was sung by Miss Clara Kidd and a violin solo by Miss Hope Miller and a reading by Miss Aldridge were greatly enjoyed and brought forth much applause.

Rev. Mr. Bastow

On rising to speak Rev. Mr. Bastow was loudly applauded.

He commenced by remarking on the spirit of evolution that was in evidence throughout the work of the church and a place of worship blessed with every success with the congregation under the guidance of the pastor. In regard to Mrs. Bastow, Mr. Bastow said she was enjoying the best of health and was the superintendent of the Sunday School in connection with the church. Both he and Mrs. Bastow had a far deeper interest in the congregation of the Murray Street Church than was probably realised and the members of the church had been remembered during their prayers. The church had been the object of a great many of their prayers and Mr. Bastow assured the congregation that they occupied a very dear place in the hearts of his wife and himself and always would have that place.

"This is one of the reasons I could not pass Peterborough and I have delightful recollections all the while I have been looking into your faces. Judging from the many letters we have received from the members of the congregation since our departure I am led to believe that my ministry among you was fruitful and of great value to you and myself."

The speaker commented upon the proficiency of the present pastor and said he hoped his ministry would be crowned by the erection of the sanctuary the congregation had in view. He spoke of the work in connection with the church which he now had charge of attributing his success in no small measure to the splendid work of Mrs. Bastow. He referred to the difficulties of his early work as a pastor but now he was in charge of a church with a flourishing Sunday School as part of it and had a $4,000 parsonage nearly all paid for and the church was now $5,000 better off than when he first went there.

The outlook had been dark but he knew he had been acting with divine guidance and his efforts had been crowned with success.

"I am now 74 years of age but I do not feel that old and I look forward to many years more in the service of the Master."

Rev. Mr. Bastow concluded his remarks by saying how glad he was to meet those with whom he had been associated in his ministerial work in Peterborough and his other friends and urged all present to expend their best efforts in the work of Christ.

At the conclusion dainty refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

HOW MRS. CLARK FOUND RELIEF

After Years of Suffering Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Her.

Pleasant Point Matron Tells Her Suffering Sisters How to be Free from the Terrible Pains that Make Life a Burden.

Pleasant Point, Ont., Oct. 6. (Special).—That most of the ills that the suffering women of Canada have to bear are due to disordered Kidneys, and that the natural cure for them is Dodd's Kidney Pills, is once more shown in the case of Mrs. Merril C. Clarke, a well-known member of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Clarke is always ready to give her experience for the benefit of her suffering sisters.

"My sickness commenced twenty years ago with the change of life," say Mrs. Clarke. "My health was in a bad state. Water would run from my head which would make me faint. When I came out of the fainting spells I took fits. I was bloated till I was clumsy. The pain I suffered was awful. It would go to my feet and then to my head. Many doctors attended me, and I tried many medicines, but nothing gave me relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first box stopped the fits and seven boxes cured me completely."

Every suffering woman should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They make strong, healthy Kidneys, and the woman who has good Kidneys is safeguarded against those terrible pains that make miserable the lives of so many women.

OUR CANADIAN HYMNS

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—

I find very little known about the author of our great Canadian hymn, "What a friend we have in Jesus."

The author was Joseph Scriver, a native of Ireland and a graduate of Dublin University. He came to Canada and was engaged as tutor in the home of the late Captain Pengelly of H.M.R.N.S in South Monaghan township. After that he spent his time and means in preaching the gospel and helping the poor, nursing them when sick, in fact doing God's work as best he could. He was so humble. It appears he wrote two copies of the Hymn, sent one to his mother in Ireland and it was from that one it got into print, then the question arose, "Who wrote the Hymn?"

It was attributed to some writers of hymns but they all said "No."

But the lady with whom he was boarding found the copy he kept, in some papers and asked him if he composed it. His reply was "The Lord and me did."

Mr. Scriven was never married and is buried in the Pengelly cemetery by his special request for there the young lady was buried that would have been his wife had she lived.

There is nothing to mark his grave. I think those of us who love that hymn should have a little monument erected at his grave.

I most respectfully request the Ministerial Association of Peterborough to take this matter into their consideration.

THE BEST HERITAGE

Good health is one of the first requisites to success. Prolonged application to any subject cannot be sustained without well fed nerves.

If nervous energy could be secured by a large cash payment, every person would make a big effort to find the money.

By reason of well directed study, assisted by practical experience, a way has been found to supply energy to jaded and overwrought nerves, without its costing a fortune.

Pure fresh air, exercise, and eating the simplest foods will produce this desired result.

Among foods for human consumption none contain the necessary elements to sustain life in greater quantities than milk and wheat.

Orange Meat which is made from the whole wheat, thoroughly steam cooked, malted, flaked and toasted, contains the necessary elements to sustain life in greater proportions than any other cereal.

ORANGE MEAT and milk is a perfect food.

In Chorus Cried, Give Us Newbro's Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes." Now "Herpes is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; ths is the medicine that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE promptly destroys; after which the hair grows. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Speeding Events.

The horse we shall always have with us. The speeding ring was the greatest attraction of the show. The races were well managed, the judges being Messrs. R. H. The prize list will appear in a later issue.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

KEENE Special Exhibits.

There were quite a number of interesting exhibits made by business men, agents, stock raisers and others which were worthy of special mention:

Stillman Bros. Store Display.

The first of the special exhibits made by merchants was that of Messrs. Stillman Bros., the enterprising dealers in stoves, tinware, hardware, harness, etc., of the Village of Keene. This firm had a large display at the entrance to the grounds of the celebrated Oxford steel ranges, made by the Gurney Foundry Co. They showed an Imperial Oxford steel range, four-holed, nickel-plated, large reservoir, with high shelf and warming closet. The new grate in these ranges burns every piece of coal to a fine white ash. They also showed a Gurney-Oxford steel range, 6 holes, large reservoir, with warming closet and new grate. Another well-made stove was the "Crown Prince," four-holed, suitable for small families. The display of Oxford heaters was also good, and in various patterns, including a handy little stove called "The Rancher" two-holed, also a new device for improving the draft on chimney tops. A combination washing machine and wringer drew the ladies' attention, as it was a domestic labour saver. Stillman Bros. are also agents for the Melotte clean skimming cream separator, which was exhibited in the building. Mr. Whitney, the general sales agent, looked after this exhibit, and demonstrated its excellence to crowds of farmers and dairymen. This firm gave a special prize for the best brood mare and foal.

High-Grade Clothing by Grafton & Company.

The Peterborough store of Messrs. Grafton & Co., clothing manufacturers of Dundas, put up a fine display of their "high-grade" tailor-made clothing for fall and winter wear. The representatives in charge had spied out the land in the early morning hours, and selected a preferred position, directly between the main entrance and the main building exit. The main roads leading to the Fair grounds were decorated with Grafton & Co. bulletin boards, as well as the vantage places, buildings and fences surrounding the fair grounds. The splendid exhibit of fall and winter fashions for men and boys attracted general attention. The showing of new styles of overcoats was much admired for their excellent tailoring effects, as well as pleasing fabrics and makes, typical of comfort, warmth, and style. Grafton's smart suits, in smart effects, showed several new wrinkles and improvements. This season striped patterns are evidently in favour and new ideas in pockets and cuffs gave added interest to the display.

The display was in charge of Mr. Herb. Conway, who explained the practical worth of the goods to crowds of visitors. Mr. Frank Tamblin made an industrious advertising man and gave away hundreds of handy memo books and other advertising features.

Grafton & Co. contributed, as usual, three special prizes for the best pair of Agricultural horses weighing 2,800 lbs. The first prize was a tweed suit, won by Mr. Peter Thompson, of Hiawatha; and the second prize, a pair of worsted pants, won by Mr. J. Davidson, of Westwood; the third prize was a pair of tweed pants, winner's name was not obtained.

W. T. Mather's Display of Buggies and Cutters.

Mr. W. T. Mather, of Mather's Corners, Otonabee, was again represented at the Keene Fair. He made a very creditable exhibition of his own make of buggies, as well as samples of handsomely made and well designed cutters. Two buggies were shown—one rubber-tired, and both well finished. The bodies and gear were in black and were built of substantial material, well put together, each having nickel-plated rails, etc. Two fine, roomy cutters were shown, richly upholstered, one with red body and green plush trimmings, the other finished in black with red trimmings. There was also a typical specimen of a well-constructed country carriage, just the thing for a farmer's driving outfit.

Mr. Geo. Gall's Exhibit.

Just inside the main building Mr. George Gall, another of Keene's active merchants, made an attractive display of International stock food, which was of practical value to the scores of farmers and dairymen who inspected it. The International Stock Food Company's specialties consist of specially prepared food for horses cattle, sheep and poultry, which is fast growing into confidence. "Three feeds for one cent," explains how remarkably cheap this food is offered at. Mr. Gall contributed several special prizes to the prize list to encourage farmers to greater proficiency in stock raising.

Mr. Gall is also the local agent of the Singer Sewing Machines. Mr. Gall demonstrated the merits of these machines to crowds of admiring ladies. Wives, mothers and daughters took an especial interest in these world-renowned machines. The wonderful new stocking-darner, which can be used on any lock-stitch machine, was also explained to the ladies.

At his store, on the principal corner of the village, Mr. Gall handles the Martin-Senour paints, so popular for outside and inside work. A good patent-combination washing machine, regular price $8, is offered for $5. Many other good bargains are offered at Gall's this month.

The Newcombe Piano.

Too much credit cannot be given to the City Music Company of Peterborough for undertaking to make an exhibit of the beautiful Newcombe pianos at this fair. It was quite a new thing to see a musical display at Keene show, and the crowds of visitors showed their appreciation of Mr. Ruse, the manager's, enterprise in sending so beautiful an instrument for exhibition. The world-wide reputation of the Newcombe pianoforte, the many valuable awards and gold medals bestowed upon it in different continents, in competition with the world's best, are enduring proofs of its deserving merit. The construction, action and tone of the "Newcombe" places it in a class by itself for it is truly an artistic instrument of noble tone and quality. Many enquiries were made at the exhibit, through which both Mr. Ruse and Mr. Quinn, the genial superintendent are assured of future sales.

Messrs. Lang & Maher of Clothing Fame.

The effective fall fair advertising campaign of Messrs. Lang & Maher, "The Daylight Clothiers," of George street, was a feature of the Keene fair. Their energetic advertising methods attracted no small attention all over the grounds that it was no wonder their name was talked of so much by visitors. Commencing at the entrance to the grounds, and looking all around on fences, sheds, gates, grand stands, main buildings, etc., large coloured bulletins attractively lettered, bearing their name and business address were to be seen prominently displayed. It was simply impossible for anyone to attend the fair without learning that Lang & Maher are the live "Daylight Clothiers," who are determined not to hide their light under a three storey building.

The very interesting display made by the representatives of the firm at Keene was visited by hundreds. Here was displayed an admirably arranged exhibit of their new fall and winter suits, overcoats, toppers, raincoats, etc., for men, as well as a smart exposition of boys' suits, reefers and overcoats. Their "Sovereign Brand" and "Fit-Rite" garments were shown to good purpose. Original designs for 1909-10 studied out and adapted to the exacting demands of particular wearers, give these model garments a tastiness, shapeliness, fit and comfort peculiar to themselves.

It is quite easy to get acquainted with Lang & Maher's store, on George street—their handsome tile entrance to their front door, and their name plate in blue tile lettering should suffice. The success which they have enjoyed speaks volumes for their future. Every dollar spent at Lang & Maher's store, No. 409-411 George street, is assured to be spent to the best advantage. A good start is everything and they have had it. Having tasted the sweets of good fortune it is but natural that they would like a little more of it. Their new Fall Clothing and Furnishings have been selected with the care of expert buyers and a knowledge of the requirements of Peterborough's particular trade. They are both practical men and know just what to buy and what not to buy.

Fife and Carroll's Piano Display

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," or entertain and delight the visitors at a Fair. The audience of over a thousand that listened to the captivating performance on Gourlay pianos at Keene, are indebted to Messrs. Fife and Carroll, of Peterborough, for this musical treat. A good position was secured for these pianos in the front entrance to the main building. A skilful pianist, Mrs. Fraser, of Toronto, brought out delightful melodies from one of these artistic mahogany instruments, which held the attention of the crowds. In these pianos there seems to be embodied not only first-class materials and workmanship, but also certain fine quality, which results from trained talent. Piano back, sounding boards, and bridges, as well as the stringing of the music wires, are the latest that scientific thought can bestow.

Mr. J. O. Fife or Mr. C. J. Carroll of Peterborough, will be pleased to answer all enquiries from those desiring further particulars. 'Phone 725.

Birdsall & Sons Sheep & Cattle

"Belleview" Stock farm, Birdsall, sent a number of thoroughbred Dutchams and Oxford-down sheep to the fair. These consisted of three ram lambs, one aged ram, two aged ewes, two shearling ewes and two ewe lambs. The first prize ram lamb was bred by Henry Arkell on Arkell, near Guelph, who has proved to be a successful breeder of high-class stock. The two bull calves were fine specimens of their class, as were also the two yearlings and two-year-old heifer of the Dutham class. Both cattle and sheep were taken off the field, without any special preparation and although they encountered big competition they got their full share of the prizes.

THE MOUNTEBANK'S SON

This is one of Pathe's latest and best dramatic pictures. It tells an interesting story of a noble old mountebank trying to make a gentleman out of his son. The son becomes a Doctor, but falls in love with one of his father's strolling players, and there are many complications before the story is ended.

"THE TEMPTATION"

An intensely dramatic subject depicting the play of human emotions. A trusted employee of a big concern is tempted to steal the pay roll cash, he is prevented by his wife, although she does not know him at the time, but everything ends up happily for both.

"A DANGEROUS PAIR"

A farce comedy that should appeal to everyone, but especially the married folks, and more especially the newly-weds. Jack and Caroline are just married and each has been secretly informed that the other takes fits. You should see them take them and how each tries to cure the other. It is full of fun from wedding day till after the honeymoon.

TO PREVENT CRUELTIES

Movement, Headed by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and E. D. Morel, to Arouse the Sentiment of Britishers Against the Inhumanity of the Rubber-Traders is To Be Carried on in Great Britain.

London, Eng., Oct. 8.—Sir A. Conan Doyle and E. D. Morel have placed themselves at the head of a movement in the United Kingdom for the purpose of making the public realize the situation in the Congo and to arouse public opinion and thus force Government action. Sir A. Conan Doyle has just returned from Gibraltar. Seen at his Sussex home he said:

"We are going to hold a series of great public meetings in all parts of the kingdom in order to bring the facts of the present reign of terror and atrocious misgovernment in the Congo. The first Congo reform meeting will be at Newcastle Nov. 8, followed by a great mass meeting in London on Nov. 19. All the religious denominations will be united in this movement in the interest of humanity.

"When the people of England know the facts and have heard the statements of eye-witnesses and seen the photographs of mutilated men, women and children, I am sure they will rise with us and put an end to these crimes.

"The Government cannot do anything effectual until the people of the country are enlightened as to the real horrors, and stand behind the Government as a driving force. I wish the public to co-operate and call for an end of this long orgy of blood, lust and greed.

"I have a photograph of a poor black child, with a mutilated hand and leg. We stand for the murdered and maimed men, women and children of the Congo, and this is a heart call to the men and women of England. This country took a most solemn pledge when the Congo Free State was created, and one article of that treaty was that we bound ourselves in the name of the Almighty God with a solemn oath to watch over the preservation of the native race, and the amelioration of the moral and material conditions of their existence.

"What have we done to keep that oath. Millions of natives have been wiped out, and many others maimed and hacked and tormented without any civilized power raising a hand to save them.

"It is a significant fact that the heraldic shield of Antwerp, to which city most of the rubber from the Congo is sent, contains a bloody hand, severed at the wrist. Mr. Harris, the secretary of the Congo Reform Association, has been a missionary for many years in the Congo. When asked to give evidence before a commission he had the records of a thousand murders to prove his accusations.

"A third of the whole population of the Congo, which formerly contained thirty million people, he said, has disappeared under Leopold's regime. Great towns of fifty and sixty thousand inhabitants have vanished. The question now is: Are cold-blooded and infamous men to continue to make capital out of suffering and misery?"

Methods of Detectives.

Toronto, Oct. 8.—In the course of the action of Richard Ford to recover $5,000 damages in character against the Canadian Express Co. for false arrest, Chief Justice Mulock took a fling at the detective department for their methods of cross-examining prisoners before they have had a chance to consult counsel. He thought the Attorney-General's attention should be called to it.

Manager Charles Miller of the company testified that it was the crown, not the company that directed the arrest and prosecution of Ford. Mr. Miller did not swear the information against the accused until Detective Mackie had told him to do so. Personally he had not known Ford. The jury were addressed by both counsel before adjournment last evening. The judge will charge this morning.

Budget Stands Home Rule.

London, Oct. 8.—The King is still trying to prevent a crisis, and yesterday had another "consultation" with Premier Asquith.

As time passes the difficulties toward avoiding a conflict between the Commons and the Lords increases. The strong party men of both sides being eager for the fight.

The Unionists, are urging the leaders to do nothing that might prevent an immediate appeal to the people. They have seized upon Mr. Redmond's statement that the last obstacle to home rule would have gone with the disappearance of the veto of the House of Lords, and are declaring that a vote for the budget is a vote for home rule.

Sentenced 12,000 People.

London, Oct. 8.—Harry Benton of Brooklyn, whose residence is Bebrh, has been sentenced to five years' penal servitude for fraud in connection with the bankruptcy of the Feltharpe Bank, which he founded. It was also adduced that he had swindled 18,000 persons by means of the International Securities Corporation.

Chatham Pastor Going West.

Chatham, Oct. 8.—Rev. W. E. Matthews, pastor of William street Baptist Church, has resigned his position to take charge of a Baptist church in Brandon, Man.

DEATH OF GEN. BUCHAN

Gallant Canadian Officer Who Distinguished Himself in the North-west Rebellion and the South African War is Victim of Attack of Pleuro-Pneumonia — Was Nicknamed "Fighting Larry."

Montreal, Oct. 8.—The death took place yesterday morning of Brigadier-General Lawrence Buchan, C.M.G., commander of the Quebec division of the Canadian forces, at the Royal Victoria Hospital, where he was removed a few days ago, suffering from a severe attack of pleuro-pneumonia, from which it was realized a couple of days ago he could not recover. Mrs. and Miss Buchan and Lieut.-Col. Dumber were at the bedside when death came.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, from the hospital chapel, to Mount Royal Cemetery. A full turnout of militia forces of the district has been ordered, and there will be military delegations from others sections of the Dominion.

"Fighting Larry" was the nickname by which the late Gen. Buchan was popularly known, for in his long military career he had considerable active service. He was born near Paris, Ont., Jan. 29, 1847, and was educated at U.C.C. In the 70's he was in partnership with J. L. Blaikie, in the insurance business, and from January, 1871-7 was a member of the Toronto Stock Exchange.

He transferred his seat to his brother, Ewing Buchan, who became a partner with C. S. Gzowski, under the style name of Gzowski & Buchan. For many years the late general was a welcome guest at the Christmas festival at the exchange.

In 1872 he joined the Queen's Own Rifles as ensign, became captain in 1874, and adjutant in 1876. In 1881 he moved west and became adjutant of the 90th Regiment, Winnipeg, serving with that corps in the Riel Rebellion. At Batoche his horse was shot beneath him. He was promoted to major in August, 1885, was appointed captain of the mounted infantry permanent force at Winnipeg. Later, with the Royal Canadian Regiment (infantry) he served at Fredericton, N.B., Toronto, and St. Johns, Que. In 1895 he became lieutenant-colonel. He took a long staff course in England in the three arms of the reserve.

In 1899, while at Stanley Barracks, he was appointed second in command of the first South African contingent and won high praise for his conduct in the field. For a while he was in charge of the Transvaal convalescent depot of the imperial forces. In 1900 he was honored with the C.M.G.

While in Toronto during the absence of Gen. Otter, he commanded the troops called out during the street car strike, and for the riots at Sault Ste. Marie. In 1905 he was given the Quebec command and last year was gazetted brigadier-general.

A PRETTY FANCY.

Pockets of Lace and Muslin For Tea Gowns.

To make the pocket photographed, which is intended for a tea gown or dressy muslin frock trimmed with the same ribbon and all over lace, two strips of all over three inches wide and eight inches long are required for the body of the bag and twelve inches each of inch wide lace beading and edging to match. The eight inch strips are doubled lengthwise, joined together with a fagoting of linen thread and their outer edges rounded off for the bottom of the bag and seamed with a dainty overcasting. The beading and lace edge are then attached to the top and the inch wide satin ribbon, lavender in this case, run in and tied in a sewed bowknot that leaves just space enough for the hand to reach into the bag. A half inch white satin ribbon two-thirds of a yard long is then attached, as pictured, and the pocket suspended by this means to the semi-empire girdle of the tea gown.

EASILY WASHED COAT.

A Charming Little Lingerie Wrap For Small Children.

There are many days in summer when the small child needs an extra wrap, something neither as heavy nor as everyday as a sweater, reefer or knit sack. For ordinary occasions the pique coat fills every need, but when baby is to be dressed up and made to look its fluffiest nothing takes the place of the lingerie coats over a lining.

These lingerie coats may be elaborate affairs of handkerchief linen or muil, bedecked with hand embroidery and insets of real lace, worn over white or colored silk slips. Quite as effective, much cheaper and more easily laundered are the little coats of embroidered batiste or dotted muslin.

They are made simply from any good coat pattern that reaches to the end of the frock. The bottom is cut long enough to turn up in a three or four inch hem that can be let out as the child grows. Sometimes the fullness at the back is arranged in side plaits fastened to a yoke. More simply it is gathered to a yoke, the fullness being confined to a few inches at the back.

The coat is untrimmed, but a small cape deep enough to cover the yoke is edged with a row of Irish lace or any other washable cotton lace that looks well with the muslin. The cape may be made round or it can be cut in points, tabs or other fancy shape. A pretty touch is added by brierstitching the edge where the lace is joined to the cape. The turndown collar of the coat is also lace edged, a narrower width being used.

Such a coat can be worn over any straight slip coat. They are most fancied in a color, though for tiny babies china silk makes a good lining, as it can be washed. For very warm weather the undercoat could be mercerised gingham or even of colored lawn. There is a surprising amount of warmth in these cotton fabrics.

MATRIMONIAL SCHEME.

The Old Beau and the New Woman Have a Little Chat.

They were discussing woman's advancement, matrimony and the favors of fortune.

"Just think of the inequality of things in this world!" said the new woman. "There is that little snip of barely eighteen years who is to be married next week who is worth fully $1,000,000. It is unjust."

"I quite agree with you," retorted the old beau courteously. "I have given the matter some thought, and it is apparent to me that things are very unevenly and unsatisfactorily arranged in the matrimonial market. If this young woman of whom you speak is only eighteen her dowry should be not to exceed $100,000. It is all wrong giving pretty girls of eighteen dowries in excess of that. If one can't get married at eighteen with $100,000 safely put away in the bank why, then, there must be something wrong with her."

"And in that case?" suggested the new woman.

"In that case it might be proper to give an additional inducement of $50,000 when she is nineteen."

"And if she still remains single?"

"Add to it again at twenty."

"At thirty, then, her dowry would be $700,000?"

"Precisely. And if that were not sufficient to tempt any one I would begin adding $100,000 a year. In that way we would sort of equalize the chances and make up for deficiencies in beauty and temper."

The new woman laughed.

"But can't you see," she said, "that you would be offering inducements to women to remain single?"

"Certainly," he replied.

"And in that way you would be defeating your own purpose?"

"Not at all," he asserted.

"I don't quite follow your course of reasoning," she said.

"Madam," he answered, "I am surprised that you, who are supposed to have made a study of your own sex, should speak in this way. Such a system would increase woman's opportunities, and I supposed it was a well known fact that all woman wants is an opportunity."

It is not known yet what the old grudge was that the old beau had against the new woman, but as she was thirty-five and single it was evident that his aim was to do more than advance an excellent theory.—Chicago Post.

Down the Old Road.

The fireflies twinkled in the tall grasses like myriads of tiny stars.

"You John Luther Elderberry," giggled the pretty girl in the pink sunbonnet, "I am surprised!"

"Surprised at what, Cynthia?" drawled the lanky youth at her side.

"Why, at your standing there and chasing a lone, defenseless girl that way."

"Oh, don't worry about that, Cynthia. Here is another way." And the moon man came out from behind a cloud and grinned until it seemed his face would crack.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Imposition.

"Following Up His Case."

THE BEST SUMMER JOB.

In days like this,
When perspiration
Lines my brow
And desperation
Fills my soul
Because it's hot,
I yearn for jobs
That I have not.
It's much too warm
For verses solemn,
And yet I'm forced
To fill a column.

I would not care
To be a baker
In June's hot days
Nor candle maker.
In factories
I would not toil,
Nor do I long
To till the soil.
I would not be
An engineer,
Although the pay
Is good, I hear.
It's much too hot
To be a preacher.
I'd rather be
A swimming teacher.

Of all the summer
Jobs there is
His is the most Delightful biz.
His working clothes
Are few and cool,
He has the river
For his school.
And, sitting by
The water's brim,
The gentle breezes
Comfort him.
And when he works
His arm is placed
Around some lovely
Maiden's waist.

—Edgar A. Guest in Detroit Free Press.

In the Natural Way.

"How is that quarrel between Jack and his wife about her staying more at home to mend his clothes?"

"Oh, that's been patched up."

Womanlike.

Mrs. Stubb—Oh, John! What in the world has happened to you? Why, you look as pale as a ghost!

Mr. Stubb—No wonder, Maria. I was out beyond my depth and went down three times before being rescued. During that time I remembered every event of my life.

Mrs. Stubb—Gracious, John! And—and did you remember that letter I gave you to mail last week?—Chicago News.

Theory and Fact.

"I tell you that it is a mistaken idea that animals have instinct," remarked the newfangled naturalist.

"Will you inform me then what makes a hen sit on a doorknob?" asked an auditor.

"My investigations have only gone far enough to show that it is not instinct," replied the naturalist somewhat stiffly.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Among Autocrats.

"Mr. Cumrox used to say he wanted to get rich so that he could be his own boss."

"Well, he succeeded."

"Not entirely. He's rich, but he doesn't dare take a chance on talking back to his chauffeur or the man in charge of his steam yacht."—Washington Star.

Drumming of the Snipe.

One of the most remarkable of bird sounds is the so-called drumming of the snipe. The noise is difficult to describe and is often compared to bleating. The snipe, in fact, has been called the bleater. Tennyson used the word hum, speaking of "the swamp where hums the snipe." It is now generally agreed that the noise is made by the vibration of the tail feathers. A writer, however, carefully watching the snipe during the flights in which it makes this remarkable noise, is convinced that the wings assist in its production. This seems exceedingly probable, since the wings are seen to be in actual vibration during its emission.—Country Life.

The Assassin's Day.

Almost everywhere within the range of Christendom Friday is a day of proverbial ill luck. The following list of assassinations tends to confirm this superstition:

Great Discovery after 2000 years.

Two thousand years ago the usual method of healing skin injuries and diseases was to apply certain essences and juices obtained direct from various healing herbs and roots. The gladiators of ancient Rome and the athletes of Greece adopted this means of healing their injuries, and with wonderful effect. A gladiator would emerge from the ring having sustained terrible cuts and bruises, yet on the application of his favourite herbal balm, within a few days he would again be ready for combat.

As centuries rolled by, the secret of making these herbal extracts was lost, and ointments and salves made up of animal fats took the place of the pure herbal balm.

Zam-Buk, the great balm which during the past few years has revolutionised the system of skin-healing, was produced by returning to the idea of the ancients, that man's best medicaments must be found in herbal extracts.

In the investigation which followed, the necessity was seen for entirely excluding the rancid fats and coarse minerals from which most modern ointments are compounded, and sticking closely to nature.

Scientific inquiry eventually centred round the peculiar properties of certain vegetable, saps and juices. These extracts from rare herbs had, it was found, a curious power that enabled them when spread on the broken skin, to knit the edges of tissues together—in short, the power of healing injuries in a marvellously natural way, and of annihilating any germs of disease harboured by wound or sore.

The choice of the right herbal juices and their refinement comprised the next step, after which came the more difficult problem of finding out just the exact proportion of the different ingredients which would give the best healing results. Early disappointment and costly experiments are often the forerunner of famous discoveries, but at length, when success arrived, the investigators found themselves in the possession of a substance of fine consistency, of slight yet agreeable odour, and unique for its marvellous healing, soothing and antiseptic value. The original medicinal power of the respective ingredients was found to have been multiplied many times by reason of the scientific and novel manner of their combination as they exist in Zam-Buk.

Careful tests established the exceptional value of the new balm, its constant reliability, and its unvarying success even in certain obstinate cases of eczema and ulceration.

From the first Zam-Buk has born out in practice what its discoverers expected of it from a practical standpoint. In four continents it has now become the favourite household balm. Cheap substitutes made up to look like Zam-Buk, and sold at so-called "cheap" rates, are constantly being produced, but the careful housewife, the mother, bearing the responsibility and the welfare of her ailing children, or the bread-winner, who once wastes money on them never repeats the experiment. There is no "cheapness" in nature. If one wants her treasure her price must be paid, and now people don't waste money on "cheap" imitations.

Zam-Buk, so pure yet so powerful, is good for young and old. The delicate skin of babes benefit from its application and it is widely used by nursing mothers for the rashes and chafings of very young children. Men of experience and of great attainments in varied walks of life have tested it, and speak of it in the highest terms.

Dr. Andrew Wilson, whose name as a scientist is familiar all the world over, in one of his recent medical works ("Homely Talks on First Aid") says: "Wherever a box of Zam-Buk is handy the preparation may be relied upon as an antiseptic dressing which requires no preparation and has the particular advantage of possessing unique healing properties."

Mr. Frank Scudamore, the great war correspondent says: "Zam-Buk cured me of blood-poisoning, which caused severe ulcers. It is a splendid healer, and I hope its merits will become even more widely known."

Mr. R. F. Perry, Justice of the Peace, of Goldfields, B.C., says: "Zam-Buk cured me of a skin rash of five years' duration, which no doctor had been able to relieve."

For skin eruptions, scalp sores, ulcers, abscesses, poisoning, cold sores, chapped places, frost bite, blistering, chafing, ringworm, etc., Zam-Buk is without equal. For piles it is the best remedy yet discovered. It relieves the burning, stabbing, throbbing pains, and gives ease. Almost all druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at fifty cents per box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

"IT SEEMED LIKE THROWING MONEY AWAY

Until I Tried Gin Pills."

Mr. P. Fitzgerald was completely discouraged. He had suffered so long with his Kidneys, and spent so much money on doctors without relief, that he had made up his mind he could not be cured.

Then, he chanced to read about the wonderful cures by Gin Pills, the great Kidney Remedy, and sent for a sample. The pills did him so much good that he immediately bought two full size boxes. And these two boxes of Gin Pills made him feel like another man.

But let Mr. Fitzgerald tell his own story of a really remarkable cure.

Provincial Asylum, Orillia
June 15th.

I have much pleasure in stating that the sample, which you sent me, led me to buy two boxes of Gin Pills from a local druggist. They are the best remedy for Uric Acid Trouble that I have ever tried. I must say that before using Gin Pills, I had undergone a long and expensive course of treatment by eminent specialists of Chicago. They did me no good—it seemed like throwing money away.

I will keep a box of Gin Pills on hand and take one occasionally. I am pleased to recommend them and bear testimony to their efficacy.

P. FITZGERALD.

After reading such a letter as this you simply can't doubt the value of Gin Pills in cases of Kidney and Bladder Trouble. If you aren't satisfied, write the National Drug & Chemical Co., Dept. B, Toronto, for a free sample of Gin Pills and try them at our expense. After you have sent for yourself just what Gin Pills will do, buy the full size box at your dealer's, and remember that Gin Pills are sold with a positive guarantee of a cure or money refunded.

DONE BY A CANOE.

The Way the Parted Lovers Brought the Judge to Terms.

By DONALD ALLEN.

(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Yes, I won't have it—I won't have it! He must cease to call here!"

"But mamma has no objection."

"That makes no difference. Your mother is not running this family."

"Isn't Mr. Graham of good family?"

"He may be, but he doesn't own the clothes he stands in, and as near as I can find out he's a dawdler and will never amount to shucks."

"But Mr. Graham is an artist and is making his way. He has already painted and sold"—

"He has daubed paint on to canvas and roped some idiot into buying it for a landscape. Don't talk about it any more. When it is time for you to fall in love I'll take the case in hand and see that it is with a proper young man."

Judge Talbot was a bumptious and blunt husband and father. He prided himself on being practical. He had known in a general way that Will Graham, the artist, had been calling at the house far more frequently than any other young man and had had nothing to say about it. It was only when Mrs. Talbot timidly wondered if Elsie and Will were engaged that he suddenly sat up and roared out:

"What! What! Our Elsie engaged to be married! What are you talking about?"

"But I think—think"—

And then the judge said he would see about it, and the daughter was sent for and told what was what and sent away with tears in her eyes and a lump in her throat. As a matter of fact, the father had made no inquiries concerning the young man to the effect that had he done so he would have learned nothing to Graham's disadvantage.

On the day after the judge's dictum two young ladies paid a visit to Will Graham's studio. While one of them wandered about looking at the pictures on the wall the other had something to say that was strictly private. It was a fond thing to say that the young man had been forbidden the house, and she got it over with as soon as possible, to add:

"And pup were telling me a few days ago that you had a married sister living down near Grayshore and that you might spend a month there this summer."

"Yes?"

"Well, papa has rented a cottage down there, and we are all to go down in that good cause."

"But if I can't see you?"

"Oh, but you can—that is, you can after a while. What if—"

"That is what?"

"That is, of you were rightful like natures are always grateful when their wishes have been met, aren't they?"

And then Miss Elsie lowered her voice still another step and told a little story, and even if the other girl had been listening with both ears she couldn't have caught a word.

Judge Talbot's sole reason for wanting a cottage at Grayshore was that he could easily get it into his head that he ought to occupy a canoe. Now, the judge weighed 200 pounds, and the canoe was a cedar, but there had been several occasions when the two had been partners and the canoe had carried them safely. The judge had come to think that he knew all about canoeing, and he was quite willing to take the other old fellow's word for it that the canoe was a good one. He went with the idea of having a month's fishing and boating, and he was quite pleased with the thought of wearing an old hat and flannel shirt and of sitting in the stern of a canoe and smoking his pipe. All this, but not a solitary word about the girls.

At last Judge Talbot and wife and daughter arrived in their cottage at the shore. A large tent came on the same train. Will Graham, too, had taken up his abode at his sister's, half a mile down the shore, with a skiff drawn up on the beach ready for an emergency.

Judge Talbot never had known what fear was until he had that canoe ready to launch. He made ready five different times before he gave it a trial, and five different times his daughter hung a white rag on a bush as a signal. Then the judge grew desperate. He ridiculed himself and called himself a coward and marched forth to do or die. He took his practice cruise in the mouth of a creek. How he got from the canoe to the bottom of the creek he never could explain, but that fact was accomplished. It was useless to essay those times it, one day. On the fourth trial he examined its fine points, much to his own surprise.

Wherein the birch bark or any of the sort of canoe resembles everybody but an Indian is to be given the canoeist considerable too-much. The judge reasoned, like many another, that because the little bobbin had seemed to play circus it had elected to be good, and he refused to believe that an ambush had been prepared for him.

The sun was going down on the second day after the first capsize when he made ready to enjoy the pleasures he had long anticipated. The swallows were flying lowground, the whippoorwills were putting in their best licks, and the splash of a dozen Indian soldiers seemed to be hovering over the misery and drinking and drunk. As he was getting ready the white rag was waving on the bush for the last time, and he was gently pushed from shore by his daughter's hands a long, sakish craft that to the water half a mile below.

It took the judge five minutes to ascertain whether he was frightened or exultant. It took him three more to decide whether to use the paddle or wait for a steamboat to come along and tow him back to shore. He finally lifted the paddle and made a stroke. One was sufficient. The canoe had been waiting for it. It turned bottom up like a flash, and there were screams from the shore. There was also shouts from the man in the sakish craft. It arrived just as the judge's head appeared above the surface. He spluttered and coughed and gasped, but he was not to be cut down in his prime. A hand reached forth and clutched his hair, and with the other hand using an oar the boatman towed the victim to the booth.

If any of the judge's physical troubles, he expressed his gratitude in some such terms from a wet but grateful heart. All at once he remembered to ask for the name of his preserver. Miss Elsie took it upon herself to reply:

"Father, this is Mr. Graham, the artist. Wasn't it splendid that he happened to be near at hand?"

The judge turned and went into the bunkhouse and sat down to think. He was thinking for twenty minutes; then his judicial opinion was ready, and he came out and delivered it.

"Will, you were very splendid and very opportune that he happened along just then. Smart couple, you two! That sort of a conspiracy wants you have put up if I hadn't been clever enough to buy that canoe? Well, I suppose I must let the case go to the jury."

And, that there might be no further interference, he took himself off to await the verdict of the young people.

A Real Phenomenon.

One of [illegible] negro preachers will school of negro [illegible] words that roll from their mouths melodiously and with [illegible] incomprehensibility to their congregation, and the most incomprehensible they are the greater is the effect on the average darky.

Preacher James had devoted an extra hour [illegible] to a study of Webster during the week, hunting for some particularly strong "soul flavorer," and his sermon the following Sunday [illegible] fruit of his labor. It was simply loaded to the muzzle with all twisting jawbreakers. One word-monster to have [illegible] was particularly the word "phenomenon," and he [illegible] down on it hard and often. Brer Johnson was present, [illegible] what did the word "phenomenon" mean? The old preacher had forgotten what it really did mean, so he said he would tell him the following Sunday, and then pass his definition:

"Now, Brer Johnson, if yo' see a bird a-settin' on a thistle an' a-singin' why, that 'ar ain't no phenomenon, an' if yo' see a cow eatin' grass that 'ar ain't no phenomenon; but, Brer Johnson, if yo' should see a cow settin' on a thistle a-singin' like a bird—why, then 'dar would be a phenomenon. An' now, Brer Johnson, your impertinent question has been explained."—New York Times.

THE LOST MINE MYTH.

Quebec Is Well Off in Tales of Fabulous Wealth Underground.

Every mountain range from Maine to Mexico has its mysterious lost mine fable, of which the Peglag and the Breyfogle in Nevada are perhaps the most famous, for these two are not limited to local liars, but are told by old prospectors and newspaper reporters from one end of the land to the other, wherever mining items interest. A company has recently been floated, claiming to have recaptured the stray Breyfogle.

Locally, in the Eastern Townships of Quebec, Orford, Stoke and other mountains have their little story, each of a man lost in the hills who picked up a rock to shy at an imaginary wolf, or grabbed a chunk of bedrock just as he was slipping over a precipice, or uncovered untold wealth under his campfire, the melted metal running in tiny rivulets through the ashes (although it would require several degrees more heat than a fire of sticks could produce to melt any of the precious metals, but that is trivial in view of the fact that traces of the fire were afterwards found) but, overtaken by night, got so confused, that, after having found himself, never again could he locate the spot. Or often the exposure and hardships of the night brought on fever and the man died, leaving only his blessing and the story to his family.

In Orford the find was copper, in Stoke gold or silver, in Prospect Hill "a nugget as big as the yolk of an egg," strange to say, parted in the middle, half remaining in the ledge and half in the piece broken off. The time and effort spent in the vain endeavor to locate these fairy finds would surprise you. And you might as well argue with a man who thinks a hazel twig has a mysterious affinity to water, when that water is several feet under ground, as to talk sense to one shrunk with the lost mine mania.

In Eardley, it is the "Lost Stone Mine," and the finder carved an Indian and an arrow on a birch tree, as many paces from a range post. If you doubt the story, [illegible] 25 or perhaps 250 if you look easy, a native will take you to that post. What better proof do you want of the truth of the tale?

And so round each little mountain range, you will find your old inhabitant with his tale of vanished treasure, which it will be just as well for you to accept, for if you deny it to use reason, pop will ask you are "up against it."

In one place, a vein of asbestos with five-inch fibre, has crawled into one crevice and pulled the crevice in after it. This was not figured on when the Amalgamated put out its claim to 70 per cent., of known supply, in Quebec.—The Canadian Mining Journal.

Handsome Postage Stamps.

The erection of the splendid new postoffice in Owen Sound has necessitated a radical change in street naming and a few days ago Judge Widdifield sanctioned a bylaw passed by the Town Council which abbreviates every name in the town's fifty miles of streets and substituting numbered numbers.

Postal Delivery, if adopted in Owen Sound, would require a different installation in the postoffice, and the Postoffice Department asked the council to comply with the regulations requiring name signs and house numbers. Many of the streets had two names, some three and others four in different sections. To meet the demand for a reasonable change, these must all be put under one name. Many of the street names had local significance and trouble was in sight unless a radical change was adopted.

The change makes all the streets running north and south, avenues, numbering east and west from the River Sydenham and the harbor which divides the town. Thus Poulett and Water streets, the main business thoroughfare becomes East Second avenue.

Will Finish B.C. Line.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. is preparing to complete the Esquimault and Nanaimo Railway to close the connection across Vancouver from Nanaimo on the eastern side to Alberni on the western shore. There are about 30 miles yet to finish. It is expected that everything will be ready for work to start early this month, and the contractors will be able to carry on operations all winter owing to the mild climate on the island, when frost and snow are almost unknown.

Mr. James Macdonell, the well-known Vancouver contractor who was in Montreal, recently stated that when the activity displayed on this line it would probably be completed for operation within a year. The road, Mr. Macdonell states, will run through the bush country on Vancouver Island, the route being very heavily timbered, so that from the very start there will be a big traffic to handle. Much of the southern part of the island, he stated, is also well adapted for general farming, and once the timber is cleared off it is expected that there will be a large influx of settlers.

Not that you are wrong,
My reasons to you can spare
Are very many.

Eating for Strength.

The greatest pleasure to be derived from eating is the pleasure one gets in the knowledge that his food is giving him greater strength and vitality.

Because of this fact there is a constant increase in the consumption of Quaker Oats; every time the strength making qualities of Quaker Oats have been tested by scientific investigation or by experiments in families it has been found to be a food without an equal.

It builds the muscles and brain without taxing the digestive organs; it costs so little anyone can afford it, and it is so carefully prepared and packed that it is absolutely pure and clean. A Quaker Oats eating family is always a healthy family. 33

INCREASED DUTY WANTED ON HOG PRODUCTS

From Farm and Dairy.

Petitions, for signature by farmers, are being circulated in a number of counties in Ontario, asking the Dominion Government to increase the duty on pork, imported from the United States, from two cents to four cents a pound. The United States duty is five cents. These petitions are being circulated with the approval of the Dominion Swine Breeders' Association, and Farm and Dairy is informed that they are being largely signed. Petition forms may be secured through Mr. D. C. Flatt, of Milgrove, the president of the Dominion Swine Breeders' Association.

The preamble to the petition reads as follows:

"In view of the enormous quantities of hog products imported into Canada, from the United States, during the last few years, and in constantly increasing quantities which, in most cases, is being slaughtered on the Canadian market at a time when there is no legal occasion for it, the only apparent reason being a glut in the United States market, thus enabling our Canadian packers and dealers to get supplies at a considerably reduced price, the effect of which they use to reduce the price to the producers here without, as experience shows, reducing the price to the consumer and, whereas Canada is capable of producing an abundance of pork products for both the home market as well as for export, and is anxious to be relieved of the great annoyance and loss of this periodical slump in the prices paid for hogs, therefore we humbly petition and strongly urge your honourable body to increase the tariff on pork from two cents to four cents, and we hereby request our representatives to both advocate and support such a measure at the approaching session of the House, believing that producer and consumer would be greatly benefitted by a more uniformly even, fair price, and as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray."

Kidney Suffering IN THE SPRING

Backaches and tired feelings tell of weak kidney action—Prompt relief by using DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

No organs of the body are so susceptible to the quickly changing temperature of spring as the kidneys. Sudden cold waves mean chilling of the surface of the body, closing of the pores of the skin and over crowding of the kidneys at a time when they are already overworked in an effort to free the system of the accumulated poisons of winter.

The tired draggy feelings you experience and the weakness and pains in the back tell of a poisoned system and defective kidneys.

There is no treatment for kidney disease which will afford you relief so quickly as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and none which will so certainly cure the most complicated forms of this disease.

There is a reason for this. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills awaken the action of the liver and bowels as well as the kidneys and thereby effect a thorough cleansing and regulating of the whole excretory system.

In this combined action Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are unique. There are no substitutes or imitations which possess this principle.

Mrs. F. O. Bacon, Baldwin's Mills, Que., writes: "I was very sick last spring. The doctors said I must go to the hospital for an operation but I didn't want to. My liver and kidneys did not act and I suffered terribly. I then began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and nothing else, and am now fully cured and doing my own work for a family of seven."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

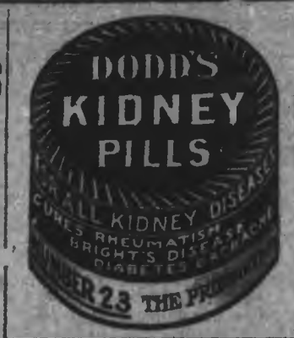
FRESH AIR IN SLEEPING QUARTERS

From Farm and Dairy.

Abundant fresh air is useless if one persists in living and sleeping in unventilated houses. Little ill-health is met with in summer compared with what is rampant in the early months of fall, and later, in the winter. We are inclined to reason that colds have been "caught" from sitting in a draft, or from exposure, while in the outdoor atmosphere. As a matter of fact, most colds are "caught" in over-heated, unventilated stuffy houses, such as we Canadians, as a whole, live in throughout the coldest season.

Few people would think of sleeping in a room in the summer time with closed windows. As a result they enjoy good health and colds and bronchial affections are a rarity. The approaching fall, with its accompanying cool nights, should be no excuse for closing these windows. Comfort should be sought by other means, such as additional covering. Fresh-air sleepers are not cranks. One needs only to experience the benefits of fresh-air during a winter season to be an advocate of it for evermore. No hardship will be suffered from the open window, if one becomes accustomed to it during the early fall and winter. Be a "fresh air crank" this winter, and you will be less likely to need a physician.

Menthol in the form of Davis' Menthol Salve is the best application for mosquito and insect bites and stings, old sores, etc. 25c a tin at Druggists.



PRESERVING EGGS

From Farm and Dairy.

Preserved eggs may be substituted for fresh ones in many cases with profit. They may be scrambled and used in omelets; also for baking various cakes which do not require beaten whites. As a rule, they are the equivalent of fresh eggs in any food where the yolk is broken; but only when specially preserved and when kept not too long are they suitable to serve fried.

The preserving material seals up the pores in the shell and thus prevents the entrance of bacteria and air, as well as evaporation and consequent shrinkage of the egg contents. The old method of greasing the shell to make the eggs keep better depended on this fact. Such eggs cannot be boiled, because the impervious shells do not permit the escape of the enclosed air, which expands when heated and bursts open the egg. By serving the commoner purposes the preserved egg economizes the fresh egg for which there is an ever-increasing demand for use as raw food in the treatment of certain diseases. The high prices for fresh eggs prevailing in the Southwest during the fall and winter months makes this an especially profitable locality for preserving eggs for family use.

When eggs are to be kept for a short time only one of the usual methods of packing is sufficient. For this purpose they are imbedded in some fine material such as dry bran, oats, sawdust or salt. Care must be taken that the packing material is perfectly dry and free from must. There is always danger of losing the eggs by the growth of mould on the inside of the shell, as the writer has frequently observed. A better way is said to be the use of egg shelves. These are arranged in a cool dry place and are provided with holes so that the eggs may be stood on end. Handled in this way, eggs are said to keep better than when packed. Preserving in some chemical solution is, however, a much safer method for general use.

Before recommending any formulas to the public the writer has given several of them a critical study to determine exactly what can be expected under certain conditions. The various lots of eggs were preserved in June when they could be purchased at about thirty cents a dozen, and were used in November when fresh eggs were selling at seventy cents. Thus they were carried through the excessive heat of June and July, and found to be usable in the fall.

There are two solutions commonly used for preserving eggs, each of which has its advantages and disadvantages.

LIMEWATER METHOD.

The commonest and oldest preservative is limewater. A few lumps of quicklime are slaked in a large vessel of water and after the excess of lime has settled out the clear liquid is poured over perfectly fresh eggs in a clean jar. A very small amount of the slaked lime may then be added to replace the lime which will be separated out by the action of the air. After a few days a thick crust will form on the surface, which should not be disturbed, for it prevents evaporation and excludes the air. Some add salt to the limewater and claim that it improves the quality of the eggs. Limewater preserved eggs will keep well and are serviceable for all purposes except to fry, the yolks not holding up well and the eggs being apt to become mussy. There is a great tendency for the white to become watery, but this does not render the egg unwholesome. They are just as serviceable for baking and for other purposes as fresh eggs, excepting that the whites cannot be beaten. The great advantage of this method is the ease with which lime may be obtained, as it is readily accessible in the most remote places.

WATER GLASS METHOD.

The other common preservative is water glass. This is diluted with from ten to twenty parts of water, but even greater dilutions will serve when the eggs are to be kept for a short time only. We have observed that the stronger the water solution the less apt the yolks are to break when fried. Water glass gives better results than lime water, but is difficult to obtain and quite expensive away from commercial centres. It should be given the preference wherever available, although very fair results can be obtained with lime water. One lot preserved in five per cent. water glass solution was still in very good condition the following March.

It is absolutely essential that eggs for preserving be perfectly fresh. They should be preserved within twenty-four or thirty-six hours after being laid. It is not safe to preserve eggs whose history is not known, such as those obtained from dealers. By following one of these formulas, a fall and winter supply of cheap eggs may be had which is fully as serviceable for most purposes as high priced fresh eggs, and which will not have that peculiar stale taste so characteristic of, shipped cold-storage eggs.—A. E. Vinson.

THE DINING ROOM FLOOR

From Farm and Dairy.

Alice York, Halton Co., Ont.

Having tried almost everything in the catalogue of carpets, oilcloth coverings, crumb cloths and plain varnished floors, we tried a floor of invalid stripe of hard wood, dark walnut alternated with stripe of white ash equal in width. It looked beautiful for a time, but showed every spot of grease, and in her efforts to remove said spots our girl resorted to doses of lye, which brought out various shades of color and patches most displeasing to the eye. Then, this truly artistic and lasting floor would not be washed in a slovenly manner with dirty or insufficient amount of water. And so it was that, after a long siege of sickness, on returning to my domain, I found the floor ruined as to looks, and resolved to return to paint. Still, wishing something prettier than a plain, painted floor, we adopted the following with gratifying results:

After removing all grease spots, dust, etc., we marked off a margin of fifteen inches across the ends of the room, and counted boards enough down the length of the room on each side to give us also fifteen inches. This was intended to give a handsome bordering in three colors.

We began at the bordered margin, marking a fifteen inch square in each of the four corners. For the bordering we chose for the main color a rich dark maroon, and gave the fifteen-inch margin its first coat. When dry, we cut a diamond-shaped piece of pasteboard, and marked out with a stencil, or sharp-pointed nail, a row of seven-inch diamond blocks around the entire room, leaving the large fifteen-inch square in the corner.

The diamond squares we painted drab, and marked a tiny circle with baking powder can, giving that a bright touch of ochre. In the corner squares we reversed the order, a large square of the drab, and centre of maroon. For the main body of the room we reserved a solid color of drab and gave it two extra coats, waiting for the first coat to dry before applying the second.

The floor looks as handsome as though coated with linoleum and as we used only common paint and did the work ourselves, the cost was trifling.

Then, as the middle of a dining-we like the idea of thus painting it in parts. One good bordering will outwear two centres and it is not so tiresome as having all the floor wet with paint at once, as we can pass around the room if we desire transit through, instead of going outside the house to use the front rooms. Any colors, of course, may be used, but we find drab for a centre satisfactory.

CONVENIENCES IN FARM HOMES

From Farm and Dairy.

It is no new thing to find barns and stables adequately supplied with water. It has become recognized as necessary to the best welfare of the stock, as well as from the labor-saving standpoint, to have water laid down conveniently where stock may have ready access to it. Elaborate systems are in use on many farms. Notwithstanding this comfort and convenience provided at the barn, many have been content to overlook the essential of a water supply in their houses.

Fortunately for our farm women, the idea that it pays to have water in the house, with its attendant conveniences—sink, hot water front to the range, bath room, (including lavatory, closet and bath tub) is gaining ground. Everywhere we find individual farmers waking up to the great necessity of these conveniences, that they have been content to do without for so long.

When horses, cattle and other stock are conveniently provided for as regards water, why should the farm house be overlooked? No department of the farm is more in need of a convenient water supply than is the home. The humblest workman in our largest cities invariably has his wife provided with all modern conveniences. That the farmer can have them, as well, is proved by the large number of farm homes already thus equipped. No class of people need these conveniences more than those who live on farms.

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

A NEWSBOY'S EXPERIENCE IN A LARGE CITY. Why can't a local Boy be benefitted proportionately ? This story is taken from the Saturday Post :

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

Ruston Acquitted.

Brampton, Oct. 8.—After exactly one hour's deliberation, the jury at 10 o'clock last night returned a verdict of "not guilty" of the charge against Frank Ruston of burning his house for the insurance. The charge of Justice MacMahon was favorable to the prisoner on nearly all points.

Ruston, in his own behalf, told the whole story of the fire, saying that when he was awakened the kitchen, parlor and hall were all on fire. He caught up his child, rolled her in quilts, and, with one blow from a chair, smashed the window. The room was thick with smoke. The child was partly stupified. He carried her to a cutter, some distance from the house, returned to the room and gathered up the remainder of the bedding, the feather tick and mattress, together with his clothing and the valise which contained his child's clothes. He then rushed to a closet off the room, took out a box of 10 inches square, which was full of heavy china, and put it out.

He said Dixon Rutherford was mistaken in saying that there was no cutter there, and that the child was seated on a mattress, and that he also was in error when he said Ruston told him he smashed in the cellar door and took china out that way.

Gas Trust Planned.

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 8.—Arrangements are under way for the formation of a gigantic natural gas trust to control the supply of natural gas in the western peninsula. The Volcanic Oil & Gas Co. still to be backed up by Standard Oil capital, has now got its mains all but completed to Windsor, Sarnia, Blenheim, and scores of intermediate places, as well as Chatham and Wallaceburg, and it is said contemplate purchasing all the distributing stations at these places.

In Chatham, the Chatham Gas Co., has received a bid of $110 a share for their gas and electric light plant, but are holding out for $115. Chatham Gas stock sold a few years ago at $95.

If the Volcanic company could succeed in buying up the distributing stations, they would control the supply right up to the homes and factories of the consumers.

Municipal Civil Elections.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Oct. 8.—The Chief Justice and Justice Fitzgerald delivered judgment in the election petition presented by L. P. Tayton, of this city, against E. E. Prowse, K.C., one of the members for Queen's County.

The Chief Justice dismissed the petition with costs and said: "We are of the opinion that the conduct of election was singularly free from violence of the law. The conduct of the respondent was entirely blameless."

Guilty of Manslaughter.

London, Oct. 8.—Guilty, with a recommendation to mercy, was the verdict of the jury in the case of Joseph Ward, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Alex. Warwick, last spring. Warwick fell or was shoved down the cellar at the Morkin House during a drunken brawl and fractured his skull.

Justice Latchford expressed his satisfaction at the verdict, and promised that the recommendation to mercy would carry weight.

PLANNED BIG RAID

Ottawa Police Are Hot on the Trail of the Remaining Three Members of a Quartette Who Started In to Clean Up Canadian Cities—Crooks Are Surprised, and a Revolver Duel Ensues.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The recent arrest of a suspected safe-blower, giving the name of Thomas Gorman, revealed to the Ottawa police the fact that a raid on Canadian cities had been planned by a gang of three American crooks, noted safe-crackers, who, on July 6, escaped from the Mount Clemens, Mich., prison. A reward of $1,500 is offered for their re-capture.

Three weeks ago, a letter addressed to a man named Graham, to be called for at Hull postoffice, was accidentally placed in the postal box of Dr. Graham of Hull, who, without looking at the address, opened and read it. It was found to be a communication from a woman in Toledo, congratulating the person addressed on his escape from prison and telling him to meet the other two members of the gang at Hull. The letter was turned over to the Ottawa police.

The local department at once wired Toledo, and in the meantime the Hull postoffice was watched. In a day or so a young man appeared and asked if a man had called for a letter addressed to him—Graham. He was shadowed and arrested by the Ottawa detectives. He gave the name of Thos. Gorman, and was remanded for a week on a charge of vagrancy.

In the meantime, Ottawa was straining every effort to stir up Toledo. The postmark on the letter was blurred, and only by hard work was it finally made out. It was declared to have been sent from a small Michigan town, and this gave the first clue. The Michigan authorities were wired to hustle, but neither Toledo nor Michigan got busy in time, and after two weeks Gorman was discharged from custody here.

He had only been gone two hours when Michigan authorities reached here. They followed him to Montreal, but missed him.

Yesterday morning a party started out from Hull to co-operate with Dominion Constables Marcou, Foster and Giroux in hunting down a quartette of burglars who dynamited a safe at Ellard's store and postoffice at Pickanock, Que., last Sunday night, and Wright, Que., postoffice on Monday night. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning the three Dominion constables came across four armed men hiding near a railway track at North Wakefield. They pounced on them and several shots were fired. They got one man, but all others got away, firing back at the officers several times.

The man arrested had on a new suit, had $100 in cash and a quantity of stamps, and proved to be German. He also had a complete set of appliances peculiar to the art of safe-blowing, including dynamite cans, fuses and a candle.

Boys after some Wright Village early yesterday morning saw three men in the woods, and it is thought these are the others wanted. The district is a wild one.

Will Ask Money For Navy.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The legislation to be submitted to the House next session providing for a Canadian navy will be introduced as "The Naval Defence Act." It will provide for twelve vessels of the cruiser and destroyer types, nine of which will be probably placed on the Atlantic and three on the Pacific coast. The total capital expenditure will exceed twenty million dollars, and the annual outlay will be something over three millions. Negotiations as to training ships and docks are still in progress.

Other legislation will include bills to amend the bank act, to amend the insurance act, to consolidate the immigration act, to ratify the French treaty, and it is hoped a bill for the reduction of cable rates.

Soldiers For Senators.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 8.—It is reported here from Helsingfors that the Governor-General of Finland contemplates forming a Senate from the Finns now in the Russian military service, to replace the Senators who last month notified him that they would not accept reappointment to office because the Russian Cabinet insisted that the Finnish Senate assign $4,000,000 to Finland's contribution for the defence of the empire. The Finns were willing to contribute only $2,000,000 annually.

The constitution requires that the Finnish Senate be composed of Finnish subjects, but Finns of all parties, flatly refuse to accept office, under the present conditions.

Betrothal Story Denied.

London, Oct. 8.—Direct contradiction is made by Truth yesterday to the persistent reports that King Manuel of Portugal is coming over here to be betrothed to Princess Alexandra of Fife.

"There is no foundation for the ridiculous report," says Truth, "that the betrothal is to be announced at a state banquet at Windsor Castle during His Majesty's visit. King Manuel and Princess Alexandra have never seen each other and there would be numerous other obstacles in the way of such a marriage, if it had ever been contemplated in any responsible quarter, which it has not been.

Dream Prevents Train Disaster.

Montreal, Oct. 8.—According to the story of one of the passengers, a dream of a boy prevented the Vancouver express, which arrived here yesterday morning six hours late, from meeting with disaster. The train was delayed by a burned bridge between Winnipeg and Brandon. The little son of the sectionman dreamed he saw the train wrecked, and the dream so impressed the father that he walked ten miles to the bridge and found it burned down by prairie fires. He flagged the train.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

There will be no decision as regards modifying the constitution of Queen's University, Kingston, until the convocation next April.

While playing about a rain barrel, Daniel, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Munro, of Winnipeg, fell in and was drowned on Wednesday night.

Out for a trial spin, Vancouver's new city police ambulance ran over and almost instantly killed F. Keiss, a wealthy citizen of Austin, Texas.

More than 750,000 prairie dogs have been killed by J. W. Holman, the officially recognized U. S. Government poisoner of the pests in the southwestern states, during the last eight months.

J. M. Barrie, the novelist and playwright, has entered action for divorce against his wife, who was Mary Ansell, an actress. They were married in 1894, and were always regarded as a happy couple.

After sending a note to his friend, Dr. H. Birdsell, T. F. Tetley, former chief magistrate of England, and for several years a wealthy broker of San Francisco, shot himself in his office. He feared insanity.

A dense fog that interrupted river navigation Wednesday night at Detroit and caused several street car collisions early yesterday, resulted in the death of an unidentified boy, who was run over by an automobile.

The old-fashioned Lord Mayor's show, one of the most picturesque functions to be witnessed in England, will be abandoned by the new Lord Mayor-elect of London, who proposes to have a military and naval display.

All the shops of Belgrade were closed yesterday and the public buildings of the city were draped in black to mark the first anniversary of the annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria-Hungary.

A heavy thunder storm visited Winnipeg early yesterday morning. Reports show that rain was more or less general all through the three prairie provinces. It was the first downpour for a month and will extinguish the bush and prairie fires.

Bank Rate is Raised.

London, Oct. 8.—The governors of the Bank of England yesterday raised the minimum discount rate from 2½ per cent. to 3 per cent. This is the first change since the first day of last April, when it was reduced from 3 per cent.

It was decided to raise the rate to 3 per cent. owing to the large inroads on the bank's reserve already made by exports to Egypt, which were necessary for the financing of the cotton crop, and the Argentine with dreadnoughts. The government were unable to offset these by fresh arrivals from the interior owing to the sustained demand from Russia, which absorbed available quantities week after week, preventing the bank from building up the reserve. A fresh element in the situation, however, undoubtedly helping the directors in their decision, is Wednesday's decline in New York exchange on London, the recent sharp rise in money and the calling of loans in New York, which will probably necessitate the withdrawal of gold for that quarter against finance paper, which has been placed here some time ago and the number of fresh bills still coming forward. The higher rate, although it was expected soon, was not generally looked for today.

Prisoners and Guard Disappear.

Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., Oct. 8.—Between 5 and 6 p.m. three prisoners, undergoing sentence in the mounted police barracks here, escaped from a nearby field, where they were working.

Grave fears are held for the safety of a guard in charge, he having disappeared, and while he may have deserted with the convicts, there is a possibility that he may have met with foul play.

Priest Master't Discuss Strike.

Montreal, Oct. 8.—L'Acton Sociale, the organ of the Roman Catholic Church in this province, announces that Mgr. Sbarretti, the apostolic delegate, has made a request on Father Fraser of Glace Bay, N.S., for a statement regarding his comments from the pulpit on the coal miners' strike, and has been forbidden to discuss the matter in his church in the future.

Chinese Pork Diseased.

London, Oct. 8.—Nine per cent. of the carcases of Chinese hogs recently imported into England, and thus far inspected by the sanitary committee of the city of London, have been found to be affected with tuberculosis.

The first shipment of 5,000 hogs was brought from China in a refrigerating ship, and sold well in the wholesale market. Although they were offered by the retail butchers at 25 per cent. below the prices charged for other imported hogs, they did not find favor, and the butchers were obliged to raise the price of American and European pork to dispose of the Chinese stock. The steamship company, which endeavored to introduce the Chinese pork, was of the opinion that it would prove, owing to its cheapness, a strong competitor with frozen beef and mutton.

Pope Needs a Rest.

Rome, Oct. 8.—Dr. Petacchi is convinced that the Pope's illness will continue intermittently unless a thorough cure is effected by complete rest, but his efforts to enforce his opinion have thus far been unavailing. Even in the present case, when the symptoms of gout were unmistakeable, the pontiff, in spite of the pain in one of his feet, insisted on leaving his bed and consented to suspend the giving of audiences only on condition that the bishops and prelates should be admitted to his bedroom.

Contrary to his doctor's orders he walks with the aid of a stick and drives in the gardens.

Thirty-Two Bodies Recovered.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 8.—The last of the bodies that were entombed in No. 2 mine at Extension were brought out yesterday morning, when the corpses of Herman Peterson and Mike Deucolovitch were added to the 30 others previously brought out.

Official investigation into the causes of the disaster by Inspectors Shepperd and Dick began yesterday morning. The consensus of opinion is that a blown out shot in 22 stall caused the explosion of coal dust.

Ten Years For Burglary.

Guelph, Oct. 8.—William Henderick of Detroit, caught burglarizing J. W. Lyon's residence here a week ago, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Chadwick to ten years at Kingston.

The sentence was on two charges, one of burglary and the other for carrying burglars tools on a third charge of stealing rings from Mrs. Sutherland of Harwich, sentence was suspended.

Non-Union Viaduct Dynamited.

Buffalo, N.Y., Oct. 8.—A large viaduct over the New York Central tracks, near the corner of Elk and Michigan streets, was wrecked by dynamite at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Hundreds of windows within a radius of a block being shattered. The viaduct has been constructed by the S. J. McCain Co. of Mercer, Pa., on the open shop plan.

Farmer Breaks Neck.

Thamesford, Oct. 8.—A tragedy occurred yesterday morning. Bartholomew Presley, aged 74, of Kintore, was plowing with the lines buckled around his waist. The horse got out of the furrow and Mr. Presley was pulled over the plow handles. He fell on his head, breaking his neck.

Ages in Japan.

The Japanese method of counting age appears most peculiar to English ideas. No matter what time in the year the Japanese child is born, whether in May, the middle of the summer or late in December, it is always said to be one year old on the 1st day of January next following.

Favourite shapes in Brim Hats, Velvet and Beaver Turbans, harmonizing so well with Fall Suits.

Ladies' and Misses' Ready-to Wear Hats, all moderately priced.

OUR EXHIBIT of Pianos and Organs at the Fair and at our Show Rooms attracted great attention and admiration for their beauty of design, perfect action and purity of tone.

ONE MUSICIAN of the Province of the best colleges of music in Canada remarked that "The Newcombe Piano is on finest tone Pianos I ever heard.

OTHERS admired the tone of the Evans Bros.' Piano.

AND SOME others preferred the Sherlock-Manning—each and every one of which possesses perfect tones but of different qualities.

WE WOULD be pleased to discuss tone quality and Piano construction with you. There are reasons for different qualities and there are good, bad and hostilite Pianos. Let us tell you about them before you buy.

PITTSBURG TAKES FIRST GAME FROM HUGHEY JENNINGS' TIGERS

Immense Crowd Witnessed Curtain Raiser in World's Championship Series—Hard Fought Battle.

FINAL SCORE 4 TO 1

Examiner Special Wire.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 8.—[illegible] special to be a record-breaker for a world's championship baseball game, began to gather at Forbes' Field today to witness the opening contest of the big series between Detroit, three times champions of the American League, and Pittsburg, winner of the National League pennant. Those who were not lucky enough nor rich enough to secure reserved seats, besieged the gates at an early hour. The gates were opened several hours before the portals were thrown open. A tremendous rush for seats followed, and in a short time all but the reserved seats and boxes were filled to overflowing. Many thousands of people will have to be content to remain outside the gates and gather what they can of the progress of the great diamond battle. Schenley Hill, a piece of rising ground to east and south of the field is already packed with a seething mass of humanity, which was straining every nerve to get a glimpse at what was going on behind the fences. Here and there, in the exhuberance of wild enthusiasm cast to the winds the yellow and black banner of Detroit sentiment, and then a Detroit cheer would rise, only to be immediately drowned by colossal outbursts of local partizans.

Close to three Detroit rooters, headed by Mayor Breitmeyer, arrived last night [illegible] members of the party, all expressed the opinion that the Tigers would win.

Tremendous crowds came pouring into the city from all parts, hopeful to the last for a victory for the home team. Trains on the various roads were literally inundated by the thousands of persons who sought for some means of transporting to the ball park, and for any kind of a ticket that would get them through the gates once they arrived there. Secretary Locke of the Pittsburg Club, estimates the number of disappointed fans at 50,000.

At Forbes Field was a police force numbering 300, and fairly good order was maintained, despite a countless onslaught on the part of the crowd. The weather this morning was very disappointing. A heavy fog hung over the city, necessitating the use of the electric lights on the streets till after 9 o'clock, but shortly after that the sun forced its way through and the day is an ideal one for the game.

Following is the lineup of the two teams:

Detroit.
D. Jones—Left field.
Bush—Short stop.
Cobb—Right field.
Crawford—Centre field.
Moriarty—Third base.
Delehanty—Second base.
T. Jones—1st base.
Schmidt—Catcher.
Mullin—Pitcher.

Pittsburg.
Byrne—Third base.
Leach—Centre field.
Clarke—Left field.
Wagner—Short stop.
Miller—Second base.
Abstein—First base.
Wilson—Right field.
Gibson—Catcher.
Adams—Pitcher.
Umpires — O'Loughlin and John[illegible]

The Play

Detroit opened in their half of the first innings but drew nothing but [illegible] during the rest of the game.

Pittsburg failed to score until the fourth, when they tied up matters and in the last two innings practically cinched the game. The score will long be remembered. The people of the Pittsburg stockholders are dead ruffy and wild enthusiasm prevailed when Wagner [illegible] all tied the load. The score was as follows:

CAPITAL OF AUSTRALIA

Australia, Oct. 8.—The New South Wales Parliament Assembly has agreed to offer to the Commonwealth of Australia for the purpose of forming the federal capital there, 900 square miles of the Yass-Canberra district, with the control of the rivers for water supply over an additional 100 square miles.

ENGLISHMAN'S DEATH IN PARIS

Paris, Oct. 8.—The body of a man found in the Seine was identified as that of an English shipowner, Mr. Walter Muirhead, forty years of age, and formerly a resident of Liverpool.

MRS. TAFT AND SENORITA DIAZ, WHO WILL MEET, LOOK ALIKE

AT THE LEFT, MRS. WM. H. TAFT. SENORITA DIAZ, WHOM SHE WILL MEET IN MEXICO, AT THE RIGHT.

El Paso, Oct. 8.—When Mrs. Wm. H. Taft meets Senorita Dolores de Diaz at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, across the river from El Paso, on Oct. 16, it will be the highest event in American history until the wives of the rulers of United States and Mexico have met. [illegible] says the late Mrs. Wm. McKinley participated in such a meeting.

Study these pictures of the first ladies of United States and Mexico. Do you see the resemblance between them? Mrs. Taft is a blonde and Senorita Diaz is a brunet, but outside that they look enough alike to be twin sisters.

Does the power to look away over others produce a keen trait in character? Hardly, women with ambition for Mrs. Taft to act as interpreter at the meeting is imperious.

"THE PRINCESS," PETERBOROUGH'S LATEST AMUSEMENT PLACE

One of the Prettiest, Neatest and Safest Moving Picture Houses in Canada, Will be Thrown Open to the Public for the First Time To-morrow—A Credit to the City.

With the opening of the Princess Theatorium to-morrow afternoon one of the [illegible] and best conducted moving picture houses in Canada's enterprising city for business. Mr. Stanley Coon, the proprietor of Peterborough's latest amusement place has spared no expense in the construction of the "Princess" and the patrons will be delighted with the appearance of the theatorium and arrangements that have been made for their comfort. The Princess opens to-morrow at two o'clock, with a fine opening bill.

The exterior of the "front" to use the current expression, is a worthy indication of the nature of the theatorium. A lofty, gracefully curved arch of white embla[illegible] with scroll work and bearing the name of the house forms the outside of the front while inside the arch the walls are of white tile with purple decorative strips and set with mirrors ornamented in gold borders. The floor is of marble and the arched ceiling of stucco delicately tinted. Myriads of bright lights are set into the ceiling and along the front the effect at night will be wholly charming. The ticket office is constructed of tile work at the bottom with the upper part of white glass and carved with a neat cornice. The entrance door is at one side of the office and the exit at the left.

Inside there is [illegible] accommodation for one hundred and fifty people. It would have been possible to arrange for more but Mr. Coon did not wish to sacrifice the comfort of his patrons in order to accommodate large crowds and has arranged his chairs in order to afford the maximum of room. The seats are comfortable and handsome.

The interior walls are prettily papered in shade of Modwick and run along the bottom, while the centre portion is panelled in art shades of [illegible] green and tan, the design being prominent in the pattern. Along the top is a flowered frieze of rose and white. The interior decorations is at once beautiful and simple. The canons of good taste have been carefully observed and the appearance of the interior cannot fail to please with the first glance.

The Princess is equipped with one of the best and safest [illegible] shown in Canada, and the operator is a man of [illegible] experience, who has had charge of [illegible] in Toronto and elsewhere, so that it would be impossible for fire to make its way outside of the box.

A latest model of the "[illegible]" type of Edison Projecting Kinetoscope has been installed. This machine is the last word in moving picture making and shows pictures without the slightest resemblance of a flicker. Clear, like like, steady, with no strain on the eyes, the pictures are at once a delight and a wonder. Mr. Coon has made arrangements with the Kleine Optical Company for a complete film service and a feature will be made of the "Filmtrash" and "Selig" films admitted to be among the finest manufactured anywhere.

Knowing that there is nothing that the public enjoy more than illustrated song singing, Mr. Coon has devoted much time and expense in endeavoring to obtain the best singer of this kind of songs that was to be found and he believes that he has done so in the person of Miss Ethel Westlock of Toronto, a charming contralto with a really beautiful voice, who will have a warm spot in the hearts of Peterborough audiences from her first appearance here. She will be assisted by Miss Bibby, a most capable pianist formerly at this city but more recently at Barrie.

To Mr. Wm. Higgerson, the local contractor, the Princess owes much. A pleasing word of praise is due Mr. Higgerson has in a short time worked wonders in the building of the new theatorium and his good work will be followed by thousands when they see what he has accomplished. The painting and decorating was done by Mr. Watson of Peterborough, while the electrical work was effectively carried out by Alexander & Miller.

Mr. Coon has arranged a splendid bill for the opening to-morrow. The programme will consist of the "Fire Fighters," "The Lodge" [illegible] "Filmtrash" feature film. Miss Westlock will sing one of the latest New York song hits, "Hello, Angel Face."

The success of the Princess seems to be assured and its opening will no doubt be hailed with delight by local people. Mr. Coon is to be congratulated in providing Peterborough with such a pretty and comfortable amusement place.

A POPULAR SUMMER SPOT

Long Lake, on the shore of which is situated Miss M. Kennedy's popular summer resort, "The Lodge" cannot be rivalled by any lake in the county for picturesque scenery. The shores are magnificent. On a full length, of 14 miles, there is not one barren looking spot. Every little point or bay, is a study for an artist. But this is not saying all the points or bays are small. They are quite the contrary. Bays that hold islands one half to two or three acres in extent, can boast of considerable space. The beauties of the lake are not easily forgotten by those once seeing it. The bass fishing is also the best in this part of the country.—Lakefield News.

LIQUOR IN HAVELOCK

William Anderson Will be Heard on Monday on Two Charges of Breaking the License Act—The Inspector Prefers Charge

TWO BOTTLES FOUND

Magistrate Edmison will go to Havelock on Monday to hear a case which is alleged to be a breach of the Liquor License Act. Elias Williams, license inspector for East Peterborough, is said to have had reasons for believing that contraband wet goods were being brought into the Railway Town, and more than one thirsty was refreshed by the coveted "stuff," which could not otherwise be secured in the village. He searched the buggy of one William Anderson, while it was in a public yard, and from all reports found two large flasks which he quietly took into his own possession. There are two charges preferred against Mr. Anderson. In one he will be asked to explain the presence of the bottles, and in the other he is charged with illegally having the liquor for sale.

Earthquake Shocks In Wales To-day

Report Says Large District Was Wrecked and Residents Alarmed—Refuse to Return to Homes

Special to The Examiner.

London, Oct. 8.—[illegible] shocks to-day wrecked a large district in Wales, causing widespread consternation. Although the damage is local, residents throughout the affected region have taken to the open in fright and refuse to return to their homes. Rayney Valley, New Tredegar and Hargood were most affected, and there the shocks are reported to have lasted several seconds.

"BACHELOR" HAS FINE SCENERY

Arrived From Hamilton This Morning—Goes to Montreal Next Week.

Charles Cherry and [illegible] who present "The Bachelor" at the Grand tonight, arrived in the city this morning from Hamilton on the C.P.R. They have a [illegible] of new scenery which [illegible] pretty settings. The company is a strong one and as Mr. Cherry is included among the list of Shubert stars there should be a large crowd out to see him in the Fitch comedy that is a sequel to "Girls" which proved such a big success. The fact that this company appeared in Maxine Elliotts new theatre is in itself a criterion of its worth and the New York Review in a recent notice speaks highly of Mr. Cherry and the supporting company. The play is a delightful one and is clean and bright in every particular.

EXAMINER WILL HAVE BULLETINS

Results of To-morrow's Big Games Will be Received in Front of This Office

To-morrow will be a big day in sporting circles, and the Examiner has arranged for a special telegraphic service, by which the results of the various games will be bulletined in front of this office, practically as soon as the games are completed. The Pittsburg-Detroit ball game in the world's championship series; the Shamrock-Montreal lacrosse game for the N. L. A. championship; the [illegible] O. R. U. Rugby games are all down in the list. It is a big event and the hundreds that are interested in these games will find the results bulletined towards evening. Bets, big and large, and at least [illegible] "the result" have been laid among every bunch of pals on the game in Pittsburg and interest is quite general.

MEETING ON OCT. 14TH

Canadian Club to Meet for Reorganization Next Thursday.

A meeting of the Canadian Club has been called by the Secretary, Mr. E. L. Goodwill, for Thursday evening, October 14th, in the City Council Chamber, at 8 o'clock. The meeting is called for the purpose of reorganization for the winter's work, and for the election of officers.

SHE WILLED IT—SO THIS PICTURE DREW MAN 20,000 MILES TO HER

MISS [illegible] CANOR WRIGHTFORTH IN THE PICTURE THAT DID IT.

Melbourne, Oct. 8.—[illegible]'s a little fairy tale episode as though one of our short story writers had taken an overdose of Ceylon tobacco. Mix it right, if you had read it in the fiction department of the paper you'd probably say, "Bosh!"

But the story is true. That's the strangest part of it—it's true.

Dempsey Wrightforth is a beautiful young Australian girl living near Melbourne. She got deeply interested in hypnotism, mesmerism, and other occult sciences.

Several months ago she saw here her first picture taken, when one idea struck her.

"I wonder if I could so will myself into this picture," she mused, "that people who saw it would know what I'm thinking.

"I wonder if I could make this picture tell somebody—the right somebody—wherever he is whoever he is—to come to me."

It was a daring experiment for anyone who believed in the power of [illegible] was more than half in fun. However, she tried the experiment.

That was all for a while. Then she heard from a woman friend in London—she gave none of the pictures to read—that a prominent Londoner had seen the picture in the house of her friend; that he had gazed at it a long time, drinking it in.

And now that man from London is on the ocean making the long trip from England to Englands farthermost colony. He is going to hunt up the girl whose picture he saw. He is answering the call of the occult.

You may credit this to some hypnotic influences if you wish. You may call this mere chance—that a man, susceptible, saw the picture of a pretty girl, and decided that she measured up to his ideas, and wanted her—that there was nothing mysterious about it at all—that is farther than the general mystery of people's liking people.

But these are the facts. You can make your own decision.

PROVINCES WANT RIGHT TO ADMINISTER SCHOOL FUNDS

Examiner Special

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 8.—The Governments of the three western provinces have decided to make a united appeal to Ottawa authorities for right to administer their own school land and school funds. This interesting announcement was made by Hon. G. H. Cockeril, Minister of Education of Manitoba, who returned, last night from Regina, where he was in conference with Premier [illegible] of Alberta, and Hon. J. A. Calder, Minister of Education for Saskatchewan. The whole subject was discussed thoroughly and the three cabinet ministers resolved to urge their respective governments in securing legislation towards the [illegible] end.

The second annual show promises to be a great success.

DANISH TOUR AIDS QUEEN ALEXANDRA

Health Benefitted by Yorkshire Pleasures and Recovery, Fo[illegible] to Highlands.

London, Oct. 8.—There is authority for stating that the Queen's health has greatly benefitted by [illegible] Norway and Denmark and she has [illegible] pains from which she had suffered for some months previously have almost entirely disappeared.

This distressful malady was at its worst when the Queen was visiting Manchester in company with the King in the early part of December and there was some fear then that the Majesty might be compelled to abandon her share in the proceedings and return to London. The Queen has suffered from attacks of this description, for some years, but gradually they have developed in severity.

The day, bracing air [illegible] the Highlands, followed by the voyage to Christiana, has worked wonders, and her Majesty's health is stated to be now better than has been the case for some time.

The Queen may visit the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz before the returns to this country, but at any rate she is expected home for at least another [illegible] then she will go to England [illegible] proceed directly to Sandringham where she will pass the whole of her time until Christmas, save for the week that the court is at Windsor for the reception of King Manuel of Portugal.

SIXTH WIFE COMPLAINS

London, Oct. 8.—In a case at Lambeth police court on Wednesday, in which George Richard Mathew, of Overton Road, Brixton, was summoned by his wife, Catherine, who alleged that he assaulted her, it was said she was his sixth wife. The parties were quite recently married. The man was bound over.

COUNCIL AND C.P.R.

Proposed Line Through Part of the City Will be Discussed—Plans Have Been Received Showing the Streets That it Purposes Closing.

THE NEW GRAIN ROUTE

A special meeting of the council will be held next Tuesday night for the purpose of taking up the C.P.R. proposition re the new grain route from Georgian Bay. The company has submitted a proposition to the council and have sent copies of maps showing the proposed route through the city and also marking the water front which the company desires to secure as a yard for sheds and for handling the local freight traffic.

The council at the suggestion of Mayor Bush thought it advisable to write Mr. Leonard of the C.P.R., and notify him of the special meeting on Tuesday night and to ask him to have a representative at the meeting to go into the matter with the council.

It was also proposed to have representatives of the Board of Trade and some of the leading citizens and manufacturers present.

The proposed line enters the city from the north west, crossing Smith. It goes south within the boundary until it crosses the Monaghan road at Homewood Avenue. It keeps just outside the boundary line, cutting through the Bradburn and Chamberlain properties, continuing on south, passing in front of Mr. H. Waddell's residence and then turning a little more to the west it swoops around through what is known as the flats and taking a wide detour cross Brown street near the boundary and enters city property turning toward the main line which it forms a junction with east of Farnell street.

There are a number of other changes shown on the map which will probably be discussed at the meeting and those citizens who are interested should be present at this meeting of the Council.

He was in the Provincial House, but owing to his ill-temper and disagreeable nature the authorities there could do nothing with him. He has been sleeping in a shed.

NEW BANDSMAN FOR SALVATION ARMY

Bandsman Perry, late of Cleveland and formerly of the Temple Band, Toronto has arrived in the city and will be soon in the ranks of the Salvation Army. He is a solo cornetist of splendid ability and should be a welcome addition to the Silver Band which is now in good condition and is playing probably better than ever. Bandmaster Comes with [illegible] plans is going to Toronto over Thanksgiving Day and will no doubt give a good account of themselves.

SPLENDID PENMANSHIP

PUBLIC ABATTOIRS

As a man's first duty is to his home and family so is the State's first duty to it citizens. The Dominion Government very properly protects, by stringent system of inspection, the foreign purchasers of Canadian manufactured meats. Government inspectors are stationed at all our abattoirs where meats for export are slaughtered and prepared. The duty of these inspectors is to carefully examine before and after killing and if the meat is wholesome to stamp it "Canada Approved" or to condemn if the meat is unfit for human food. That no unnecessary haste was employed in beginning this system of inspection is shown by the report of Dr. Rutherford, veterinary director-general, for last year when 9,308 carcasses, 280,581 portions of animals and 383,121 pounds of meat were conodemned as unfit for human use. If such conditions are found where it is the aim to purchase only the best stock with the knowledge that it must submit to rigid inspection; if, after so much precaution choice meats intended for export are found defective, if so much pains is taken to protect the foreign consumer of Canadian meats, how important is it to take steps to protect the Canadian consumers of Canadian meats now slaughtered and prepared under no supervision and with no safeguards as to their wholesomeness and freedom from deadly diseases like tuberculosis.

A demand for similar rigid inspection of meats intended to be used in out cities, towns and villages may be regarded as a reflection upon the honour and honesty of our butchers. Not at all in a general sense, unless doubt is justified. As a class they are honest as any other class in the community, but when we see occasional honest farmers who are not above skimming their milk before delivery, when we meet fruit growers who pack the withered, defective and worm-bored apples in the bottom or middle of the barrel, we need not be surprised to find a possible butcher who would not be any too particular about the use of meat not quite up to the mark. Besides there are forms of disease, which none but expert inspection can reveal, so that the most honest butcher may in default of inspection be the innocent cause of placing upon the market dangerously unwholesome meat.

The remedy is the provision of a municipal abattoir, a central place where all meats intended for sale should be slaughtered under proper inspection. It is urged that the adoption of such a measure means dearer meat for the working man. While it is not proven that the municipal abattoir system will increase the price of meats, would any working man or any other man care to eat unwholesome or diseased meat, even if he got it for nothing? The point is here; the government in the interest of the wholesale meat manufacturers and in the interest of foreigners provides inspection for export meats; and it is far more important that the quality of meat used by our own citizens should be in the class of Caesar's wife.

If our city authorities want a new and vitally important outlet for their energy and enterprise they can very profitably find it in consideration of a municipal abbatoir. But for the present generation to enjoy its benefits, much more prompt and definite action than has been taken in regard to an isolation hospital will need to be taken. Sound meats, pure goods the protection of the public health are far more important than public libraries or new factories, important and indispensable as these are.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Is this Indian Summer?

The new Canadian Navy should, the Ottawa Free Press demands, be Canadian-made and Canadian-manned.

Scientists say the North Pole wobbles. Is this an imitation of the motion of our City Fathers in regard to the Isolation Hospital?

Canada is to spend twenty millions in building a navy, the only satisfactory way to spend this money is to do the ship building in Canada.

The C.P.R. spells its triumphs of management in millions, the new issue of shares will increase the total paid up common stock to 180 millions of dollars. A great country has made possible a great railway—and by hard headed good business methods.

There would be no need of dispute as to the ownership of the Pole if the C.P.R.'s acquisitive ambition in reference to the entry into the city of its Georgian Bay and Seaboard Grain line is realised. Possession of the earth would involve possession of the Pole.

The suggestion that the City Council of Toronto should as a lasting monument to Goldwin Smith, place the Associated Charities upon a permanent financial basis, appeals to both reason and benevolence. Money contributed and spent in this way would be more in keeping with the practically philanthropic impulses of the Canadian life of the Sage of the Grange—better than brass tablet or marble shaft.

THE FISHERIES DISPUTE.

(London Advertiser.)

The reference of the Newfoundland fisheries dispute to an international tribunal is a triumph for the peace movement which is enveloping the world.

The dispute arises out of the Convention of London entered into in 1818 between Great Britain and the United States, by which the inhavitants of the latter country were given the liberty to take fish of every kind from the coast of Labrador and part of the southern coast of Newfoundland, outside the three-mile limit; also the right to dry and cure fish in the unsettled bays, harbours, and creeks of the southern part of Newfoundland. It is claimed by Newfoundland that American fishermen have exceeded their privileges, to the injury of the inland fisheries. The United States contends that its treaty rights have been seriously infringed by the local regulations of the Newfoundland Government. The latter has forbidden the employment of Newfoundlanders by American fishermen, and has imposed upon them harbour dues and other requirements. Whether such regulations are intra vires of the Newfoundland Legislature, in view of the treaty sanctioned by the imperial authorities, is a constitutional question to be decided.

The fisheries dispute has been a burning one in the island colony for many years. It is to the credit of the islanders that they have been sufficiently tractable to consent to a reference to a court arbitration. Canadians hope they will get a square deal, and that the result will be to strengthen international confidence in the principle of arbitration and the machinery provided by the Hague conferences.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

(Brantford Expositor.)

A parliament may last seven years in Great Britain, but the Boston Transcript recalls that the longest on record lasted six years and one month. "The dissolution of Parliament in Britain" the Transcript says "depends upon many causes, including the temperament of a prime minister. Parliaments are chosen to last for seven years unless sooner dissolved. This septennial system was established in 1716, but in our time no Parliament has lived out its legal existence. Political conditions have usually been such that a prime minister has thought that he could either do better by going to the country or could not do worse.

"There was one Parliament of the Victorian reign which was dissolved within less than six months of its first assembling. That was the eleventh Parliament, which met on the 15th of January, 1874, and on the 24th of June was dissolved, having a duration of five months and fourteen days. The two Conservative Parliaments, so called, which followed the land-slide for that party in 1874, each had more than five years of life, and it is significant of the need prime ministers feel to have majorities reflecting unquestioned popular approval, that when Mr. Balfour, in the concluding weeks of 1905, decided to have a general election, he still had a majority of sixty-nine in the House. The tendency of the political events had, however been running strongly against him, and his decision was in accordance with precedents.

"These facts are worth bearing in mind at the present time, when the impression is so general in British political circles that it amounts to a conviction, that before this year ends the voters of Great Britain will be summoned to the polls to choose a new House of Commons. The ministry to-day has a majority in the House that is almost unprecedented, and yet to judge from appearances it is anxious that its programme of social reform should be submitted to the people. Possibly this desire is inspired by anticipation of rejection of the budget by the Lords, possibly by the optimistic belief that the voters will give such a verdict as will relegate the House of Lords to a position similar to that of foreign senates that exist simply to ratify the findings of the popular branch.

"The campaign, whatever may be the motives that precipitated it, will be one of the most interesting in the history of Great Britain. It seems to be conceded that a landslide majority only would answer the questions propounded to the voters. If either party should come in with a lead of only a score or more in the Commons the balance of power would fall to the Irish Nationalists."

RUGBY TEAM TO HOLD AN IMPORTANT PRACTICE TO-MORROW

There will be a full practice of the Peterborough Rugby Club at Riverside Park to-morrow afternoon, at which every member of the team is expected to be out as there is only a week left to get into shape for the opening game with Parkdale Canoe Club here a week from Saturday. The evening practices this week have only been fairly well attended and the boys must get out en masse or the team may go on if they expect to pull down a victory. Every man must be out to-morrow, and at the practices next week. Lights have been put in at the park all week and yet the turnouts have not been large.

The Collegiate Institute Rugby team will go to Port Hope to-morrow to play the return game with the T. C. I. team. The local youngsters are reasonably confident of a victory although they realize that they will have a harder task than they had last week.

EXCITEMENT REIGNS HIGH IN PITTSBURG OVER BIG GAME

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 8.—Brimful of confidence and ready for play in the world's championship series to start, the Detroit Tigers, three times winners of the American League pennant, and as many times contenders for the world's championship, arrived in Pittsburg early yesterday. Members of the National Baseball Commission arrived with the Pirates about noon. All the big bulletin boards announcing prominently in the corridors that Saturday and Sunday are the days on which baseball begins the season of sporting history.

Every one has the silliest rule for picking the winner, even young boys are picking the Pirates to win. Fifty thousand rooters are already said to be in each of the first two games here, and with the big reserved seat sections that are certain to be filled a few minutes after the gates are opened it is estimated that at least 35,000 persons will witness each game here. Out-of-town fans are arriving to-day, and upwards thousands of dollars have been wired ahead to be placed either on the Tigers or Pirates. Hope was turned loose to-day. One bet of $2000 to $1,000 on the Pittsburg which was registered last night when a well-known broker placed $10,000 at 2 to 1 and 3 to 2. There seems to be confidence of Pittsburg victory, and every Detroit offering is accepted. Few bets are now being made at even money, the Detroit backers getting odds of from 9 to 5 to 8 to 5.

The new seats at Forbes' Field were completed late yesterday, and the grounds will be inspected to-day by the National Commission. It is certain that there will be no objection from this body to the playing grounds secured by the action of the parties. The Commission ruled that the field should be clear on the right and left field foul lines for a distance of 300 feet, and in centre 376 feet. The playing area at Forbes' Field will be much larger than that requires, as the field is clear for a distance of over 300 feet from all foul lines. Arrangements for police protection and handling the enormous crowds at the park have been completed, although Chief McQuaid is now figuring on whether it will be necessary to have a squad patrol the "all-nighters" that are expected at the bleacher gates to-night, hoping to be the first in line for tickets before the game to-morrow.

One enthusiast fan placed a cot just outside the gate Tuesday night, and has not left the spot since.

Probably never before have two teams met where individual play as well as the team play will be watched and speculated on as closely as in the coming series. Bets have been posted as to whether or not Wagner will outbat Cobb, but the latest is whether or not Owens Bush, Jennings' young and fast shortstop, will outshine Wagner in the field.

Pittsburg fans cannot imagine a greater man in the field than Honus but the whiters are already spreading the fame of Bush as a fielder.

Both Managers Jennings and Clarke put their men through light practice this morning and both expressed confidence in being returned the winner of the big series. Neither manager is experiencing any trouble in having his stars out of condition, and will play their strongest line-up. The choice of pitchers has narrowed down to two men by both managers.

STRATHCONAS VS. THE OLD BOYS

The last baseball game of the season will be played at Riverside Park to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, when a team composed of former members of the Peterborough Baseball Clubs will meet the Strathconas. Among those who will figure on the "Old Boys" nine are W. Purcell, Ban McCabe, W. Ekery, Dave Edwards and Chris. Gephardt.

PROSPECTS OF TORONTO'S TEAMS IN RUGBY FIXTURES TO-MORROW

With two senior games of Rugby Saturday in the rival leagues, the Toronto Rugby-loving public will be divided.

At Diamond Park the O. R. F. U. senior series opens with a game between Parkdale Canoe Club and the Toronto Amateur Athletic Club, and at Rosedale Argonauts and Montreal clash in a senior Inter-Provincial game.

Both games at this distance look like tidy struggles, and a coin flip is as good a method as any of picking the winner.

Well Matched Teams.

Parkdale has most of last year's smart junior team, Inter-Provincial champions, and T. A. A. C. has the best bunch they ever had to choose from. Both clubs have a nice following, and the game should be a good one.

Up at Rosedale Torontonians will have a grand chance to get a line on the new Argo outfit. Enthusiastic Argos say that this year's team will shake 'em all up, from the invincible Tigers to the formidable Ottawas. To convince Toronto the Carsmen must wallop Montreal about 25-5.

Argos Look Fair.

With Warren Coryell at quarter, Norcross and Corkery with Mert Kent on the half line, an improved Loyack at full back, and a wing line like a stone wall in centre and fast on the ends, Argos surely have a grand chance on paper. They work smoothly in signal practices, but their signal practices are not games, and players who are strange to each other, sometimes forget to depend on each other when the luck is rolling against them, and what should be a close defeat, becomes a rout. Anyway, Argos have a mighty wing line, and that back division, if it ever gets away with something to give it confidence, may surprise the town.

Tigers' Good Team.

Ballard, at quarter, was a whole host last year, but "Schoolmaster" Simpson has plenty of Rugby tricks in his think-tank, and young Awrey the new quarter-back, is a wonder. He is a far better line plunger than Ballard and is faster on his feet. The Hamilton players are stuck on him, and as he's only a kid they will protect him with their lives at Ottawa. Turner, at outside wing, is the only man who seems at all weak on the Tiger team, and those who know Turner say he will be there in the game. —Toronto Star.

JILTED IN 1869 ACCEPTED IN 1909

Remained a Bachelor But Woman Had Ventured Into Matrimonial Field.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Isabella Hatt, widow, of Cleveland, became the bride in that city of Alexander Gardner, of Chicago, who is prominent in international Masonic circles and who had courted her forty years ago.

Mr. Gardner was in 1869 a railroad engineer. Pretty Isabella, then a society belle of Buffalo, was besieged by many suitors. Her choice evidently lay between George Hatt and Gardner.

Hatt was a wealthy college man, considered the "catch." The brilliancy of the collegian won over the engineer and the hopes of Gardner's life were shattered.

Thinking to forget the girl who spurned him Gardner became engaged to her sister. The romance ended when the latter jilted him and married an English banker.

During the years which followed Gardner kept track of the girl who had wedded his rival. Little did she know that Gardner was watching her life, silently sharing her joys and sorrows.

Then ten months ago Gardner learned that the woman of his choice was a widow. Letters began to flow thick and fast and the little blind god was dictating them before a month had passed.

Recently Gardner caught a fast train for the East. Before the milkman had finished his rounds Sunday morning Gardner appeared at the door of the home of the sister of his fiancee, Mrs. Paul McDonald, in Cleveland.

Before breakfast he slipped the engagement ring in place on her fiancee's finger, and Wednesday morning they were married.

JARVIS-SHAFOR RECITAL

If the coming musical season is attuned to the key-note struck at the opening concert of the season in St. Andrew's church last night, a magnificent winter's music is before the people of Peterborough. The Harold-Jarvis concert was a signal success in every way and from every point of regard. The auditorium of St. Andrew's was filled with a large audience, appreciative and necessarily enthusiastic. Harold Jarvis has the same big, rich-toned, wide-range musical voice, and the same splendid vocal art which have made him a favourite in a hundred cities on the continent, and elected him dean—and "duke"—of the concert platform, the leading vocalist of the country.

His programme numbers last night and the inevitable encores and double encores carried him over the full register of musical interpretation, from the heroic to the pathetic. Versatility is a rather frivolous and inexpressive denomination of the large catholicity of his vocal powers and exposition, skill and taste. His opening number was Behrend's setting of Tennyson's nobly solemn, "Crossing the Bar," and the recall number "Prince's Roses" was a gem of vocal art. His bracketted selection, "Beat Upon Mine Little Heart," and "I Know Two Bright Eyes," exquisitely done in dissimilarness, brought a recall reply in ... Courtship" sung with ... and sensibility that one would think the singer's infant lingo had turned the rock of the past. By request, the "Death of Nelson" sung as only Jarvis can sing it, was substituted for an aria from Handel's Oratorio of Seville, followed in answer to an immense recall, by a delightfully contrasting number in style and treatment, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." "The Gift"—Behrend—was a masterpiece of vocal style and carried a double result, followed by a splendid production of "Flow Gently Sweet Afton," quite indescribably sweet and tender, followed by "My Ain Countree," an appeal to the Scotch sympathies of his hearers like the pleading number "My Ain Folk." A full and candid appreciation in words of Jarvis' wonderful singing, would sound fulsome, but it may be said that last night he was in splendid fettle—never sang better; and that speaks volumes. He gave a thoroughly satisfying performance and reasserted his artistic standing and popularity.

Mrs. Helen Wyrick Shafor, the entertainer, made her first bow to a Peterborough audience, in fact made several bows, for she was compelled to repeat all her programme numbers. Mrs. Shafor is an artist—not a mere entertainer—refined and widely versatile, her work ranging from a splendidly effective reading of the balcony and potion scenes from Romeo and Juliet to "How the Froggies go Asleep," a delightful treat in the way of mimetic interpretation. She captured the audience completely and was showered with encores and bouquets, which she could accept in all honesty, for they were richly earned by her artistic work in every tone of the gamut of expression. Mrs. Wyrick Shafor talked and laughed herself into the hearts of her audience and can be assured of a warm welcome if she revisits Peterborough.

It would be injustice to omit in reference to a thoroughly successful concert, mention of the really excellent manner in which Miss Maude C. Bradly, director of the concert, supplied the accompaniments of the evening.

It is safe to say that no audience in the city ever left an auditorium better and more justifiably pleased than that which filed out of St. Andrew's last night at the close of the Jarvis-Shafor recital.

Musical Notes.

Last night's concert was the first of a transcontinental tour of the Jarvis-Shafor Company, extending from Peterborough through Canada to Seattle, and return, with every date fielled between now and November 30th. Miss Bradley has booked them for a return engagement in Peterborough on St. Andrew's ... Nov. 24th, when a thoroughly Scotch programme for both artists will be presented.

Mr. Gaddon, Director of the Conservatory, has booked an engagement for November 3rd, Conservatory Hall, from the celebrated Welsh Ladies' Choir, now touring this continent with so far, great success.

OLD AGE PENSIONS, ETC.

Four thousand three hundred and thirty-nine members constitute the 144 local governing authorities of the administrative county. The parliamentary electorate numbers 664,294, and the county electorate 814,423. The percentage who voted in the last county council election was only 55.5 (as compared with 65.7 in 1904), whereas in Paris last year the percentage was 78.3.

There were 1349 hours of sunshine in the metropolis in 1907, whereas Birmingham had only 1105 hours, and Manchester 894 hours. Sheffield, however, enjoyed 1428 hours sunshine.

In only one trade — shipping — was there a decrease in the rate of wages, while increases, going as high as 4s. 6d. a week, are recorded in nearly 50 trades. Comparisons with Paris and Berlin show that in nearly every case wages were higher and hours of labour shorter in London.

Recent legislation has made it necessary to include in the volume a supplementary section on old age pensions. The pensioners in London — as determined by the end of June — total 45,628, and involve an annual cost of £536,798. The district having the greatest number of pensioners per thousand (11.9) is Lambeth, which allows 5005 pensions; next to it comes the district of Hackney and ... Newington, in which the ratio per thousand is 10.1, and the total number 7982; the greatest aggregate number of pensions (8469) is allotted to Battersea and Wandsworth, while the lowest (954) is in Poplar and Stepney. PUMPKIN VINES CROSS BORDER INTO CANADA

Perplexed Farmer Asks Advice and is Told to Pull Them Back.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 8. — Theodore Mastin, a farmer living north of Blaine, owns a piece of land the north line of which is the international boundary between Canada and the United States. Mastin, while aware of this, has never had cause to regret it until this year, when he planted a hundred rows of corn along the line. In the field of corn he planted pumpkins, and now harvest time is nigh, and Mastin has written to Federal officers in Seattle asking how he can gather some fifty pumpkins, which have emigrated into Canada without taking out naturalization papers.

Some of the pumpkins are as much as thirty feet into forbidden land. Just what the Federal law says regarding the unique question is not known, but the jurists replied to Mastin's letter that he might stand directly on the international line and pull on the vine which has root in the United States, and if the pumpkins could be dragged in, well and proper; but if any should be snapped off and remain in Canadian territory he should leave them alone.

COUNCIL, AFTER TWO HOURS SPENT IN DISCUSSION, FAILED TO REACH A DECISION RE THE NEW HOSPITAL

Divided Opinion as to What Should be Done in Regard to the Isolation Hospital Matter—Many Ideas Expressed and Motions Passed, But Matter Was Finally Left for Another Session

A LITTLE HISTORY

The Isolation Hospital question has had without any doubt the most checquered career of any problem that the present Council has wrestled with. The public have doubt aware of the different vicissitudes in the history of the proposal to provide the city with an isolation hospital for the isolation of contagious diseases. The many meetings of the Property Committee and the Council at which this matter was discussed have been reported and at a meeting last night practically all the previous arguments were again voiced. Everything had been prepared to proceed with the erection of the hospital and on the report of the property committee tenders were called and the committee recommended that the contract be let to the lowest tenderer, Mr. James Rose, at $11,000. The Council have $15,000 at their disposal for the work and at last night's meeting it was practically admitted that this would be exceeded by probably several thousand dollars before the equipment was added.

The aldermen were practically a unit in that no money should be taken from the current revenue for this extra as the rate would be of necessity increased. Some proposed that part of the work be left unfinished, for example, the completion of the garret, or that all the plastering be not completed at once and by such means the total cost be curtailed in order to keep within the limit. Others noted however that the extras would have to be ultimately paid from the current revenue and not a few of the Aldermen objected to the work being "skimped" for the sake of one thousand dollars. It was shewed that the question be placed before the people in a by-law to borrow $20,000 for the work, but after many views had been expressed it was moved by Ald. Duffus and Morrow that the Property Committee be asked to reconsider the matter again and obtain estimates of the entire cost. This was finally agreed upon after a debate that was drawn out through two hours.

First Motion

The Property Committee's first report was based on Dr. MacPherson's advice together with Architect Hickson's plans. The building as proposed was equipped with modern conveniences necessary in an hospital of this kind and the plans met with the approval of Chairman Bradburn and the other members. The committee reported to the first place that the question be submitted to the ratepayers at the time of the Municipal elections this December however turned down this recommendation and decided to go ahead with the work this year and authorized the committee to advertise for tenders. These were considered as stated above. Ald. Morrow who was the instigator of the new hospital, believing that the city required it and that it would be greatly appreciated by the people of moderate means who might require treatment from scarlet fever, etc., could least afford to bear the expense, stated last night that he thought the work should be proceeded with. The matter had been under discussion all year and it was time that something was done. In his opinion the estimates would not greatly exceed $11,000 and he moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan that the contract be let to Mr. Rose that the work be proceeded with at once, the location of the building being selected by Ald. Bradburn.

By-law Submitted

Ald. Bradburn stated that estimated cost of the building without equipment of beds, stoves, etc., would be $14,600, not including extras which would undoubtedly raise the total to over $15,000. He thought that seven thousand dollars extra was required. He objected as did Ald. Hicks to the extras being paid by taxation. The rate would be high enough without the addition. It was moved by Ald. Bradburn and Hicks that a by-law be submitted to the people authorizing the borrowing of $20,000 for the work.

Up to this stage the Council had been in committee. They then went into Council to settle the matter when the whole question was politically discussed again along the same lines. Ald. Bradburn and Hicks moved that it go to the people and Ald. Morrow and Duncan that the contract be entered into and the work be proceeded with, the latter being an amendment. It was defeated by 6 to 5 vote, Ald. Medhurst being the only one outside of the ten mayors and seconders who voted.

The point that caused most whether $15,000 would cover the total cost. If it would then all were agreeable that the work be proceeded with, but if more amount was to be needed precipitate none of the Aldermen wanted to see the additional tax of three thousand dollars paid from the current revenue. Ald. Medhurst did not want to sacrifice the building for a thousand dollars but $15,000 was not sufficient. He felt that Ald. Bradburn's motion should be supported, Ald. Morrow suggested cutting the dimensions of the building in order to keep the cost within the city's limit. Ald. Bradburn stated that the committee had followed the work furnished by Dr. MacPherson and the architect and the building as planned was most suitable. $15,000 he thought $15,000 sufficient sum in any case and so the motion went on.

It was finally moved by Ald. Duffus that the Council adjourn until Monday night and that in the meantime the Property Committee get figures on the hospital complete in every respect.

Ald. Morrow withdrew his motion and seconded Ald. Duffus' which carried by 8 vote of 5 to 4.

ESTIMATES

Those who favoured it going to the people produced figures which put the cost of the hospital complete at about $20,000 and the council has authority to spend only $15,000. Their figures were something like the following:

Building	$11,110
Heating and plumbing	2,700
Wiring	250
Architect's fees	650
Extras	300
	$15,000
To the above they added:
Equipment	$1,500
Water	2,000
Sewer	1,500
Fixing up grounds and fencing	500
	$5,000
Total Cost	$20,000

Those favouring going on with the work figured the cost something like the following:

Building	$11,110
Heating and plumbing	2,000
Wiring	250
Architect's fees	650
	$13,950
To the above they added:
Water	$ 200
Sewer	250
Equipment	1,000
	$1,450
Total Cost	$15,400

By the former the building would be completed when begun but by the latter estimate the cost was cut down to the lowest figure.

TUDHOPE FACTORY BEING REBUILT

Mr. E. Webb Has Large Building Contract in Orillia.

Mr. E. Webb, is pushing forward the work on the Tudhope Carriage Co.'s new factory with great vigour, and though many doubted when the original announcement was made that the factory would be in working order by the 1st of January, it is now clear to everybody that the buildings, if weather and other conditions continue favourable, will be ready before that date. Two of the buildings for the blacksmithing and woodworking will be up as far as the second storey, by night to-day where they will be delayed for a day or two awaiting the joists. Mr. Webb starts the third building this morning, and expects to have it up to the second storey by Saturday night. This is certainly pushing things for three weeks' work. There are over 140 men employed on the job. They are principally local workmen, but a number of bricklayers were brought up from Toronto on Monday.—Orillia Times.

Mr. Webb is an old Peterborough boy.

EVELYN THAW'S BROTHER IN JAIL

Gets Sixty Days for Trying to Pawn Stolen Gems as Diamonds.

Greenhaven Special.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 8.—Howard Nesbitt, brother of Evelyn Nesbitt-Thaw, was sentenced to sixty days in jail by Judge Mathewsan to-day for trying to pawn rings which he said were set with diamonds. He took an appeal to the Common Pleas Court under a bond of $300, which, he says, will be furnished by J. E. Francis, a New York banker.

Nesbitt testified that he used the name R. E. Campbell because of the notoriety which had been connected with his own. He said he bought the diamonds from Robert Croutt at the Hotel Astor in New York a month ago and that Croutt claimed to have purchased them from the firm of Stern & Eochberger, New York. He said he paid $55 for the ring he tried to pawn.

F. L. Gloeskin, a Yale jeweller, testified that the stones in the rings were white sapphires, not diamonds.

COLD ON THE LUNGS

This letter gives expression of the confidence placed in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine by people who know by experience of its exceptional merit. Mrs. E. D. We buy four bottles at a time and always keep it in the house, believing there is nothing so good for coughs and colds."

"THE HONEYMOONERS"

"The Honeymooners" is a new Geo. M. Cohan musical show, which comes to the Grand Opera House next Wednesday, Oct. 13th. It comes with the prestige of the greatest success of four months in New York, where at the New Amsterdam theatre, it played to capacity right through the heated season at $2.00 per seat. The popularity of Geo. M. Cohan knows with every new production, and "The Honeymooners" has done much to strengthen his reputation as the favorite composer of America. In "The Honeymooners" which comes direct from the New Amsterdam Theatre, with the gorgeous Parisian costumes and luxurious production, Cohan locates his action in the small town of Tigerville, Vermont, whose peculiarities he has hit off with a kindly satire and quaint humour. Love, politics, and mistaken identities play the lead, the wiles in the plot which is throughout coherent, logical and exciting. From the first to the last the story keeps one excited and interested. No other writer for the stage has ever succeeded as has Cohan in combining music and plot. In "The Honeymooners" there are no less than twenty stirring musical numbers, including such pronounced hits as "Let's Take an Old-Fashioned Walk," "I'm a Regular Man," "Mid Days," "In a One-Night Stand," "I'll be There in the Public Square," and "If I'm Good to Die I'm Going to Have Some Fun." Two score pretty girls, personally selected by Mr. Cohan, assist in the musical numbers and give an air of gay summer festivity to the scenes of the comedy. The cast is a very strong one, including such well-known names as Willie Dunlay, James A. Hearne, Harry Stuart, Daniel Sullivan, Bessie Marlow and Minnie Pollard. "The Honeymooners" is a typical Cohan production, full of ginger, melody and action. There are no dead moments. Speed is the motto of Cohan shows and this is the speediest of the lot. The fact that "The Honeymooners" played to record business a whole summer in the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, proves its worth and vitality.

Thrilling Story by Passengers on Transcontinental of Escape From Smash.

Regina, Oct. 8.—The passengers for the belated C.P.R. THREE BROTHERS FIGHTING FOR THRONE OF MOROCCO

Meanwhile the Resources of the State Are Being Wasted and Great Powers Will Likely Terminate the Struggle By Interfering.

London, Oct. 9—No better insight into the semi-barbaric state of Morocco can be had than from the long struggle of three brothers for the sultanship. For years their efforts, each to down the other two, have sapped the strength of their country and wasted its riches. Before they are done they may cost old Morocco its semblance of independence and cast it as a dependency into the hands of some of the great powers which are waiting like vultures for that very thing to happen.

The brothers are the Mulais Mohammed, Abdul Aziz and Mulai Hafid.

Mohammed is the eldest and most unfortunate. He has never been nearer to the throne than to be proclaimed sultan and suffer immediate imprisonment therefor. Almost all his life has been spent in irons, and when he gets free and is again proclaimed sultan by his followers, he is instantly captured by a more powerful brother and thrust into prison once more.

His last experience was worst of all. Early in December (1908) he was hailed sultan. Straightway, the third brother had him seized and tried to get him sentenced to death.

Failing in that, through the resolute refusal of many of his chieftains, Mulai Hafid secured his commitment to life servitude and as a send-off had Mohammed's palms cut open and salted.

The next brother is Mulai Abdul Aziz. He reigned up to the latter part of 1908, following Casablanca and his final rout. Since then the third brother, Hafid, has ruled. Nevertheless, Aziz may call his star lucky. Hafid granted him an annuity of 175,000 francs, kept only the cream of his harem and sent him to Tangier.

I was present when he arrived, and such a bowing for a fallen sultan. He was like a child, roused even in his humiliation by a new toy. For Aziz was sent across from Casablanca by steamer and it was the first time in his life he had [illegible] aboard any kind of vessel.

With delight that was pitiful this deposed monarch, slouched about the ship, tickled at the machinery, amazed at the compass, the winches and the cabins, terribly frightened in the stoke hold. Poor Aziz. Even this steamer on which he came to Tangiers was in grim keeping with his fallen state. For she, too, was doomed to the boneyard, condemned from further service. A month later I saw her in Gibraltar Bay, dismantled, rusted, abandoned, waiting to be broken up.

The mother of Aziz was English. It was through her schemes that he had preference over the oldest brother, Mohammed. Straightway he ordered the rightful heir to prison to keep him from troubling and began his own novel career, the funniest combination of childishness and ambition that ever lined the pockets of the grafters.

A Costly Menagerie

He wanted a menagerie. So he sent a train of Moors, Europeans, agents, couriers and slaves off to Europe to buy lions, tigers, zebras and all the rest of a circus collection. Report says the emissaries had an allowance of $3,000,000. Theirs was one triumphal progress. All the wild animal agents in Europe awaited them with banquets, dances and shows. Finally, the cleverest of all the agents sold them a $200,000 collection for $1,000,000 and receipted the bill for $3,000,000. Aziz never went behind that receipt.

Another time he wanted a phonograph. Off went an ambassador to buy one. He reported that they cost $1,000 each, and could not be had singly. The Sultan ordered a hundred at once.

It was the same way with pianos and automobiles, also with bicycles. There are stored up autos in every city of Morocco, bought by Aziz and never used. The country is too rough and the city streets too narrow.

Everybody bled him right and left. But he thought it quite up to date and looked forward to having telephones, telegraphs, railroads and trolley cars all over Morocco. He did succeed in getting electric lights in Tangiers. Such Europeanism ruined him with the people. The Moor stands against progress, at least the Christian progress. They call it wrong to dig for gold—at any rate to let foreigners profit by so doing. So when Aziz tried to talk railways an awful cry and protest was raised.

Down With The Foreigners

Brother Hafid addressed the Moors something like this:

"Down with the foreigners. Out with them and all their wicked inventions. They are ruining our country. Follow me. Praised be Allah!"

And away they went after Brother Abdul Aziz's scalp. Hafid met defeat before Casablanca and lost heavily when Aziz ordered all prisoners massacred. By the tide Aziz was repeatedly whipped and had to yield. With Mohammed shut up and Aziz as good as a prisoner Mulai Hafid had fair prospects of ruling for a long time. But this trouble with Spain may bring a rearrangement.

Tangiers is the most civilized of all the cities of Morocco. That comes from its location, just across the Straits of Gibraltar from Spain and only three hours by steamer from the English stronghold, Gibraltar.

It serves fugitive Europeans in much the same way as Mexico does the United States and Canada. Extradition is difficult and when a man has raised a hornet's nest about his head in his own country he quietly slips over to the Northern Moroccan metropolis and finds safety.

Not all Europeans in Tangiers, however, are fugitives. It is the stepping stone of many a promoter and corporation agent by which some day, the interior of that rich and quite undeveloped country may be opened to the world of commerce.

Tangiers, though, is strictly Oriental in its aspects save along the lofty coast line lying to the westward of the city, along the straits, where a number of European villas have been built, the most pretentious of them all being that of Perdicaris, the Greek-American, who was kidnapped by Raisuli, the Moroccan bandit king, and released only on payment of a heavy ransom.

Unsafe for Foreigners

For upwards of a year it has been unsafe for any foreigners to venture far into the interior below Tangiers owing to the disturbed condition of the tribesmen, the very same ones who recently besieged Melilla with such energy.

Melilla lies a long way to the east of Tangier, on the coast, and in the entrance to a rich mining region which for years has been the envy of Europeans.

Spain secured certain treaty rights from Abdul Aziz while he was Sultan by which Spanish capital was permitted to open up a guarantee of protection from the Sultan.

Moorish troops were promised the Spaniards and all went well until Abdul Aziz was deposed by his brother Hafid. As Hafid's strong hold on his followers is to expel the foreigners he found that treaty made by his brother very galling and paid scant heed to its terms. This precipitated the present trouble at Melilla.

Depredations on Spanish property provoked Spain and forced her to choose between maintaining her citizens and their investments by force of arms or else surrendering all that property and costly machinery to the fanatical Moors. The former alternative was decided on and with no further thought than mere protection to Spanish interests in the face of a violation of treaty promises of protection by the Moors themselves.

Fleeing For Safety

Meanwhile the Moors are aroused over the entire country and from all quarters the Europeans are fleeing to Tangiers, where there is reasonable hope of safety.

In such a place, within easy reach of Europe, and only three hours away from Gibraltar, where England always has a fleet of battleships, foreigners are pretty safe, and it is far from likely that any tribesmen will venture to attack the place even though the Moors in Tangiers may be all too willing to throw open the city's gates to let the tribesmen in for a general extermination of the hated foreigners.

The outcome of the Melilla fighting may be to Abdul Aziz's advantage, for he has always been friendly to Europeans and may be forced to the throne again in place of the anti-European Hafid.

It was by no means a sweeping victory that seated the latter on the throne, and there are still many interests that desire Aziz to re-ascend the throne, right among the Moors themselves, many of whom have grown wealthy by their country's trade with Europe and oppose any form of exclusion that will ruin this profitable occupation.

Deserted by His Friends

Hafid would not have won so easily if Aziz had not been deserted by those very ones whom his lavishness had made richest. They left him for the victorious Hafid, but they may return to him if Hafid's throne begins to totter.

The only good Samaritan is one against whom Aziz once plotted villainously. The man is Menhebhi, vastly rich, a Moor, now owing allegiance to England. His wealth roused the Sultan's covetousness at a time when the royal treasury was nearly empty. Aziz invited Menhebhi to tea.

Now, to be invited to take tea with the Sultan suggests sentence of death to a Moor. It means: "Come, your money or your life!"

Menhebhi wasted no time—not even to decline the invitation—and never stopped until he had put himself under the protection of England, which Moors can do for a price. Then he was safe and had no more to do with Aziz until that ruler had fallen and was come to disgrace to Tangiers, whereupon the still wealthy Menhebhi took him into his own home, his guest until Abdul Aziz could secure a house for himself.

Hafid's hold on the people rests on his fulfilling his pledge to drive out foreigners especially the French, whom the Moors hate worst of all. Yet of all nations the French will be the hardest to drive out, their claim on the country being strongest, which explains the Moorish hatred for them.

At the time of the adjustment of affairs in Egypt, France renounced her claims there in favour of England. Reciprocating, England renounced her claims to Morocco in favour of France. But Germany upset this arrangement by insisting that she must be recognized. Thereupon the other great nations had their say, but they all stayed their hands. So the evil day was postponed pending just such an opening as this present conflict may make.

In a description of the place, Mr. Crew, the chief engineer, said it was about the last place you would expect to see a big ship.

"It is the centre of a continent, and the absolute tropics. I've been practically everywhere, but it was a novelty to me to be kept awake in steamer's cabin by the roaring of jaguars in the forest outside.

"One day an anaconda, swimming alongside, was noosed, and we got the big sergeant on deck. I've never been anywhere that so swarmed and crawled with all sorts of life.

"The swarms of giant and brilliant butterflies in that Porto Velho clearing were astonishing. One of our men got a bottle of chloroform and a few whacking-hairy spiders, and sold them for £5 at Rotterdam.

"One night I thought a bird was in the cabin. It banged about and kept up a continual whistling. Then I found it was a beetle half as big as a shoe brush.

"The forest our skippers forbade us to go into, as a matter of safety. So we tried fishing from the deck. We fired a dynamite cartridge and a fine collection of prehistoric monsters came up. One big brute was new even to the Indians. It was cased in armour, and from each armour plate projected a big spike."

The England stayed there a month, and then returned to Europe. She will make another voyage to the tropics before long.

BRITISH STEAMER'S TRIP THROUGH BRAZILIAN JUNGLE

Thrilling Experiences in the Heart of the Tropics—Centre of the Continent.

London, Oct. 8—The steamship England has just performed a voyage rivalling that of H.M.S. Pelorus up the Amazon.

The England, which is a splendid specimen of an up-to-date British tramp steamer, owned by Messrs. F. Drughorn, Ltd., of London, drawing 20 feet, has steamed into the very centre of the South American Continent, through Brazil, and to within five miles of the San Antonio Falls near the Bolivian frontier. In fact, she got within 700 miles of the Andes, going West from Para.

Last year the England loaded railway material at Swansea for Porto Velho, a town in the process of being made on the Upper Madeira, 1,608 miles from the Atlantic.

The engineers have already laid about thirty miles of the Madeira Mamore railway in a jungle where they rarely see the sun. Once British enterprise attempted it, but the pioneers were conquered by floods, fevers heat, insects, alligators and jaguars.

After a short stay at Para the England continued her voyage up the Amazon to Serpa. Near there she entered the tributary which at the juncture is so vast an expanse of water that it looks like the sea. Captain Bennett found as much as sixty fathoms in the main stream.

With the native pilot they commenced the experiment of taking a big vessel up the Madeira. Though usually deep and wide, that river narrowed at times till the jungle brushed the England's rigging and sides, and they had only five feet of water below the keel in places where the surface of the stream was broken with snags of rocks.

The propeller in the shallow places disturbed the rooting vegetation on the river bed and then the combined heat and stench was unbearable.

Pilot's Fine Navigation

"The pilots were perfection," said Capt. Bennett. "I think they would have undertaken to navigate the ship over a field if the dew was heavy enough."

Navigation was ruled by the inspection of the next few feet ahead, so the vessel moved at only four knots, and anchored every night. In about nine days they reached Porto Velho.

SIR NIGEL

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Such was the vague wandering memory still lingering in Nigel's mind when at last the mists cleared away from it and he found himself weak but clear on the low couch in the corner turret. Beside him, crushing lavender betwixt his rough fingers and strewing it over floor and sheets, was Aylward the archer. His longbow leaned at the foot of the bed, and his steel cap was balanced on the top of it, while he himself, sitting in his shirt-sleeves, fanned off the flies and scattered the fragrant herbs over his helpless master.

"By my hilt!" he cried with a sudden shout, every tooth in his head gleaming with joy, "I thank the Virgin and all the saints for this blessed sight! I had not dared to go back to Tilford had I lost you. Three weeks have you lain there and babbled like a babe, but now I see in your eyes that you are your own man again."

"I have indeed had some small hurt," said Nigel feebly; "but it is shame and sorrow that I should lie here if there is work for my hands. Whither go you, archer?"

"To tell the good Sir John that you are mending."

"Nay, bide with me a little longer, Aylward. I can call to mind all that has passed. There was a bickering of small boats, was there not, and I chanced upon a most worthy person and exchanged handstrokes with him? He was my prisoner, was he not?"

"He was, fair sir."

"And where is he now?"

"Below in the castle."

A smile stole over Nigel's pale face. "I know what I will do with him," said he.

"I pray you to rest, fair sir," said Aylward anxiously. "The King's own leech saw you this morning, and he said that if the bandage was torn from your head you would surely die."

"Nay, good archer, I will not move. But tell me what befell upon the boat?"

"There is little to tell, fair sir. Had this Ferret not been his own squire and taken so long a time to don his harness it is likely that they would have had the better of us. He did not reach the battle till his comrades were on their backs. Him we took to the Marie Rose, because he was your man. The others were of no worth, so we threw them into the sea."

"The quick and the dead?"

"Every man of them."

"It was an evil deed."

Aylward shrugged his shoulders. "I tried to save one boy," said he; "but Cock Badding would not have it, and he had Black Simon and the others at his back. 'It is the custom of the Narrow Seas,' said they: 'To-day for them; to-morrow for us.' Then they tore him from his hold and cast him screaming over the side. By my hilt! I have no love for the sea and its customs, so I care not if I never set foot on it again when it has once borne me back to England."

"Nay, there are great happenings upon the sea, and many worthy people to be found upon ships," said Nigel. "In all sarta, if one goes far enough upon the water, one would find those whom it would be joy to meet. If one crosses over the Narrow Sea, as we have done, we come on the French who are so needful to us; for how else would we win worship? Or if you go south, then in time one may have to come to the land of the unbelievers, where there is fine skirmishing and much honor for him who will venture his person. Bethink you, archer, how fair a life it must be when one can ride forth in search of advancement with some hope of finding many debonair cavaliers upon the same quest, and then if one be overborne one has died for the faith, and the gates of Heaven are open before you. So also the sea to the north is a help to him who seeks honor, for it leads to the country of the Eastlanders and to those parts where the heathen still dwell who turn their faces from the blessed Gospel. There also a man might find some small deeds to do, and by Saint Paul! Aylward, if the French hold the truce and the good Sir John permits us, I would fain go down into those parts. The sea is a good friend to the cavalier, for it takes him where he may fulfil his vows."

Aylward shook his head, for his memories were too recent; but he said nothing, because at this instant the door opened and Chandos entered. With joy in his face he stepped forward to the couch and took Nigel's hand in his. Then he whispered a word in Aylward's ear, who hurried from the room.

"Pardieu! this is a good sight," said the knight. "I trust that you will soon be on your feet again."

"I crave your pardon, my honored lord, that I have been absent from your side," said Nigel.

"In truth my heart was sore for you, Nigel; for you have missed such a night as comes seldom in any man's life. It went even as we had planned. The postern gate was opened, and a party made their way in; but we awaited them, and all were taken or slain. But the greater part of the French had remained without upon the plain of Nieullet, so we took horse and went out against them. When we drew near them they were surprised, but they made good cheer among themselves, calling out to each other: 'If we fly we lose all. It is better to fight on, in the hopes that the day may be ours.' This was heard by our people in the van, who cried out to them: 'By Saint George! you speak truth. Evil befall him who thinks of flying!' So they held their ground like worthy people for the space of an hour, and there were many there whom it is always good to meet: Sir Geoffrey himself, and Sir Pepin de Werre, with Sir John de Landas, old Ballieul of the Yellow Tooth, and his brother Hector the Leopard. But above all Sir Eustace de Ribeaumont was at great pains to meet us worthily, and he was at handstrokes with the King for a long time. Then, when we had slain or taken them, all the prisoners were brought to a feast which was ready for them, and the knights of England waited upon them at the table and made good cheer with them. And all this, Nigel, we owe to you."

The Squire flushed with pleasure at the words. "Nay, most honored lord, it was but a small thing which I have been able to do. But I thank God and our Lady that I have done some service, since it has pleased you to take me with you to the wars. Should it chance——"

But the words were cut short upon Nigel's lips, and he lay back with amazed eyes staring from his pallid face. The door of his little chamber had opened, and who was this, the tall stately man with the noble presence, the high forehead, the long handsome face, the dark, brooding eyes—who but the noble Edward of England?"

"He, my little cock of Tilford Bridge, I still bear you in mind," said he. "Right glad I was to hear that you had found your wits again, and I trust that I have not helped to make you take leave of them once more."

Nigel's stare of astonishment had brought a smile to the King's lips. Now the Squire stammered forth some halting words of gratitude at the honor done to him.

"Nay, not a word," said the King. "But in sooth it is a joy to my heart to see the son of my old comrade Eustace Loring carry himself so bravely. Had this boat got before us with news of our coming, then all our labor had been in vain, and no Frenchman ventured to Calais that night. But above all I thank you for that you have delivered into my hands one whom I had vowed to punish in that he has caused us more scathe by fouler means than any living man. Twice have I sworn that Peter the Red Ferret shall hang, for all his noble blood and coat-armor, if ever he should fall into my hands. Now at last his time has come; but I would not put him to death until you, who had taken him, could be there to see it done. Nay, thank me not, for I could do no less, seeing that it is to you that I owe him."

But it was not thanks which Nigel was trying to utter. It was hard to frame his words, and yet they must be said. "Sire," he murmured, "it ill becomes me to cross your royal will——"

The dark Plantagenet wrath gathered upon the King's high brow and gloomed in his fierce deep-set eyes. "By God's dignity! no man has ever crossed it yet and lived unscathed. How now, young sir, what mean such words, to which we are little wont? Have a care, for this is no light thing which you venture."

"Sire," said Nigel, "in all matters in which I am a free man I am ever your faithful liege, but some things there are which may not be done."

"How?" cried the King. "In spite of my will?"

"In spite of your will, sire," said Nigel, sitting up on his couch, with white face and blazing eyes.

"By the Virgin!" the angry King thundered, "we are come to a pretty pass! You have been held too long at home, young man. The overstabled horse will kick. The unweathered hawk will fly at check. See to it, Master Chandos! He is thine to break, and I hold you to it that you break him. And what is it that Edward of England may not do, Master Loring?"

Nigel faced the King with a face as grim as his own. "You may not put to death the Red Ferret."

"Pardieu! And why?"

"Because he is not thine to slay, sire. Because he is mine. Because I promised him his life, and it is not for you, King though you be, to constrain a man of gentle blood to break his plighted word and lose his honor."

Chandos laid his soothing hand upon his Squire's shoulder. "Excuse him, sire; he is weak from his wounds," said he. "Perhaps we have sinned overlong, for the leech has ordered repose."

But the angry King was not easily to be appeased. "I am now wont to be so browbeat," said he hotly. "This is your Squire, Master John. How comes it that you can stand there and listen to his pert talk, and say no word to chide him? Is this how you guide your household? Have you not taught him that every promise given is subject to the King's consent, and that with him only lie the springs of life and death? If he is sick, you at least are hale. Why stand you there in silence?"

"My liege," said Chandos gravely, "I have served you for over a score of years, and have shed my blood through as many wounds in your cause, so that you should not take my words amiss. But indeed I should feel myself to be no true man if I did not tell you that my Squire Nigel, though perchance he has spoken more bluntly than becomes him, is none the less right in this matter, and that you are wrong. For bethink you, sire——"

"Enough!" cried the King, more furious than ever. "Like master, like man, and I might have known why it is that this saucy Squire dares to bandy words with his sovereign lord. He does but give out what he hath taken in. John, John, you grow overbold. But this I tell you, and you also, young man, that as God is my help ere the sun has set this night the Red Ferret will hang as a warning to all spies and traitors from the highest tower of Calais, that every ship upon the Narrow Seas, and every man for ten miles round may see him as he swings and know how heavy is the hand of the English King. Do you bear it in mind, lest you also may feel its weight!" With a glare like an angry lion he walked from the room, and the iron-clamped door clanged loudly behind him.

Chandos and Nigel looked ruefully at each other. Then the knight patted his Squire upon his bandaged head.

"You have carried yourself right well, Nigel. I could not wish for better. Fear not. All will be well."

"My fair and honored lord," cried Nigel, "I am heavy at heart, for indeed I could do no other, and yet I have brought trouble upon you."

"Nay, the clouds will soon pass. If he does indeed slay this Frenchman, you have done all that lay within your power, and your mind may rest easy."

"I pray that it will rest easy in Paradise," said Nigel; "for at the hour that I hear that I am dishonored and my prisoner slain I tear this bandage from my head and send all things. I will not live when once my word is broken."

"Nay, fair son, you take this thing too heavily," said Chandos, with a grave face. "When a man has done all he may there remains no dishonor; but the King hath a hard heart for all his hot head, and it may be that if I see him I will prevail upon him. Bethink you how he swore to hang the six burghers of this very town, and yet he pardoned them. So keep a high heart, fair son, and I will come with good news anon."

For three hours the sinking sun traced the shadow higher and ever higher upon the chamber wall, Nigel tossed feverishly upon his couch, his ears straining for the footfall of Aylward or of Chandos, bringing news of the fate of the prisoner. At last the door flew open, and there before him stood the one man whom he least expected, and yet would most gladly have seen. It was the Red Ferret himself, free and joyous.

With swift furtive steps he was across the room and on his knees beside the couch, kissing the pendent hand. "You have saved me, most noble sir!" he cried. "The gallows was fixed and the rope slung, when the good Lord Chandos told the King that you would die by your own hand if I were slain. 'Curse this mule-headed Squire!' he cried. 'In God's name let him have his prisoner, and let him do what he will with him so long as he troubles me no more!' So here I have come, fair sir, to ask you what I shall do."

"I pray you to sit beside me and be at your ease," said Nigel. "In a few words I will tell you what I would have you do. Your armor I will keep, that I may have some remembrance of my good fortune in meeting so valiant a gentleman. We are of a size, and I make little doubt that I can wear it. Of ransom I would ask a thousand crowns."

"Nay, nay!" cried the Ferret. "It would be a sad thing if a man of my position was worth less than five thousand."

"A thousand will suffice, fair sir, to pay my charges for the war. You will not again play the spy, nor do us harm until the truce is broken."

"That I will swear."

"And lastly there is a journey that you shall make."

The Frenchman's face lengthened. "Where you order I must go," said he; "but I pray you that it is not to the Holy Land."

"Nay," said Nigel; "but it is to a land which is holy to me. You will make your way back to Southampton."

"I know it well, I helped to burn it down some years ago."

"I rede you to say nothing of that matter when you get there. You will then journey as though to London until you come to a fair town named Guildford."

"I have heard of it. The King hath a hunt there."

"The same. You will then ask for a house named Cosford, two leagues from the town on the side of a long hill."

"I will bear it in mind."

"At Cosford you will see a good knight named Sir John Butlesthorn and you will ask to have speech with his daughter, the Lady Mary."

"I will do so; and what shall I say to the Lady Mary, who lives at Cosford on the slope of a long hill two leagues from the fair town of Guildford?"

"Say only that I sent my greeting, and that Saint Catharine has been my friend—only that and nothing more. And now leave me, I pray you, for my head is weary and I would fain have sleep."

Stop Women And Consider

This Fact—that in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years.

The present Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, was for years under her direction, and has ever since her decease continued to advise women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty causes them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. Such questioning and examination is unnecessary. Without cost you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION:
Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

FAMOUS WAX ARTIST

Mme. Tussaud Had an Exciting and Dramatic Career.

IN THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

During That Era of Bloodshed She Modeled Some of the Heads That Fell by the Guillotine and Was For a Time in Prison Herself as a Suspect.

This is the story of Mme. Tussaud, who was born in Berne in 1760 and died in London in 1850, and who, during the stormy time of the French revolution, modeled in wax some of the heads that fell by the guillotine.

Marie Grosholtz was the daughter of an aid-de-camp of General Wermser in the Seven Years' war. She was born after the death of her father.

Her mother was the sister of Dr. John Christopher Curtius of Berne. This Dr. Curtius had made many anatomical and other models in wax and had attracted the attention of the Prince de Conti. This nobleman urged Curtius to come to Paris and establish himself as a modeler in wax.

The Curtius studio became the rendezvous of the fashionable world, and in connection with this he had a museum of curiosities. Among his patrons were Voltaire, Jean Jacques, Rousseau, Mesmer, Mirabeau, Diderot, Benjamin Franklin, Paul Jones and many other notable persons.

In his visits to his sister at Berne Dr. Curtius had taught his niece, Marie, many of the secrets of modeling in wax. She showed such ability in this that her uncle urged her mother to make a home with him in Paris and to allow him to adopt Marie as his daughter.

Marie began earnest study with Dr. Curtius, and she was so skillful in the modeling of wax flowers that this art became a craze. Even the royal personages in the palace took it up, and Marie spent some time giving lessons to Mme. Elizabeth, the young sister of Louis XVI.

When the revolution broke out Dr. Curtius took the side of the people and sent for Marie to come from the palace. It was rather singular that two of his wax models should have played a foremost part in the opening scenes of that awful period. In his collection of models was a bust of the minister, Necker, father of Mme. de Stael, and one of Philippe, duke of Orleans. Two days before the storming of the Bastille a mob took these two busts from his museum in the Palais Royal, draped them in black crape to show their sympathy and started in parade the streets with them.

As the procession filed across the Place Vendome a troop of dragoons and one of the regiments charged. A sword stroke cut the bust of Necker in halves, and the man who was carrying it was hit by a musket ball in the leg and received the thrust of a sword in his breast.

The bust of the Duke of Orleans escaped injury, but in the fight to defend it several persons were killed. The soldiers made desperate efforts to demolish it.

At the taking of the Bastille Dr. Curtius was active and for his services to France was rewarded by the national assembly. A badge of honor was presented to him, and this was inscribed with the famous date and a memorial of his bravery and patriotism. His house was a favorite place of meeting with the leaders of the revolution, so Marie had an opportunity to see them all.

There was only one time when Marie was in any danger during this desperate period. She was "suspected" and sent to prison. Here at the same time was Mme. de Beauharnais, who had barely escaped the guillotine and who was later the Josephine of Napoleon Bonaparte. Her uncle was able to get Marie's release from prison, and she came out in time to see the downfall of Robespierre, Danton and Desmoulins.

In the days of their power she had been called to model the heads of many who fell by the guillotine. She was obliged to take them just after the fall of the fatal knife. She did this awful work with the heads of poor Marie Antoinette and of the Princess Lamballe, the queen's friend. When the leaders suffered by the guillotine in their turn she modeled their heads.

After the revolution her uncle died, and in 1795 she married M. Tussaud. She could not overcome the shock of her experiences during the revolution, and she persuaded her husband to take her and the valuable collections of wax models left her by Dr. Curtius over to England.

They established this collection in the Strand. The collection was taken all about the country, and in 1833 it was brought back to London and made a permanent exhibition. Her son-in-law conducted the business, and she took an active share in this till she was eighty years of age.

ANGLO-INDIAN SOCIETY.

Salary Decides a Briton's Standing in the Orient.

Anglo-Indian society is strictly officered. The male exile's status depends upon the number of rupees he draws each month from the Government. An "Assistant District Superintendent of Police" may be the younger son of a baronet, with an ancestry going back to the Conquest. But he must take in to dinner the Eurasian wife of the "Opium Wallah" — a "Government servant," who is paid a salary of similar dimensions. The "Collector," who gets the equivalent of a thousand pounds a year, is paired off with the sister of the officer commanding the local regiment. In all probability, the lady has a supreme contempt for the "civilian's" social standing, although her unpretentious parents may have kept a Bayswater boarding-house. In the large "stations," railway employes, tea and indigo planters, barristers and business men have a bowing acquaintance with the officers of the British infantry regiments, and they are welcomed in native infantry messes. British cavalry officers and their wives, however, seldom tolerate them, though impecunious subalterns (with an eye to the main chance) make a point of cultivating bank managers. Occasionally, the officers of one corps do not encourage friendly relations with those of another; the womenkind of these warriors being only too ready to obey the mandate. Under these circumstances, jovial Anglo-Indians who are anxious to make friends of everybody—from the "Commissioner" down to the "Acting Additional Traffic Manager," who occupies a lowly position in the railway office—loathe (with exceeding hate) Rawalpindi, Secunderabad, Bangalore, Lucknow, Meerut, and other large military "stations" where cliques abound.

The "Mem-Sahib" is not over-burdened with household duties. For many months in the year, the appalling heat (which reduces the liveliest lady to the verge of apathy, dispels any good intentions she may have formed. Besides, it is not customary for the mistress of the house to pry too closely into the uncleanly mysteries with which the native servants surround themselves. Even the strongest-minded "Mem" is staggered by the sights which await her in the "bawarchi-khanah," as the kitchen is known. Nor is she encouraged to take an interest in her servants and their children. Should she condescendingly pat little Ahmed's fat cheeks, little Ahmed's papa will straightway accuse her of regarding his offspring with the "evil eye."

Bronze Statuettes.

An interesting exhibition of bronze statuettes by Anthony Van Wouw was inaugurated recently at the Fine Arts Society's galleries by Sir Richard Solomon, who deputed to Dr. Engelenburg, one of the South African delegates at the Imperial Press Conference, the task of introducing the personality of the Boer sculptor.

Anthony Van Wouw's nationality is betrayed by his subjects rather than by his style, which is the result of sound training in the European art centres. He has chosen his models from among his own people and the indigenous black types, whose varied types he reproduces with considerable realistic force. Nor is this realism confined to the faithful reproduction of racial characteristics; in several cases, as in the statuette of a "Kaffir Eating Mealies" and the pathetic group "Bad News," he endeavors, with marked success, to convey a suggestion of the arid, stony veldt. There is something of monumental dignity in his little seated figure of "Paul Kruger in Exile." Of peculiar interest are the two figures of "Voortrekkers," designed for the corners of the Kruger monument, which was commissioned from the artist before the outbreak of the war.

Lord Lonsdale's Bet.

There are few better all-round sportsmen in the Empire than the Earl of Lonsdale, who is taking such an active interest in the Travel and Sports Exhibition, due to open next month at Olympia. He rides, shoots, motors, boxes, yachts, and is an expert slipper of greyhounds. Horses, however, have been the hobby of his life, and on matters connected with them his opinions are of great value. Once Lord Lonsdale made a bet he would drive twenty miles in less than an hour. The roads were bad, but the weather was worse. For the first five miles his lordship drove a four-in-hand, a pair for another five miles, rode pastilion to a pair for the next five, and completed the remainder of the distance by driving a single horse for the last stage. The entire journey was covered in two and a half minutes under the hour.

Latest feature—burnished surface

The Pandora might truly be named "the range with a piano finish," for the smoothness, lustre and brilliancy of the new burnished surface rivals the finish of a high-class piano.

This new burnished surface polishes quickly and requires about one-third the black lead necessary for the rather rough surface of ordinary ranges.

Ordinary ranges need polishing once a day to look bright, while the marvellously smooth burnished surface only needs polishing once a week.

The burnished surface is a McClary invention—found on no other make of stoves—so if you desire to save time, polishing-labor and black lead, be sure you choose Pandora. 16

The DAY of the DUEL

AN EYE FOR AN EYE

(A TRUE STORY)

HE RAN HIS HANDS CLOSELY OVER THE SENATOR'S BODY.

(Copyright, 1900, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

The broad shouldered, strong faced man who entered the hotel dining room with assured step had about him the subtle something of distinction, of power, of magnetism that marked a leader. Glances and whispered comments among those who were at breakfast showed that he was known and that he was worth knowing. It was David C. Broderick, United States Senator from California, son of an Irish laborer, newsboy of the New York streets, ward politician by grace of heavy fists and high courage, stone cutter and, finally, one of the dominant figures of the new golden State.

As he took his seat he opened a newspaper and began to read the account of the convention held at Sacramento the day before by the branch of the democratic party that was bitterly opposing him. While he read his brow gathered and knotted. It was one of those quick flashes of anger beyond the control of strong minds, sober and well balanced though they be, that brought his eyes from a certain passage in the paper to the face of a man seated opposite him. The other man had been reading that same account and there was an unspoken question in his glance.

"I see that your friend Terry has been abusing me at Sacramento, Mr. Perley," he said. His hearer bristled.

"What is it, Mr. Broderick?"

"I defended that man when all others deserted him," Broderick went on, emphatically. "I paid and supported three newspapers to defend him during the Vigilance Committee days, two hundred dollars a week I paid. I have hitherto spoken of him as an honest man, as the only honest man of a corrupt Supreme Court, but now I find that I was mistaken. I take it all back."

"I am a warm admirer of Judge Terry," said Perley, leaning over the table. "You would not dare to use such language to him."

"Would not dare!" echoed Broderick.

"No, sir. And you shall not use it to me concerning him. I shall hold you personally responsible for the language you have used."

Broderick looked at Perley with a slow smile of contempt and superiority. "My dear sir," he said, "I fight only with gentlemen of my own position." Thereupon he placidly resumed the reading of his paper, and Perley, fuming with rage and exasperation, left the table.

The local situation, like the national one, was ripe for trouble. It was a time of tense, unbridled political passion in California, when the hurrying war clouds were drawing toward a vortex and men hated rather than believed. Broderick's position was critical. He was a supporter of Stephen A. Douglas and leader of the section of the State democratic party which was opposed to the further extension of slavery. His fellow Senator, William M. Gwin, was his direct adversary and champion of the slavery wing.

Broderick had won his seat after a terrific struggle, during which he had displayed unexpected strength. In an attempt to conciliate the Broderick element Gwin had pledged himself in writing to give over part of his political patronage. Broderick had profited by the error. Waving this document, the "scarlet letter," as an oriflamme, he had called for the suppression of a man who would thus openly admit the corruption he practised. From that moment Broderick had been marked for sacrifice. It had been war then, with the elimination of Broderick as the first step essential to his enemies.

David S. Terry.

David S. Terry, Chief Judge of the Supreme Court of California, was one of Gwin's most devoted followers. A man of undoubted gifts, he was passionate and quarrelsome, a ducilist, remorseless as he was fearless. Before the split in the party he had been friendly with Broderick. During the time of the vigilantes he had taken part in an attempt to rescue a prisoner from the custody of those volunteer advocates of law and order and in the fracas had stabbed Sterling A. Hopkins, a vigilante. He had been thrown into jail and Broderick had saved him by bringing press influence to bear in his favor.

The obligations which Terry owed him had moved Broderick's outburst at the hotel dining table. Terry the man he had protected from death or banishment; Terry the former friend, had risen at the Gwin convention and attacked him as a traitor. Referring to the anti-slavery Democrats, Terry had said:—

"They are the followers of one man, the personal chattels of a single individual whom they are ashamed of. They belong, heart, soul, body and breeches, to David C. Broderick. Yet they are ashamed to acknowledge their leader."

More than two months passed before Broderick's sharp exchange of words with Perley bore their fruit. Then, early in September, 1859, the Senator received the following communication:—

"Some two months ago, at the public table of the International Hotel, in San Francisco, you saw fit to engage in certain remarks concerning me which were offensive in their nature. Before I heard of the circumstances your note of the 29th of June in which you declared that you would not respond to any call of a personal character during the political canvass, just concluded, had been published. I have, therefore, not been permitted to take any notice of those remarks until the expiration of the limit fixed by your self. I now take the earliest opportunity to require of you a retraction of those remarks. This note will be handed to you by my friend, Calhoun Benham, Esq., who is acquainted with its contents and will receive your reply. D. S. TERRY."

Broderick was no devotee of the code, though he was regarded as an expert with the pistol. In his New York days, when he had led a phalanx of thumping partisans, he had had no experience with the niceties of personal combat. In his rise to a loftier plane of political effort after moving West he had shown himself possessed of excellent qualities, resourceful, a good speaker, a strong executive. But he had never sought to enforce his great popularity or his reputation by threats of personal reprisal. At the same time, there was nothing of the coward in him and he was not the one to retract.

In his reply to Terry he recalled his remarks to Perley and said that they were occasioned by allusions to him made by Terry at the Sacramento Convention. "You are the proper judge as to whether this language affords good ground for offence," he concluded. There was no delay in the decision. Terry immediately resigned his position and challenged. It was at first arranged that the meeting should take place at sunrise on September 12 near the San Francisco county line. Word of this reached the chief of police, however, and the principals with their seconds were arrested on arriving at the designated spot. They were discharged from custody the same day and the subsequent arrangements were made more secretly. The conditions were as follows:—

1—Principals to be attended by two seconds and a surgeon each; also by a person to load the weapons. This article not to exclude the drivers of the vehicles. If other parties obtrude the time and place may be changed at the instance of either party.

2—Place of meeting—On the farm adjoining the Lake House Ranch, Laguna Merced.

3—Weapons—Duelling pistols.

4—Distance—Ten paces, parties facing each other; pistols to be held with the muzzle vertically downward.

5—Word to be given as follows, to wit:—"Gentlemen, are you ready?" Upon each party replying "Ready" the word "fire" shall be given, to be followed by the words, "one, two." Neither party to raise his pistol before the word "fire" nor to discharge it after the word "two." Intervals between the words "fire, one two," to be exemplified by the party winning the word, as near as may be.

6—Weapons to be loaded on the ground in the presence of a second of each party.

7—Choice of position and the giving of the word to be determined by chance—throwing of a coin, as usual.

8—Choice of the two weapons to be determined by chance, as in article 7.

9—Choice of the respective weapons of parties to be determined on the ground by throwing of a coin, as usual—that is to say, each party bringing their own pistols and the pair to be used to be determined by chance, as in article 7.

The Place Selected.

On the morning of September 13 the principals and their respective attendants were on the ground in a valley near Laguna de la Merced, a lake about twelve miles from San Francisco. It was a cold, clear day with little wind stirring. In spite of all efforts word of the meeting had been whispered in certain quarters and about eighty spectators were present.

Judge Terry had chosen as members of his party three men who were familiar with the operations of the code and the necessary arrangements on the field. Broderick's supporters, on the other hand, knew little of the matter in hand and it was evident as the preparations progressed that they were unable to emulate the cool composure that marked the attitude of the opposing group. Their nervousness did not tend to set their principal at his ease. One of them, Leonidas Haskell, approached Broderick to untie his cravat. In the midst of his operation he stopped, overcome by emotion, and walked away a few paces wringing his hands. It was with difficulty that he could bring himself to complete the office with his friend.

It was now time for the preliminaries when the little details of the duel were to be submitted to chance. It may have been that Broderick read in the result an ill omen, for he lost every toss. Judge Terry selected his own pistols, the weapon he preferred of the pair, the position and the right for his own second to give the word.

When Broderick took his stand he was pale, with his features hard set. He was clad, as was his opponent, in a long, black overcoat, light in weight and unbuttoned. Both men also wore soft felt hats pulled low over their eyes. It was apparent to all that Terry was more at ease than the Senator. Broderick fumbled with the skirts of his coat, pulling them away from his knees and apparently feeling that his clothing hampered him. Terry, on the other hand, was obviously in full command of himself, concentrating every faculty upon the success of his shot.

In observance of the extreme punctilio of the code the chief second for each party then advanced to examine the principals for concealed mail or breast plates. Calhoun Benham, who acted for Judge Terry, performed this duty most thoroughly and in a manner that brought a twitching frown to Broderick's face. He ran his hands closely over the Senator's body, pressing and feeling with great care and deliberation. Congressman Joseph C. McKibben, who examined Terry, merely laid the tips of his fingers upon the breast of the Judge, bowed and withdrew. Broderick drew several coins from a waistcoat pocket and passed them to one of his attendants. Terry imitated his adversary and handed some silver to Calhoun Benham, who dropped them with superior gesture to the ground.

One more incident disturbed Broderick's poise, the exact adjustment of thought and person so valuable to the man about to venture deadly combat when his own second, McKibben, corrected him as to the position he had taken. He made no remark, however, and moving to the spot pointed out settled himself firmly for the ordeal. Benham now stepped forward and read aloud the conditions of the duel. David D. Colton, another of Terry's seconds, repeated the instructions as to the firing. During these final moments Broderick was measuring the ground between himself and his adversary with quick, uneasy glances. Terry stood erect and motionless, conserving every energy and never removing his keen eyes from the Senator. The spectators were warned to stand aside from the line of fire and the little valley fell suddenly silent. Colton's voice came loud and clear:—

"Are you ready, gentlemen?"

"Ready," said Terry, instantly. Broderick delayed an appreciable space, then answered steadily, "I am ready."

"Fire!"

"One"——

Both men had brought their pistols swiftly to a level and at this point Broderick's weapon rang out.

"Two!"

Shot Not Mortal.

Terry's pistol spoke as Colton pronounced the word. Through the floating cloud of smoke that shifted slowly to one side eager eyes sought the result. Broderick had taken a step backward just after Terry's fire. He reeled and turned a little on his heels. It was evident that he was making a desperate effort to keep his feet. He sank suddenly to one knee, then pitched backward at full length. His seconds and surgeon ran to his aid and supported his head while a hasty examination was made. The bullet had entered the right breast, taking a tortuous course to the left armpit.

Terry held his place, watching the excited group opposite him with calm eyes, his arms folded and the barrel of his pistol bugged close. His first words were, "The shot is not mortal. I have struck two inches to the right." Broderick's bullet, it was found, had ploughed the ground about two paces in front of his antagonist. It was then evident that he had discharged his weapon prematurely—a fact which was laid to his nervousness or to his unfamiliarity with the hair trigger.

One of the spectators of the affair was Davis, the owner of the dairy ranch upon which the meeting took place. He was one of the first to move in the tense instant when Broderick fell. Starting from his seat he rushed toward Terry, crying as he ran, "This is murder, by God." Several men threw themselves upon him. He struggled to free himself. "Let me go," he cried. "Broderick has been murdered and I'm Broderick's friend. Are there any men here? Then come on and we'll wipe this matter out." He was restrained and pushed back from the field. It was the opinion of many present that if a word of his threat had reached Terry or any of Terry's seconds the result would have been a pitched battle between the sympathizers of the respective opponents.

Broderick was carried from the ground to the Haskell home at Black Point. He suffered greatly and was conscious during most of the time up to his death, three days later. One of his last remarks was, "I tried to stand firm when I was struck, but I could not. The blow blinded me." His comment on the affair was, "They have killed me because I was opposed to slavery and a corrupt Administration," a utterance which had in it something of prophecy.

Broderick's funeral was one of the most impressive events in the history of San Francisco. He had been greatly admired and with his intimate knowledge of the people who made up the strength of his following had contrived to stand in the light of a personal friend to his supporters. The manner of his death aroused feeling to a high pitch and the entire city went into mourning. The political significance of the event was not lost sight of and the man served the anti-slavery cause in death as he had in life. Broderick had suffered for his defiance of human liberty and the lesson was writ so that all might read.

Nor was California the only section to mourn the strong, brilliant and able statesman. The affair produced a profound sensation throughout the country, serving as one of those striking and tragic incidents, like the John Brown raid, that congeal public sentiment into definite form. The ceremonies held in San Francisco were repeated in New York on the same day, the procession being two miles long.

Judge Terry was arrested after the death of Broderick, was tried and acquitted. All the influence of the Gwin branch of the democratic party was thrown into the scales to aid him. It was a period in the development of the West, moreover, when duels were almost every day occurrences and when public opinion, while not openly supporting the code, felt no particular desire to check its free operation. The man who had killed Broderick was set at liberty and went his way. In the tragic sequel he was to play a part that was to make his life one of the strangest of all strange stories.

At the outbreak of the civil war Terry made his way overland, through great hardships, into Texas. He had fought under General Sam Houston in the war for independence against Mexico and his claims to a command were at once recognized. He raised a company and saw active service throughout the struggle. At the conclusion of hostilities he returned to San Francisco and resumed the practise of law, in which he was notably successful.

In 1884 Terry became one of the counsel for Sarah Althea Hill, who fought a long and desperate legal battle through many years, first for recognition as the wife of William Sharon, United States Senator, and later for a share in his large estate. This case was the cause célèbre of the decade, and Terry attracted country wide attention through his conduct of it. During the hearings after the death of Sharon the former judge became the husband of Sarah Althea.

When the woman's claims came up for final settlement Stephen J. Field, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, read the opinion. By a curious twist of fate Field had been one of the warmest personal and political friends of David C. Broderick. With Terry and his wife seated in court Field pronounced the words that meant absolute failure for their case. The Judge was interrupted toward the end by the hysterical shrieks of Sarah Althea, who declared that the decision had been purchased. Court officers advanced to silence her and Terry sprang to her aid, drawing a long, bare bladed knife.

Battle in Court.

Drawing the woman behind him he held the officers at bay, swearing that he would kill the first man who laid hands on him. The court room was in an uproar and a dozen men threw themselves upon the raging Terry. He was disarmed by a United States Deputy Marshal, David Nagle. Justice Field sentenced him to six months and his wife to thirty days in the county jail as a result of the outbreak.

After his release Terry made no secret of his intention of killing Field. Word of his threats reached the Department of Justice in Washington and Nagle was assigned as a bodyguard to accompany the Justice. He was ordered to protect Field's person at all hazards.

Terry met Samuel Turner, one of his fellow townsmen during the early days of California, when he had given promise of becoming the greatest jurist of the State, soon after his release from jail. They drifted to a hotel bar and fell to discussing affairs in which they had both taken part. Terry, warming to the subject, rehearsed the Broderick affair.

"Sam," he said, "it was one of the proudest moments of my life when I saw Broderick fall. I did a great public service in removing that man and I have never been recognized."

"Then you're never been sorry for it?"

"Sorry? Why should I be? I went to breakfast just afterward, you may remember, and ate with a good appetite and a clear conscience."

"You always did have nerves of steel," said Turner, shaking his head in awe.

"Just one thing is lacking, Sam, to make me completely satisfied. Field is still alive and I'm going to get him. You can tell any one I said so if you like it. Broderick and Field—they've been the stumbling blocks in my life. I'm getting to be a pretty old man, Sam, but when I get ready to go I'm going to take Stephen Field with me."

"You're nothing if not a good hater," murmured Turner. Terry's eyes narrowed and his face flushed.

"A good hater. Yes, I have been. I come from a race of good haters. Most the men of my family have died with their boots on, Sam. If I ask one more thing beyond landing Field it's that I may die the same way myself." And the fierce old man, almost a forgotten type in the newer civilization of the West, strode from the place.

On August 14, 1889, Justice Field, accompanied by Nagle, boarded a Southern Pacific train at San Francisco. On the same train were Terry and his wife. They attempted to obtain seats in the same car with Field but were prevented. The train stopped for twenty minutes at Lathrop, a small town near Stockton, and the passengers entered the dining room of the railroad station for luncheon. Field and Nagle were seated at one table, and the Terrys' who did not see the Justice on entering the room, proceeded to another.

During the meal Sarah Althea caught sight of Field and called the attention of Terry to his presence. Their actions and whispered conversation did not get past unobserved, and when the woman rose and left the room, with a threatening glance at Field, one of the proprietors of the restaurant approached Terry.

"I hope your wife does not intend to make a scene," he said, indicating Field.

"My wife could not remain in the same room with that man," returned Terry, stiffly.

"Well, I hope you will make no trouble here. We don't want to have any trouble in this place."

"I don't know, there may be trouble," answered Terry, without raising his voice. When the other turned away from him he left his chair and walked to the table at which Field was seated. Leaning across the board, without uttering a word, he struck the Justice across the face with his open hand. Nagle, who had been watching Terry closely, whipped a revolver from his pocket and threatened to shoot if Terry did not desist. Terry paid no attention to Nagle, but with his eyes fixed upon Field raised his hand for another blow.

In that instant Nagle fired. Terry staggered and fell while Nagle fired again. The first shot passed through Terry's heart. The second made a deep furrow in the floor. At the same moment that Terry fell his wife appeared in the doorway of the room with a satchel in her hand. She screamed and started toward her husband, crying that he had been murdered. She was stopped and the satchel taken from her. A revolver was discovered in it. She had evidently returned to her section of the train to obtain it.

Terry had been instantly killed. Nagle was arrested, but was later released. Sarah Althea was adjudged insane not long afterward and was confined in an asylum.

HUNTING THE RHEA.

Ostrich-like Bird Furnishes Exciting Sport in Patagonia.

Down in Patagonia one of the principal sports is the chase of the rhea, a member of the ostrich family, but not quite so large as the ostriches we see in the circuses and the zoological gardens. The bird, however, is a swift runner and can set a fast pace for a horse or a greyhound. It has also some sagacity, for frequently it will double on its course and sometimes in that way succeeds in eluding its pursuers altogether. The requisites for the rhea hunter are a horse, a fast dog and a bola. The dog finds the scent of the bird, and the hunter pursues as fast as he can on the horse. When he comes close enough he makes use of the bola. This instrument is made of two or three balls of lead or stone attached to a throng which is six or eight feet long. When it is hurled at the fleeing bird the balls wind about the part where the bola strikes and serve to impede its progress. The hunters and dogs then rush forward and dispatch the rhea.

When the bird sees that it is in danger often it will crouch down flat on the ground and stretch its neck out under the grass and wait until the logs pass. If the wind is blowing against the scent this ruse often saves the life of the game. If it is discovered it usually is so startled that it makes no effort to escape. The rhea will run for five or six miles on a stretch, and it gives dogs and riders all they can do to keep up with it. But when the game is captured the hunters feel that the chase is worth while, for the wings of the birds are not unlike turkey meat in flavor, and the meat of the thigh has a taste not unlike that of horseflesh, which connoisseurs pronounce very fine.

THE PIPE OF PEACE.

Etiquette of the Calumet Observed by the American Indian.

When you read an account of the conclusion of a treaty with the Indians you are pretty sure to find that the calumet was brought out and handed around. The calumet is a pipe of peculiar construction. The bowl is of red sandstone, and the stem is of reed, about two and a half feet long. The stem is decorated with women's hair and feathers, which hang from it like a fringe.

This pipe is the famous "pipe of peace," used by the American Indian. After a treaty has been concluded the pipe is produced and filled with tobacco. It is then handed to the representatives of the party with whom the treaty has been made, and they must take at least one whiff of it. It is afterward passed around among the Indians present, who also take a whiff of it, and that ceremonial ratifies and makes sacred the compact that has just been entered into. The passing around of the calumet is an act of hospitality, and a refusal to take it is considered a dire offense.—Chicago News.

A Fireside Game.

Word guessing is a good game to play in the evening. One of the players thinks of a word and says, "I have a word of six letters; the first letter is 'g' and the last is 'a.'"

The guessers are allowed to ask any questions they like, which the leader is bound to answer, if he can do so without actually telling the word. The player who guesses the word correctly chooses the next one, and a prize is won by the player guessing the largest number of words.

Baseball Fatalities.

A baseball enthusiast took his wife to the ball game. That night the "fan" was awakened from his slumber by his better half shouting in her dreams: "Kill the umpire! Kill the umpire!" Half asleep, he sprang out of bed and in doing so knocked over the washstand. The crash awoke Mrs. "Fan." "Did you kill the umpire, John?" she inquired.

"No," replied John angrily, "but I smashed the pitcher."—Success.

Another Variety.

"I wish Lucy hadn't gone rowing with that young Pfiffers," says Lucy's mamma. "He is such a fool in a boat."

"Rock the boat idiot!" smiles the listener.

"No, not that kind. He is one of the sort that proposes."—New York Life.

CUSTOMS OF THE NAVY

SOME CURIOUS WAYS OF BRITISH LOWER DECKS.

Jack-Tar Has Various Means of Making His Protests to the Captain—Pledards in the Christmas Decorations—Lionel Yepley Tells of Early Days on Whale Island When Fisher and Scott Were There.

"Ye gods and little fishes! What constitutions Britishers must have; salt pork and pea soup, and on the top of it rum, with the temperature of the lower deck about 120 degrees Fahrenheit. Still, Christmas is Christmas, and it takes more than tropical thunderstorms and salt pork to knock the spirit out of the average Englishman on that day."

Afterwards the men ranted and roared "like true British seamen," and danced in wild abandon and a thick fog of tobacco smoke, wearing little else than bathing costumes.

Such was a Christmas Day, typical of many spent by our lads in blue lying at foreign stations, which Mr. Lionel Yexley experienced while stationed in the Persian Gulf, and which he describes in his interesting book, "The Inner Life of the Navy" (Pitman). He also tells how Christmas is spent on board men-o'-war at home, and mentions that should there be any little grievance affecting the men generally, suggestive mottoes are hung among the decorations, where the captain cannot fail to see them. "These, in ships where the captain takes an interest in the men, generally have the desired result."

Mr. Yexley spent many years in the navy, and was at Whale Island when that splendid gunnery school was in its infancy, and when the authorities were just beginning to awaken to the fact that the man behind the gun counts for something in warfare. All the men who arrived at the island for gunnery instruction were called Volunteers, and "the first thing that a Volunteer had impressed on his mind was that he knew nothing.' If you will bear in mind that you don't know what a rifle is, don't know how to put on your accoutrements, don't know how to turn to the left or right, we shall get on very well together,' was the dictum of the instructor. And from that position each man had to start."

In those days "Jacky" Fisher, now Sir John Fisher and First Sea Lord, was appointed captain, while on the staff of gunnery officers was Lieut. Percy Scott,—destined to revolutionize the whole gunnery of the navy—now a rear-admiral and Sir Percy Scott. No doubt there were faults in the system of training; for instance, too much trouble was taken over details, such as getting a man into the exact position supposed to be necessary to the proper firing of a gun, and this led to the catch phrase, "Attitude is the art of gunnery—whiskers make the man."

The curious fact is mentioned that "the British navy is the only uniformed fighting service of any civilized state that has the very doubtful honor of paying for its own uniform, and the British bluejacket is very loud and persistent in his demand to be relieved of what he considers an unfair tax on his scanty earnings." Until recent years Jack made his own clothes, but now he must buy them from the Admiralty ready-made. A sharp eye, however, was always kept upon the manner in which Jack put his cloth.

The regulations, for instance, said that the size of the trouser leg at the knee should be 16 inches, and 11 inches at the foot, and added, "The measurement across the knee is always to be 1 inch less than at the foot." Then the pockets of the jumpers must be 6 inches deep and 3 inches wide, the top of the pocket to be so many inches from the line of the shoulder. At the home depots it was no uncommon thing for a sailor, if his clothes deviated from the official scale, to have them summarily ripped up with a knife so as to make them impossible for wear until they had been altered.

The issue of rum is an interesting daily event in the life of a bluejacket. Every man who has reached the age of twenty is entitled to a spirit ration of half a gill of rum daily, which, before it reaches him, is mixed with three half-gills of water, making half a pint in all. A cask of rum is taken out of the spirit room at six bells (eleven o'clock a.m.), in the presence of various officers, including the captain of the hold, with his implements — spirit pump, measures, etc.

The latter pumps out the necessary quantity, after which the rum cask is re-bunged and returned to the spirit room, which is then locked up until the next day, the keg being placed usually outside the captain's door under the charge of the sentry. After the officers' allowances have been drawn off the rum is mixed with the proper proportion of water and served out to the men.

Effect of a Shave.

"Men have one advantage," said the woman, "and that is when they are shaved they are so sure of themselves. If they are not all right it is the fault of the barber, but if they have a good barber, why, then, their self-assurance is complete. I sat in the lobby of a big hotel yesterday looking at a big fat man who had come out from under the hands of his barber, and I never saw anything so placid with pure complacency as his large, fat face. I wish I could have been so certain that mine was all right as he was of his."

Swearing It In.

"The story's true," declared the married man. "I swear it." And, holding up his hand, he took the oath.

"We believe you," said his listeners. "You needn't swear."

The married man put down his hand, somewhat abashed.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "I have to swear to the truth of my statements so often to my wife that it has become second nature."

THE KING GOES DEER-STALKING

Brings Down Half a Dozen Stags in an Inverness Forest.

London, Oct. 8.—The King spent five hours dee-stalking recently in Mamore Forest, Inverness-shire.

The party, in addition to the King, consisted of Mr. Frank Bibby, Major-General Sir Albert Williams, Sir Arthur Davidson, Colonel Legge, and Mr. Brian Bibby.

The stalkers, gillies, and beaters numbered thirty-five and there were also a score of ponies for use on the hill. The ponies were called into requisition for conveyance to the butts.

The King was accompanied to the Royal butt by his leader and the head stalker and lay in wait for about an hour and a half before any deer came in sight. As soon as the wind shifted, however, a large herd, numbering about 400, appeared, and passed within range.

His Majesty was successful in grassing four stags. Within half an hour a second herd stealthily passed along, and out of this lot two deer fell to the King's rifle. The Royal party accounted altogether for eleven animals.

The King and his suite arrived at Ferryhill, Aberdeen at a quarter to five o'clock on Thursday afternoon, and proceeded to Ballater for Balmoral. The Lord Provost and the magistrates of Aberdeen were in attendance. The weather was dull, but dry.

His Majesty, who was looking well, commanded the attendance of the Lord Provost and Sir Alexander Lyon, and engaged them in conversation. He acknowledged many loyal salutations as the train moved away.

IMPORTANT FACTS

"A quart of milk is practically equal to a pound of beef in food value."

Prof. Dean, of the Ontario Agricultural College: "The composition of wheat is higher in protein and heat of combustion than any other cereal for human food."

Results of analysis by Bureau of Chemistry by U. S. Dept. of Agriculture:

ORANGE MEAT is simply the whole wheat berry, steam cooked, mixed with salt, flaked and toasted. This process develops in each wheat berry the highest percentage of proper sugars. It converts the starches into a form most easily digested and assimilated. ORANGE MEAT and milk is a perfect food.

GERMANY'S EXPENSES

Berlin, Oct. 8.—Figures have been published concerning the increase in the expenses of the empire during the decade approaching its end, whereby it appears that the amount of the budget has risen from $355,600,000 in 1900 to $690,000,000 in 1910. The expenses of the army have increased during these ten years from $165,750,000 to $241,750,000, while the expenses of the navy have risen from $37,500,000 in 1900 to $101,240,000. Expenses in every other department of the Imperial public service have increased because of three things, the increasing population to be administered, the increase in cost of living and the increase in the taxable wealth.

Australia's New Army And Navy

Statute to Raise a Force of 375,000 Men—Dreadnought Cruiser and Smaller Ships to be Built.

Melbourne, Oct. 8.—Acting upon the decisions of the Empire Defence Conference, the Australian Government is now pasing a Bill to introduce compulsory service and raise a trained Army of 375,000 men, and to construct a Navy for local protection.

In the Melbourne House of Representatives on Tuesday Mr. Cook, Minister of Defence, moving the second reading of the Defence Bill, said that Australia had been left in peace to develop her resources, while Great Britain had paid. The time had arrived when Australia should be a buttress, and not a burden to the Mother Country.

He pointed out that Great Britain had no battleship in the Pacific Ocean, while Japan had fifteen such vessels. Great Britain had four armoured cruisers in the Pacific, as compared with Japan's twelve and America's eleven.

Colonel Foxton, the Australian delegate, had been sent to the Defence Conference to say that Australia was anxious to take a large share in the defence of the Pacific.

She would provide an armoured cruiser of the Indomitable class, three unarmoured cruisers of the Bristol class, six destroyers, three submarines and the necessary auxiliary vessels, with a personnel of 2,200 officers and men.

Mr. Cook expressed the belief that when this fleet was fully equipped it would furnish a most potent argument for peace.

Compulsory Training.

The Minister intimated that the Bill provided for compulsory naval and military training, but compulsion would at first be limited to closely populated areas which contained 60 per cent. of the population.

This scheme would provide 40,000 junior cadets between the ages of twelve and fourteen; 70,000 senior cadets between fourteen and eighteen; 37,000 cadets between eighteen and twenty; 29,000 volunteery militia, over twenty; 80,000 compulsory reservists between the ages of twenty and twenty-six after the completion of their training, and 80,000 voluntary reservists over twenty-six from the rifle clubs.

This would give eventually a total force of 260,000 well-trained adults as a striking force ready for war and a second line composed of 116,000 men ready to be mobilised. A compact expeditionary force would be provided for over-sea service when required.

All the naval and military forces would be interchangeable with those of the other parts of the Empire. The estimated annual cost of the whole scheme of naval and military defence was £3,500,000 a year.

This would provide a Navy fit to fight at sea and an army fit to fight on land, which, together, would be a worthy contribution to Imperial defence.

GIRL AS A SOLDIER

London, Oct. 9.—The story of how a pretty Spanish girl rejoined her soldier lover at the front has been brought to light by a correspondent of the "Mirror."

At the beginning of the war a soldier, quartered in one of the northern towns of Spain was sent to the front. [illegible] belonging to this regiment was at the time engaged to an extremely pretty girl, who was serving as table-maid in the same town. On the eve of the departure of the soldier officer on his "movis" to say good-bye, and was rather surprised to find that instead of being dissolved in tears, as he had expected, and almost hoped, the girl was tranquil and to all appearances satisfied with the situation.

He reproached the girl for her apparent coldness, but she only answered: "Never mind, Jose, I know what I do, and why I am doing it. This separation will be much shorter than you suppose."

The next day the regiment left for Melilla, and a few hours afterwards Soledad, the girl, also left the house where she was serving and went to Madrid.

Nothing more had been heard of her when last week one of the officers, who was going down with his regiment to Melilla, was called aside by the sergeant at one of the stations on the way to Malaga, where the troops were to embark.

Among the men, said the sergeant, was a soldier so young and pretty-faced and timid that he thought it must be a woman in disguise.

Brought up before the officer, Soledad—for it was no other—quickly confessed her identity, and begged to be allowed to continue her journey.

Determined not to be separated from Jose, she had managed, by some means or other, to obtain a uniform, and, following the first regiment starting for the front, she had squeezed into the station and into a railway carriage unperceived.

Her fluidity, however, and feminine appearance had aroused the curiosity of the sergeant, and the long adventure was brought to a sudden end.

The officer removed her mildly for her thoughtless escapade, but, unable to resist her entreaties, promised that she would be sent to Melilla.

True to his word, he arranged that she should be employed in one of the hospitals, and he paid the expenses of a feminine outfit and of the journey out of his own private pocket. So Soledad is in Melylla and near Jose after all.

COLONIAL WEAVING CO. HAS A SPLENDID NEW FACTORY

Have Expended $20,000 in New Machinery and Will Double Their Output—Necessitates Increase in Number of Employees.

A MODERN EQUIPMENT

The new home of the Colonial Weaving Company, in the factory ward, makes a fine acquisition to the manufacturing establishments of the south end of the city, and will also enable the company to increase their capacity, thereby resulting in a greater output and necessitating a larger staff. The building is 50 by 200 feet, fronting on Rink street, and extending between Bethune and Stewart streets. It is built of pressed lime brick, and presents a compact and neat appearance. It is a two-storey building, with a saw-tooth roof, and is especially lighted for the purpose of securing as much light as possible to all parts of the building and machinery. On the west side a fire-proof vault, 20 by 12 by 10 feet, has been provided. It is to be used in storing silk and cotton yarns, also patterns and designs, and will enable the company to carry a large stock of merchandise at a low rate of insurance. The building has been heated by the Sturtevant Hot Blast system by the Sturtevant Co. of Boston, Mass. It was installed by Adam Hall. The air is forced through the pipes from the furnace by means of an electric fan. The boiler house and furnishing room is on the north side of the building.

New Machinery.

The Company is installing new and additional machinery, worth $20,000, which will result in doubling the output of the old plant, and will materially increase the number of hands employed. The machinery of the old plant is being removed in such a way that the output will not be decreased. There are already a number of machines in operation in the new factory and it is expected that all the machinery will be working in the new factory within a month. The building has been built particularly for the manufacture of woven labels, and is especially equipped in every detail for that purpose.

The contractors were Messrs. Langton and Dudley, and Mr. Bidwell was the architect. The President of the Company is Mr. E. B. Hall, the [illegible] Mr. Wm. Courtland, and Mr. Epp is superintendent.

A sign is being painted on the south side, and will be very noticeable from the passing passenger trains on the C. P. R. The building is in a cluster formed by the C. P. R., the Stovel Company, Cardogan Works, etc.

GOOD BLOOD AND GOOD HEALTH

do the Result Obtained When Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are Used.

To have good health you must have good blood. If it is only when the blood is bad that the health is poor. The habit in the life-giving fluid of the body—it is therefore an absolute necessity that it should be kept free from all impurities and poisons. To do this nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These pills make new, rich blood with every dose; they drive out every impurity—every poison—and thus give good health. Concerning them Miss Bernadette Lapointe, of St. Jerome, Que., says: "For several years my health was very bad—my system was completely run down. I had indigestion almost continually; my heart was weak; I had headaches and backaches, and was sore all over. My blood was very poor and more than once I was in despair. I tried many advertised remedies, but none of them benefited me. One day a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which did that for her found them good in a case similar to mine. I followed his advice and began taking the pills. They soon gave some slight relief. Encouraged by this I continued using them for several months and they strengthened my whole system. I am now in excellent health and always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the home for if I feel a little out of sorts I take a box of pills and am soon all right again."

The majority of young girls throughout Canada are pale and sickly as Miss Lapointe did. They are sickly all the time and are usually unable to take the enjoyment out of life that every healthy girl should. They need a tonic to build them up—to enable them to withstand the worries of household or business duties; to give them strength to enjoy social life. Such a tonic is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These Pills make blood to bloodless girls; they strengthen the nerves; banish headache and backaches; cure indigestion, rheumatism, heart palpitation, and relieve the many ills of girlhood and womanhood. Sold by all medicine dealers or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"THE HONEYMOONERS"

The most stunning chorus on the road is with "The Honeymooners." Of all the pretty girls who ever left Broadway to go on the road, George M. Cohan has enticed away the prettiest forty for "The Honeymooners," which comes to the "Grand," next Wednesday, October 13th. It would be a shame to let any but beauties wear such adorable costumes and the result is the most stunning chorus on the road. It is a hard-working chorus for there are no less than twenty musical numbers and as they are mostly big hits the encores are numerous. "The Honeymooners" is Cohan's pet song show; he wrote it for himself to have a safe and certain vehicle for an all summer run on Broadway and he loaded it up with his best. The result was a record breaking engagement all summer at the New Amsterdam Theatre and a production that was hailed by the critics as the best thing Cohan has ever done. The New York Herald declared that it was the "Big Cohan Show." "The Honeymooners" comes with a powerful metropolitan cast.

PRODUCTS OF FARM

Market Overstocked With Vegetables and Fruits and Large Number of Buyers Were Present—Prices Were Fair.

BUY FOR THE WINTER

Peterborough people have every opportunity of obtaining a good supply of vegetables, fruit, etc., for winter, as the farmers have a grand harvest of practically all the products in chief demand. Potatoes are plentiful, the general price being 60 cents. Apples, too, are to be had in plenty, and the smaller vegetables at easy prices, are exhibited in abundance. To-day's market was exceptionally large and attracted hundreds of buyers. The present abundance will not last long as the farmers begin to fall away in numbers as soon as the disagreeable weather sets in.

Walter Mahaffy Appeared Again Before the Magistrate for Stealing a Bicycle That Was Recovered in Millbrook.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY

Walter Mahaffy pleaded not guilty to having stolen a bicycle, when he came up before Magistrate Dumble at the Police Court this morning. Chief Rowzel was not ready to go on to-day and the prisoner was remanded until Tuesday. The wheel, it is alleged was stolen a year ago last summer. It was taken to Millbrook and there disposed of for two dollars. On information received yesterday from the original owner of the bicycle it was learned that it was in Millbrook and on communicating with the Chief Constable there, who made investigation, it was recovered.

The Canadian Chicle Company are About to Establish a Branch Factory in Buffalo, N. Y.—Will Buy the Raw Material.

ENTERPRISING FIRM

Word has ben received from Mr. Fred O'Connor of the Canadian Chicle Company, who has been on a business trip to Mexico in the interests of the progressive local firm, that he has succeeded in purchasing a year's supply of chicle and is now on his way home. Mr. Jos. Beyette of the Chicle Company, leaves to-morrow night for Cleveland, where he will meet Mr. O'Connor and the two will purchase new machinery ofr the purpose of refining the raw material. They will then go to Buffalo to locate the new plant which the company proposes to establish in that city, and to purchase the machinery for the American branch. On their return to Peterborough the Company will put on the market a one-cent gum, the "biggest chew on earth for a cent." The Canadian Chicle Company has been working up an immense business, the trade assuming such proportions that an enlargement of the local plant is being contemplated and will likely be carried out in the near future.

"Say! Is My Hat On Crooked?" It Should Be, To Show Style

ANNA HELD, WEARING HER LATEST HAT ACCORDING TO THE STYLE.

Say! Is my hat on crooked?

"No? Why, how provoking!"

Which only goes to show that the boudoir talk of the modern well-dressed woman is just as different as it can be from what we used to hear. But, you see, it's all due to the styles. They've changed more than the women have, which is saying a good deal.

Woman in matters of style is the human antithesis. Old Noah Webster says antithesis is "opposition, contrast, expression by contrast." He never saw one of those befeathered hats on the side of a woman's head, or he'd have changed his definition to a shorter and better word.

The question, then, no longer is: "Is my hat on straight?" but "Is my hat on crooked?"

Imagine a man politely going up to a woman nowadays and saying: "Pardon me, but your hat is on crooked!" Wow! Wouldn't there be an explosion?

Did you ever stop to think how the style change came about?

In Paris, wher all the styles come from, the race course at Longchamps is the place chosen to show off the new things in women's wear.

This year's meeting was held in a driving windstorm, but the women with their new hats and clothes were there just the same. Their big hats blew all over one side of their faces.

"Fine!" said the men. "You must leave 'em there all the time."

Anna Held brought the style to this side. In fact, some cruel men say Anna crossed the ocean ahead of time to be first to exhibit it. Anyway, it caught on amazingly, and the men who have been tired of buttoning their wives' gowns up the back can now pause long enough to answer the new form of the question:

"Is my hat on crooked,

GROWING IMPORTANCE OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL IN CHURCH WORK

Nothing can emphasize more markedly the growing conviction of the importance of the Sunday School as an integral portion of the Church's work than the efforts now being made in many dioceses to provide field secretaries for the diocese, who shall have full charge of this department of work, aiding and abetting the clergy in the betterment of their schools. For two years past the Sunday School Committee of the Diocese of Toronto has been looking for a suitable man to fill this important position, and has at last secured the services of a man who will be admirably suited for the work, viz., the Rev. C. V. Pilcher, M.A., late lecturer in the Greek Testament at Wycliffe College, Toronto. Mr. Pilcher is a man of about 30 years of age, son of Rev. Francis Pilcher, of Oriel College, Oxford. He was educated at Shrewsbury House (1893-1896), being a scholar of the school, and leaving with an Exhibition. In 1896 he entered Hertford College, Oxford, also having an Exhibition from the College. He took a second-class in the Honours School of Classical Moderations, also in the final Honour School of Literae Humaniores, and a third second in the Honour School of Theology, winning also the Senior Greek Testament prize. He graduated B. A. in 1900 and M. A. in 1905. In 1903 Mr. Pilcher was ordained to the curacy of St. Thomas', Birmingham, and in 1905 became Domestic Chaplain to the Bishop of Durham and Principal to his Hostel. It was from here that he was called to the Lectureship in Greek Testament at Wycliffe College, Toronto, from which position he retired about a year ago. While in England during the past year Mr. Pilcher qualified for the degree of B. D. from the University of Oxford, which degree will shortly be conferred upon him. Coming out to Canada, hoping to find work again in this Diocese of Toronto, the Sunday School Committee of the Diocese nominated him to the Bishop for the position of field secretary. The Bishop having appointed him to this position, Mr. Pilcher will begin his work in the diocese from October 1st next.

IS YOUR COAT DUSTY?

You Probably Have the White Scab of Dandruff on It.

If your coat or shoulders have a white dust upon it, the chances are that it is from dandruff. The only way to permanently cure dandruff is to remove the cause, which is a germ. Newbro's Herpicide kills the germ. Every toilet table should have such a hair-dressing that contains also the destroyer of the dandruff and hair falling germ. It stops all irritation, keeps the scalp sweet, pure and wholesome. Remember that something claimed to be "just as good" will not do the work of genuine Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c, in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Sold by Jury & McDermid, Druggists; also Payne's Drug Store. One Dollar bottles guaranteed.

NEARLY COMPLETED

New Passenger Boat at East City Docks for Fourteen Feet.

Mr. Wm. Evans, Government inspector of boats, was in the city yesterday in connection with the inspection of the new boat which Mr. Wm. Hickey and Sons have been building at the East City locks. The boat, with the exception of the installation of the machinery, is about completed, and passed a very creditable inspection. The boat was built for Mr. W. Burgoyne of Fenelon Falls. It will be taken up there in about a couple of weeks. It will be used as a passenger boat and in size and workmanship is similar to the steamer Sovereign. It will be put on the waters the first thing next season.

MARVELLOUS HEALING POWERS

The most severe test to which a healing ointment is ever put is in the cure of piles. So remarkable has Dr. Chase's Ointment proven in the cure of this loathsome and common that many people refer to its efficacy as magical and marvellous. After the first few applications it positively stops the dreadful itching and then gradually and naturally heals up the sores.

LEADER OF SUFFRAGETTES IS TO LECTURE IN AMERICA

Over Three Thousand Pounds Collected in Ten Minutes at Farewell Meeting to Mrs. Pankhurst—Refers to Treatment of Her "Sisters."

50,000 POUNDS SUBSCRIBED

Examiner Special.

New York, Oct. 9.—A cable despatch to The American from London says: Under the auspices of the Women's Social Political Union a large and very enthusiastic meeting was held in Albert Hall Thursday night. Its purpose was to give a rousing farewell to Mrs. Pankhurst, who is leaving shortly for America on a lecture tour in behalf of women's suffrage. Mrs. Pankhurst received a great ovation.

Another object of the meeting was to protest against the forcible feeding of suffragettes now in jail.

Mrs. Pankhurst said: "The performance of these abstentious women in jail is a modern miracle. The Government may flog and hang women, but it can do no worse than feed them when they decline to eat."

Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, who presided, invited a donation of funds.

She said that £50,000 were needed, and that £49,584 had been already subscribed.

Within ten minutes after she made her plea an additional £3,000 had been raised.

LIBERALS AID INJURED BOY

Examiner Special.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—Although it was no fault of theirs, a number of the Liberal leaders of this city have agreed to educate Amedee Thomas, a sixteen-year-old boy, who was injured by fireworks at the Laurier demonstration last October.

The boy, in company with several other boys, was playing on the streets, when a rocket exploded and perforated his throat. He will be disfigured for life. Senator Dandurand and other Liberals are paying for medical attendance, and will educate the boy in one of the best schools in the city.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Enthusiastic Meeting of Women's Christian Temperance Union Was Held in the Y.M.C.A. Rooms Yesterday.

GOOD ATTENDANCE

Yesterday afternoon a very largely attended meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held in the Y. M. C. A. building. Mrs. (Rev.) Campbell occupied the chair, and, after devotion the work of the union was carefully surveyed.

Very interesting references were made concerning the good work done by the White Ribbon Tidings and the members were exhorted to take a deeper interest in its extension as it was known that a temperance paper could do more effective work for the home.

The president of the Peterborough Moral and Social Reform League gave a rapid survey of what has already been done in the local option campaign and outlined the work that had been projected for the remaining weeks of the ear. Great and unbounded enthusiasm was struck home to the hearts of all present when it was announced that Governor Glenn, the man of affairs, who carried North Carolina by a majority of 40,000 for prohibition, would spend two days in Peterborough in the near future.

The Union unanimously decided to join in the Women's Prayer Circle to be conducted in the parlours of the Y. W. C. A. every Sunday afternoon while the mass meetings are being held in the Opera House. These meetings will be started after Dr. Crafts has opened the campaign.

It was also unanimously decided to accept the offer of the league to provide the speaker for the opera house mass meeting on Sunday, October 24, while Miss Sproule, the courageous and indefatigable missionary of the Ontario W.C.T.U. among the lumbermen and miners of North Ontario will be the speaker.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

DISCOVERED TWO GAS SIDEWALKS

Workmen of the Board of Works Department in charge of Mr. Martin Neary in excavating for a sewer service in front of Halpin's Blacksmith shop, on Hunter street unearthed two prehistoric sidewalks, crumbling relics of the wood age.

One was four feet below the cement sidewalk and the other two feet lower. The workmen were much surprised that of the same time they did not discover the original plans of the Isolation Hospital.

NEWFOUNDLAND PAYS TRIBUTE

To the Good Work Dodd's Kidney Pills Are Doing.

Fishermen Regard Them as a Boon to Mankind—Mr. Frank Banfield Tells How They Cured His Backache.

Garnish, Fortune Bay, Nfld., Oct. 8. (Special)—Among the fishermen here, who through exposure to wet and cold are subject to those pains and aches which come from diseased Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills are looked upon as a positive boon to mankind. They are never tired of telling how their Backaches and their Rheumatism vanish before the great Kidney remedy.

Among many others, Mr. Frank Banfield, after years of suffering, has found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills, and here is what he is telling his friends:—

"I find Dodd's Kidney Pills the best medicine for Backache I have ever used. I only use dtwo boxes and they cured me of Backache I had had for five years. It started through a strain My father's back also bothered him, and he got some relief from one pill I gave him. They were too precious to give him more. All persons suffering from Backache should use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Why do Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Backache? Simply because Backache is Kidney ache, and Dodd's Kidney Pills positively cure all Kidney aches and ills. This has been proved in thousands of cases in Canada. If you haven't used them yourself ask your neighbours.

HOTELKEEPER IN COURT

Charged With a Breach of Liquor License Act on Saturday, Sept. 25th.

A local hotelkeeper was arraigned before the Magistrate at the Police Court this morning charged with a breach of the liquor license act on Saturday, September 25th, it being alleged that he sold after seven o'clock on that day. Mr. James Haverson, K.C., of Toronto appeared for the accused and pleaded not guilty. Mr. W. H. Moore prosecuted. Two witnesses for the prosecution were heard. They swore that they purchased a flask of whiskey at eight o'clock on Saturday the 25th.

Mr. Haverson asked for an adjournment as two important witnesses for the defence were unable to be present.

At the time of going to press Mr. Haverson and Mr. Moore were still arguing on whether an adjournment should be granted or not.

Fifteen Years of Agony

"Fruit-a-tives" Promptly Cured Him After Doctors Had Failed To Give Relief.

CHARLES BARRETT, Esq.

Harbor au Bouche,

Antigonish Co., N.S., March 24, 1909.

"I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the great benefit I received from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered from Biliousness and Dyspepsia for fifteen years and I consulted physicians and took many kinds of ordinary medicine, but got no relief. I was in miserable health all the time and nothing did me any good. I read the testimonial of Archibald McEachain, of Ottawa, and I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives." I have taken a number of boxes of "Fruit-a-tives," but before I had taken one box I felt better and now am entirely well.

"I am thankful to be well after fifteen years suffering, and I am willing to have this statement published for the sake of other sufferers, and to them I strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives."

NO EXCUSE.

The habit of drunkenness has been driven from one stronghold to another as a disqualifying element in regard to occupancy of positions of responsibility, great or small. The last stronghold from which it is to be dislodged is the bench. A western judge is to be tried by commission on a charge of being drunk on the bench, the last place, in a double sense, one would expect the drink habit to exhibit its work. The bibulistic judge's friends, without disputing the correctness of the charge, claim that there are "mitigatory circumstances" which, when they are known "will result in his exoneration." There are "mitigating circumstances" in connection with most of the consumption of strong drink—in some cases it is water, in others appolinaris of Randor, but there can hardly be any "mitigating circumstances" that will exonerate any man for appearing at the post of duty in a drunken condition. A mechanic coming drunk to his lathe, might, in a certain sense, as well come without his right hand; a judge coming drunk to the bench might as well come without his head, and even better, for in the latter event he would do no mischief, as he is almost certain to [illegible] he attempts to poise the scales of justice according to the impulses of a befuddled brain.

In this age of keen competition and of unemployment, even in the most prosperous periods, a man must be at his chet to win and hold a position, in any sphere of activity or occupation. Apart from every consideration of morality, the prudential and economic reasons that justify and demand sobriety are overwhelming. As the world goes there are no "mitigating circumstances" that will ever excuse drunkenness on duty, or acts committed under its influence. An attempt is made to excuse murder and systematic wife beating performed by Blythe upo his wife, on the plea that he was drunk. The acceptance and application of the theory that drunkenness can be pleaded as an excuse, or even mitigating circumstance, for the commission of crime would lead to untold mischief. A depraved or vicious man bent on crime has only to prime himself with drink in order to escape the full penalty of his crime. While it may not always be proper to exact the pound of flesh in dealing with offenders against our laws, still we must avoid the opposite extreme of offering a premium for crime by applying the monstrous doctrine that man by making himself drunk, can commit crime with any hope of impunity.

SPURRING OUR EXPORT TRADE.

In the past thirteen years the total trade of Canada has grown from 230 millions to more than 630 millions per year. Coeval with the advent of a Liberal administration in August, 1896, prosperity began a new reign in Canada and there has been no intervening interregnum. The policy of the Government had its effect and this was aided by specifically directed efforts to extend and stimulate our trade. These efforts have at no time been relaxed and fresh evidence of activity are frequently presented. By reason of the policy of our nearest neighbours and nearest and most natural market, we have been forced to cast about for new markets, and not without success. Our trade with Britain and France has ben greatly increased, and we have sought to improve our trade relations with other of the dominions beyond the seas. One element of the improvement of our foreign trade is the dissemination of the knowledge of what we have to sell. In many countries there are opeings for placig our products remaining unfilled, because it is not known wher the void exists that we can supply what is needful. To remedy this defect, the Deputy Minister of the Department of Trade and Commerce has issued a circular to manufacturers and producers, announcing the important departure of the establishment of an Export Bureau. The circular reads thus:

The Department of Trade and Commerce.

Export Bureau.

Ottawa, October 1st, 1909.

The Department of Trade and Commerce desires to announce its intention of compiling an Index of Canadian Manufacturers, and Producers, generally, who desire to extend their trade abroad.

For this purpose the attached form should be executed and forwarded in the enclosed envelope to the Department without delay.

It would assist the Department materially if the details under "Articles Manufactured or Produced" be entered in alphabetical order.

The list compiled by the Department will be given the preference at all times when the names of such Canadian firms are required by intending purchasers abroad.

As the information is received at the Department it will be forwarded to all the Canadian Trade Commissioners in the various parts of the world, and be systematically indexed and be readily available in their respective offices.

F. C. T. O'HARA,
Deputy Minister.

This is the attached form referred to:

Export Bureau, Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa.

Name of firm . . . . . .
Street and No. . . . .City or Town of . .
Province of . . . . . .
Detailed list of articles manufactured or produced—
. . . . . .
. . . . . .

From the above it will be seen that what the department has undertaken promises to stimulate trade development and it is further evident that the plan can not be attended with the fullest measure of success without the active co-operation of those most directly concerned as producers of exportable articles.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Finding the North Pole is easy compared with building an Isolation Hospital.

Typhoid is a dirt disease, and accumulated and pestering garbage is the most dangerous form of dirt.

If this glorious weather holds, Thanksgiving Day, October 25th, can be celebrated by picnics and regattas.

Montreal is credited with the largest birth-rate in the world. What the gain where the rate of infant mortality is preportionate?

The Montreal Herald dubs Peterborough a "village." All the less for Aldermen to steal, even if our city fathers mould their depravity upon the Montreal pattern.

Cook and Peary, with a good deal of trumpeting took omic opera possession of the Pole. Capt. Bernier without any hot air or cold air either took possession of an archipelago, planted the Canadian flag and set a seal on one of the islands.

"The Toronto Mail and Empire," says the Ottawa Free Press, proposes a vote of thanks to Mr. Burnham, the Conservative candidate in West Peterborough "for the gallant struggle in which he engaged." We beg to second the resolution—with this amendment, namely, that Mr. Burnham be asked to pay the expense of deporting the patriots whose perjured evidence proved his case to be founded upon reeds."

A TORY FIZZLE

(Belleville Ontario)

Of all the prominent Liberals in the Province of Ontario there is not one whom the Tories would more dearly love to "down" than the Hon. J. R. Stratton of Peterborough. A most kindly and genial gentleman possessed of conspicuous ability, the proprietor of the Examiner—a strong and ably conducted exponent of Liberal opinion—and withal, a man who has by his personal qualities, deservedly won great popularity in his city and district, Mr. Stratton, several years ago won the seat for the Legislature in a strongly Conservative constituency for the Liberal party and held it safely in contest after contest. Hence the hatred which some of the Tory politicians entertained for Mr. Stratton, to compass whose defeat they had in vain exerted every means in their power.

Mr. Stratton not only held his seat by very large majorities in every contest, but he became a member of the Government of Ontario and proved himself one of the ablest members of the Cabinet. However, when the Ross Government was reorganized a few months previous to its defeat, Mr. Stratton retired from office and did not enter the field at the next general election.

The exultation of the Tories was great. They won West Peterborough by a large majority, and fondly they imagined that Mr. Stratton was down and out. It was a rude shock to them when he last year re-entered public life as the candidate of his party for the House of Commons in his old constituency, and still ruder shock to them when he was returned by the handsome majority of 333.

Deeply chagrined by their crushing defeat, Mr. Burnham and his friends at once began to hunt for evidence in support of their assertions of corruption on Mr. Stratton's behalf and the result was that they entered a protest against him, charging bribery in person and by agents and all sorts of electoral corruption. After many delays and loud beastings by the Tories of what they were going to prove by means of 200 charges, the case finally came up for trial last week before Judges McMahon and Magee, with the result that the fabric of alleged corruption which had been built up fell to pieces like a house of cards when subject to judicial investigation. The evidence on behalf of the petitioners was shown to be the rankest kind of perjury, and Mr. Stratton and those of his supporters against whom the perjurers had sworn, were acquitted of any wrongdoing of any kind whatsoever.

Mr. Stratton has been put to a great deal of annoyance and, no little expense through the vindictiveness of his political opponents, but he will be all the stronger in the estimation of all fair-minded people for having emerged triumphantly from so trying an ordeal a ndfor having unravelled the entangled skein of falsehood in which it was sought to net him. He can comfort himself with the reflection that it is ever the best apple tree about which the greatest number of stones are found.

SAVE THE SUMMER.

(Collier's Weekly.)

It's up ot Canada to lengthen her summers so as to keep the tourists here, keep the people out in the open, on the lakes, and by the seas, keep the children out of school for another fortnight. To save the summer two weeks longer there would have to be some readjustments. The Toronto Fair would have to be shifted to the last half of September. This is no hardship. Many farmers and tired harvesters are crying for just that change. How about the schools? Well, there are many colleges and schools that do not open till the middle of September anyway. The longer a boy lives out in the open, the stronger and better will he be for work through the winter. Then there is the tourist business of Canada. It is worth looking after. The rich people of the United States, having discovered our beautiful summer, part from it with regret. With small coaxing they could be induced to stretch it into two weeks more. The little States of Maine is reported as collecting twelve million dollars annually from tourists and sportsmen. If Maine can do that, our vast wilderness should do ten times as much. Thirteen years ago, thirty hundred tourists passed in, via Toronto, to the Highlands every summer. To-day these pilgrims of pleasure number thirty thousand, and this is only one of Canada's great playgrounds. How many visitors are induced to cross over in winter, lured by the sparkle of Quebec and the bracing outdoor sports. We can only estimate. It is surely large. Suppose there are fifty thousand tourists travelling on our railways, living in our hotels, shopping in our shops on September 1st. At the very lowest they would spend two dollars a day. A million and a half in two weeks. This is a golden stream, a Danae shower, that is worth cherishing. We take the stranger in and do well by him. If we can contrive to hold half a month longer, we can do him that much better. Therefore Save the Summer.

LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN.

The matter appearing in this space from time to time is furnished by the Temperance and Moral Reform Leagues of this City, who have arranged for its Publication.

IS PETERBOROUGH TOO LARGE FOR LOCAL OPTION?

A prominent Peterborough citizen this week expressed a fear that Peterborough is too large a city to attempt to enforce a local option by-law. People who have such apprehensions cannot be acquainted with the conditions that exist in large cities that have been under local option for years.

There are only about 20 open bars in Peterborough. In Memphis, Tenn., there were 700. On the 1st of July this year, Memphis adopted prohibition. The official records of the police department show that during this first month under the new State law, with its former seven hundred saloons outlawed, arrests for drunkenness were 41 as compared with 106 during July, 1908, under wide-open conditions.

Would it Hurt the Hotels?

The fear was expressed a few years ago that the adoption of local option would put the hotels out of business, but has been disproved by the results that have followed in centres where local option exists. In many of these centres the hotel accommodation to-day is far superior to what it ever was before.

Bowmanville adopted local option on May 1st of this year. A committee of citizens had previously been formed in order to secure possession of one of the leading hotels. A joint stock company has since been organized, a considerable sum of money spent in refitting and making other improvements, and the hotel is now being run as a first-class hotel on strictly temperance principles. Commercial travellers who now visit Bowmanville praise the accommodation of the new hotel highly. Hotels, stables, and sheds have been repaired and a trustworthy man employed to look after the interests of the public and sheds are free as formerly.

At Winchester, Ont., since the adoption of local option, what is said to be the finest hotel between Montreal and Kingston, not including Ottawa, has been erected. Owen Sound has also provided splendid accommodation for the travelling public. Already the advisability of providing high-class hotel accommodation in Peterborough after the adoption of local option, should such action be decreed necessary, has been discussed, and it is stated that ample capital will be forthcoming if required. The same is true of hotel stables for farmers' rigs.

Another Illustration.

The Charlottetown Guardian, in a recent article, dealing with the result of the prohibitory law, which now governs the whole Province, says:

"The law has proved to be most beneficial in this city. In the old days, with 2,000 less people, we kept sixteen policemen. Now we have but six—one on duty at the police station at night and another there by day, and only two patrolmen on duty by day and two by night about the city.

"All the evils predicted to result from prohibition have failed to materialise. It was said prohibition would only lead to more drunkenness, that we should have no decent hotels, that it would injure trade and so on. We have reduced the arrests for drunkenness to one-fourth or one-fifth of what they were under license; trade is better and larger, payments more prompt, we have better hotels, better streets and sidewalks, better fire and light service than ever before.

"Doubters have been convinced and former opponents converted to prohibition. The law has the support of all the better element among the people, and of the clergy, Protestant and Catholic alike. "It has made good." No political party and no man of either party among our thirty members of the Legislature has in seven years past, or will now, propose to repeal it.

"Year after year it has been strengthened by amendments proposed by the temperance people. The inspector in this city was appointed on the recommendation of the Temperance Alliance. The liquor interest has almost ceased to be a political factor in the city or province.

"Some liquor is imported, for the province has not the power to prohibit the importation. Tourists, travellers, and sailors bring it in here, and at Summerside, and the small outports. Some dishonest druggists and doctors gave trouble for a time, but convictions and exposures have checked this. There is no open sale.

"Many a poor drunkard has lived to bless the prohibitory law, while wives and children bless it, too. The temperance people unanimously declare it to be the best weapon yet placed in their hands with which to fight the liquor traffic. All the daily newspapers, three in number, now cordially support the law on its merits, though two of them were opposed to it a few years ago.

Local Option Conditions Investigated

Like Peterborough, the citizens of Georgetown, Ont., intend to vote on Local Option next January. Mr. R. J. Creelman of that town, has been investigating the working of the local option law.

In a recent interview with a representative of the Georgetown Herald, he said:

"I visitied Owen Sound, Durham, Prieceville and Flesherton. In Owen Sound, the impression I got was that Local Option was a decided success. The town is growing very fast and business people are enjoying a larger and growing trade. I found also that some homes that under license were in a sad condition through the head of the house being a drinker, have been transformed under Local Option. The head of the house has quit drinking, new furniture has been purchased and in one case that came under my notice $250.00 has been deposited in the bank.

"In Durham, I found there was some drinking, but the six business men to whom I spoke said there is not a fraction of the drinking there was under license. The depression in the cement business is being felt in the town, otherwise business men are not complaining. In Flesherton and Priceville I consulted quite a number of citizens. The testimony was that the moral tone of these places had been greatly improved. The taking away of the liquor had helped men to keep sober. One storekeeper said he was getting a lot of money that formerly went over the bar, and his cash business had improved.' Mr. Creelman is very enthusiastic over local option."

Does Local Option Pay?

Those people who are afraid that if local option is granted in Peterborough there will be a loss of revenue from the sale of licenses, overlook the fact that there is an even greater saving effected in other ways. York, Neb., is a local option town. It has recently adopted this method of advertising. On an attractive picture post card is the picture of a policeman, and under it the following inscription: "Entire police force, York, Neb., a city of 8,500 people."

The same post card contains the following items of information concerning the city:

No saloons for twenty-eight years.

No drug store permits since 1906.

One police (night and day), salary $60 per month, no fees.

Mayor's salary $1000 per year. Councilmen's salary $50 per year.

No occupation tax for business houses.

Police judge no salary, fees only $33.45 a year; average for eight years less than $30.

Total number fined for intoxication for one year, eight.

Arrest for disturbances and misdemeanours, six.

No city paupers and nine county paupers, all over sixty years of age.

Total city indebtedness (no floating) bonded $37,000.

Taxable property $5,542,707.00, assessed one-fifth of the value; levy 27 mills.

Value of school property $126,000.

Two and one-half miles of brick pavement.

City water system and thirteen sewer districts.

Electric light and power, night and day service.

Gas for heating, cooking and lighting.

Two telephone companies and three railroads.

Badly Hurt In Thresher

BLOOD POISON SET IN

Healed in odd places, broke out in another—Cure effected by Dr. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Truth is often stranger than fiction and many of the cures brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment are more like miracles than anything else.

You generally hear of this great Ointment as a cure for eczema or piles. In the case we report to-day the trouble was blood poison. You know how dreadfully dangerous this is. You know how helpless doctors are in its treatment. Read about this cure brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. O. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., writes: "I feel like shouting the praises of Dr. Chase's Ointment. While threshing grain my son got badly hurt. One of the men who was pitching sheaves, missed the sheaf and ran the prongs of the fork into my son's leg. He did not take much notice of it and in a day or two it got sore and very itchy and blood poison set in. We did everything for it but it would heal one place and break out at another, and kept on this way for three months.

"Finally I thought of Dr. Chase's Ointment and in a week's time we noticed a wonderful change. By the use of three boxes he was completely cured and the wounds healed up. There has not been a sign of a sore on him since.

"I might also say that my husband was cured of a very bad case of piles by the use of two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment. It is a wonderful Ointment."

Wherever there is itching or irritation of the skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with every assurance that the results will be prompt and satisfactory.

PRISONER SHOT DOWN

WEDDING GUESTS TAKEN ILL

Brest, Oct. 9.—The Mayor of Eliant, near here wishing to celebrate the marriage of his daughter, invited about 700 persons. Some fifty of these have been taken ill, it is supposed as the result of eating pork-pie.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

There are other disturbers of the peace besides railway engineers, who clang bells and make their engines emit ear-piercing shrieks and whistles at night. The residents living in the vicinity of Stewart and King streets, have very often of late been awakened from their slumbers by the unrestrained behaviour of a few youths travelling homewards at unseasonable hours. Sometimes their hilarity has taken the form of singing, and at others of indulging in most offensive and blatant blasphemy. A new change was rung on Tuesday last, at 2.15 a.m. by an indulgence in long-continued bursts of Bacchanalian laughter, which could have been heard several blocks distant from the G. T. R. station. The police have all they can do to patrol the principal thoroughfares, but if they could manage to pounce on these cheerful gentlemen some evening the whole neighbourhood would rise up and call them blessed.

One often hears comments on the great disparity in salaries and wages earned in the various occupations of life. One of the stock illustrations is that of the bank manager who gets his thousands a year when the poor, struggling minister gets his hundreds. One does not need to think long, however, to see that there is a very solid if a very selfish reason for the difference in emolument in these two cases. Bank managers and superintendents of financial concerns have the care of untold wealth under their supervision. To them men trust for the safeguarding of the means which enable them to obtain the necessaries of life, and they know well that in order to ensure the security of their funds they must pay well to obtain the best officers. With ministers of the Gospel it is different. They may be and, indeed, often are, men who are endowed with the brightest intellects, but they work in a cause which, while it should undoubtedly appeal to all our best and purest emotions somehow fails, and always has failed to awaken a general interest in those whom they so willingly strive to reclaim. This is a material world, where even the preaching of a Savonarola would be allowed to float away on the impalpable air unheeded at the first ill-omened whisper from the stock market. Until church going is generally looked upon as a necessity and not as a species of social conventionality, a sort of gathering to which we must go in our best clothes, in order to be reckoned respectable by our neighbours, our clergy will not be treated aright. In order to come to their own mankind in general will have to recognise that spiritual necessaries are at least as important as material necessaries, in the production of a healthy and vigorous nationality.

Talking of disparities in salaries brings to our mind another instance:

When J. K. Paulding was Secretary of the U. S. Navy, he wanted some information as to the source of a certain river, and wrote the following note on the subject to a village postmaster:

"Sir,—This department desires to know how far the Tombighee River runs up."

Resp. Yours, etc.,

By return mail he got the following reply:

Sir.—The Tombighee does not run up at all; it runs down.

Very resp. yours, etc.

The matter was reported to Kendall, the Postmaster-General, who failed to appreciate the humour of the answer, and the postmaster was notified of his discharge from the post office in the following epistle:

Sir,—Your appointment as postmaster is revoked; you will turn over the funds, etc., pertaining to your office to your successor."

To this the following reply was received:

"Sir,—The revenue for the quarter, ending Sept. 30, has been 95 cents; the expenditure for same period for tallow candles and twine, one dollar and five cents. I trust my successor is instructed to adjust the balance."

This little story reminds us again of a backwoods' magistrate, whom we knew well. A discerning Government had appointed him to that position, thankfully giving him a copy of the Revised Statutes, the Criminal Code, and nothing a year for the privilege of upholding the majesty of the law in his district. He found his work not too onerous and had nothing to complain of in that regard. But one day there landed on him a party of seven to have a deed drawn for a certain property. There were five grown-ups, two children and a dog. They had driven fifteen miles and arrived just in time for dinner. The deeds took long in drawing up, and they stayed to tea. When they departed to their homes the magistrate, in making up his profit and loss account, found that he had earned three dollars in hard cash on the one hand, but that on the other, his pantry was absolutely depleted of provisions, his girl had given warning, one of the visiting children had smashed a window with a stick and the visiting dog had killed four of his best Langshan hens.

These are just mentioned as other cases where salaries and emolument are hardly proportionate to the work done.

A good ear for music, a large vocabulary and a few ideas are really about the only essentials requisite to a rhymester but it needs more than these for the production of a poet. In order to be a poet, a man or woman must be possessed of a philosophical mind and of a profound knowledge of the human heart. Such a combination of essentials is not to be found more than once or twice in a generation, and when it is found, the pity of it is that only a few appreciate the importance of the discovery. We have met one or two benighted beings in our time who considered themselves poets. One, in particular, we remember, who, when the divine afflatus surged up within him, would rush to the water-side, or sit at his window, with his hands in his hair, gazing vacantly at the heavens. He saw all sorts of beautiful visions, which, unfortunately, as soon as he attempted to depict them on paper, became as distorted as the shadows when a pebble is thrown into a stream. He was fond of apostrophising the heavenly bodies, and of likening them to imaginary loved ones:

"Perhaps she is some beautiful star,
Perhaps she is gazing on me from afar;
Her eyes were the eyes of a fond gazelle,
And her heart was mine and I loved her well."

The above was a quatrain on which he asked for our unbiassed opinion, and we gave it to him. He said that he might have known when he came to such a forsaken country as Muskoka, that nobody was likely to possess a soul above cows and turnips, anyhow. It is very hard to have to be unkind to anybody, but there is an argument in shoe leather, when properly applied, that brings even fools to their senses, and it certainly worked wonders with him. If the same remedy were applied to other would-be poets, when young, the long-suffering public would be undoubted gainers.

ENGLISH LADY'S SUICIDE

FILM GIVES SECRET AWAY

Paris, October 8.—In a crowded Paris music hall a startling scene occured on Monday. The hall was in darkness, a cinematograph display being the turn of the moment. Suddenly a piercing shriek rent the air, and a woman in the audience fell on the floor in hysterics. Her husband, who was with her, also showed signs of emotion.

And no wonder, for the film, depicting the luncheon hour at the Rheims aviation meeting, had shown him his wife sitting at a cafe table tete-a-tete with a former lover.

The husband was a commercial traveller whose duties took him from home during that particular week, and while he was away his wife was supposed to be staying with relatives in the country.

When the woman had recovered her husband bitterly reproached her, and on reaching their home he produced a revolver and fired at her. The woman dropped on the floor and the man walked out and gave himself up for murder. When the police arrived, however, they found the woman unhurt. She had already fled again.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

London, Oct. 9.—The Magherafelt (County Derry) Old Age Pensions Committee on Wednesday cancelled 150 old age pensions. All the pensions had been paid from January 1.

The census returns showed each of the 150 recipients to be under seventy, one of them being under sixty. Many of the pensioners were women.

In fifteen cases the census of 1841 and 1851 gave no particulars, and these the committee held over for the production of further family records.

Nearly all these pensions had been granted on the recommendation of clergymen, who certified that they believed the applicants were seventy years of age.

NURSE PURSES THIEF

London, Oct. 8.—Many compliments were paid to Nurse Stebbington, of the North-Western Hospital, at the London Sessions on Tuesday, for her share in the capture of a thief named Harry Webb, aged twenty-four, a hawker.

He was sentenced to three years' penal servitude for stealing a chain and seal from a travelling salesman, Robert Dunn, in broad daylight, at Hoxton.

Miss Stebbington saw the robbery committed and followed Webb through the streets of Hoxton for half a mile, until he was arrested.

"Very few of the public would have been willing to have done this, and I thank you most sincerely," said the judge to the nurse.

FACTS ABOUT DREAD CANCER

Disease That Baffles Medical Skill and Research--What is Known About It and Some of the Erroneous Ideas Held in Regard to It.

Cancer is neither infectious nor contagious. You may live with and nurse a cancer patient with entire safety.

It is probably not hereditary; this, however, is not positively established.

Even if your father and mother and brothers and sisters all happened to die of cancer, your own likelihood of suffering from cancer is, perhaps, no greater than one whose family history is free from any cancer taint.

There is no known cure for cancer. For diphtheria science has found a positive specific; for tuberculosis there are treatments which often bring cures, and for pneumonia there are treatments which prove satisfactory in many cases.

But cancer defies medical skill. No known treatment will prevent cancer, and no known drug will cure it after it has advanced. Surgery, if skilfully and thoroughly done, will cut out the roots of cancer in some cases. And cancers on the surface of the skin can sometimes be healed by skilful application of light rays.

Cancer is unlike any disease known to science. It is not a germ, it is not a hostile invading microbe. The trouble begins within our own bodies. Natural, normal, useful cells (and the entire human body is only a vast collection of cells held together and controlled by the nerves. These independent cells multiply rapidly, increase in size, prey upon and devour the neighbouring cells and finally cause death.

What makes these cells throw off control? What can be done to regulate them? The best minds in the world of medicine are focused on this problem.

The following are a few facts reproduced from the New York American:

It is Positively Known

That all vertebrate creatures are subject to it.

That it is not an infectious or contagious disease.

That fat people are more susceptible than lean people.

That men have far more cases on the face than women.

That it may occur without irritation or any other recognizable cause.

That it is increasing from year to year throughout the civilized world.

That it is provoked by irritation—as by a pipe at the lips or by a belt around the waist.

That people are most commonly attacked in middle life, and less in youth and old age.

That it is a cel growth, in which certain cells multiply and diffuse themselves enormously.

That it occurs in places such as the lip or intestines where the blood circulation is greatest.

That savages, as well as civilised people, are liable to it, but that the latter suffer more frequently.

That women suffer greater pain from it than men because their cases occur usually in the glands.

That women are more subject to it than men, but that men have more cases of the skin and surfaces of the body than women.

It is Suspected

That it is not a germ disease.

That cancer growths are strongly reflective.

That it is caused by excessive exposure to sunlight and any form of light rich in actinic rays.

That it exists in the body from birth, but does not break out until some exciting cause produces it.

That it is excited by great mental strain or worry, which accounts for its greater prevalence in modern times.

That certain persons are immune to it. This is indicated by the undoubted fact that some animals are immune.

That it is always associated with radio-activity, because we know of many cases in which it has clearly been provoked by actinic rays.

That it may be caused by radio-activity existing within the body itself.

That the reason why many cases of cancer have occurred in certain houses and localities is that these places are unusually radio-active.

That the X-rays, or radium, or other radio-active substances which cause cancer may, if used in the right proportions, be the best means of curing it.

Progress Made.

It can be extirpated completely by the knife, if taken in its earliest stages.

Opium administered at certain critical periods may prolong a patient's life for years.

The X-rays and radium have effected some cures of superficial cancers, but their action is very uncertain.

Radium treatment is believed to offer the best prospect of cure, but it cannot be applied to deep-seated cancers.

A mixture of erysipelas and other germ toxins is reported to have cured a number of cases by Dr. W. B. Coley of New York.

Animals are sometimes cured of cancer naturally, and it is believed, though not proved, that human beings are occasionally cured in the same way.

Dogs have been cured of cancer by injections of blood from other dogs immune to cancer, but this method has not yet proved effective in human beings, although it may be so.

After the initial cancer has shown signs of reappearing in a second place the prospect of cure by the knife is practically hopeless; therefore prompt treatment is of essential importance.

Wrong Ideas.

That meat eating causes it.

That it is due to eating fish.

That tomatoes are a cause of cancer.

That vegetarians are exempt from it.

That it is caused by the angle worm.

That cancer is contagious or infectious.

That it is practically unknown among savage races.

That it is caused by a parasite that grows on trees.

That Hebrews are exempt because they do not eat pork.

That it can be cured by poultices of violet leaves or herbs.

That it is a germ disease, like typhoid fever and many others.

That there are "cancer houses," where people catch the germs of the disease.

FOSTER'S WEATHER BULLETIN

Examiner Special.

Washington, D.C., Oct. 9.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent 9 to 18, warm wave 8 to 12, cool wave 11 to 15. This disturbance is expected to be the most severe of the month, including a hurricane on the Caribbean sea and Gulf of Mexico., followed by a great cold wave that will carry frosts into the cottor belt.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about 15, cross Pacific slope by close of 16, great central valleys—longitude 105 to 85—about 17 to 19, eastern states and provinces 20. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about 15, great central valleys 17, eastern states and provinces 20. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about 15, great central valleys 17, eastern states and provinces 19. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about 18, great central valleys 20, eastern states and provinces 22

This will be a severe disturbance west of the Rockies, and will be remarkable for the great rise in temperatures that will precede the storm wave. Killing frosts farther south than usual, will precede and follow the storm wave.

Fourth disturbance of Oct. will each Pacific coast about 19, cross Pacific slope by close of 20, great central valleys 21 to 23, eastern states and provinces 24, Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about 19, great central valleys 21, eastern states and provinces 23. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about 22, great central valleys 24, eastern states and provinces 26. This disturbance will be moderate till it reaches the eastern sections where it will increase in force and become a severe storm out on the Atlantic. Cold wave and severe frosts far southward will follow the storm and will be more severe in the eastern states and provinces about 26 and 27.

In July I published a prediction that a severe electrical storm would break loose near Sept. 24. In August I renewed the forecast and called attention to the expected electrical disturbance as an evidence of planetary meteorology. A severe electrical storm spread over the country on morning of Sept. 25. That forecast was too great a success not to have an important bearing on planetary meteorology. It demonstrates first principles and is too easily understood to be cried down by those who will not see.

On Sept. 24, the earth passed between Mars and the sun, or within one degree of a straight line drawn from the sun to the planet Mars. It is believed that, in accordance with laws of magnetism, a current of electricity passes from the planets to the sun in straight lines, while magnetism passes from the sun to the planets in spirals that encircle the electric currents. These electric currents from planet to sun carry matter to be deposited on the sun and the outward flow of magnetism is the residual of the electric currents after the matter has been taken from them. The whole universe works under the same magnetic laws and when the earth passes between a planet and the sun, or the sun between two planets, or a planet between the earth and sun the passing celctric current is disturbed and as all the bodies of the solar system are electrically connected every such disturbance is felt throughout the solar system.

Whenever the earth has heretofore passed between Mars and the sun an electric disturbance occurred on some part of the earth. Such events occurred on following dates: August 18, 45; 8, 93; Sept. 5, 77; Oct. 30, 47; 5, 62; 20, 99; Nov. 30, 64; 12, 79.

CURED WHEN DOCTORS FAILED

Mr. Felix Villeneuve, Clarence Orient, Ont., writes: "I was a great sufferer from kidney disease and inflammation of the bowels and liver troubles and doctors could not help me much. Could not sleep, water contained sediment, had frequent desire to urinate and often passed blood. Had dreadful headaches, one side almost paralyzed, and was deaf in left ear for eight years. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cured me and I am very grateful. I want to thank you."

A HOLIDAY FOR THE MAKERS

From Farm and Dairy.

Whether or not a holiday for the cheesemakers would be feasible and advisable, was a subject of considerable discussion at a convention of the Peterboro district cheesemakers. It was advanced by many that much good to the dairy industry might result from such an outing. The holiday would be not merely a day to get away from work but would give cheese makers a chance to get together, where they could talk and plan over their trade together. Mr. John Flood of Esmismore, advanced the idea that makers should get together more. "The masons, carpenters and practically all other trades had their unions, why should not cheesemakers have something of the same kind?

Dairy Instructor Ward, of the Peterboro group, thought that while it might not be possible to arrange the matter for this year, it would be well to carry on the agitation along this line with a view to having it definitely arranged for another year. Mr. Dan Oakley of Norwood, thought that the makers stayed too much within themselves. They should get out more, make themselves acquainted with their brother makers and things pertaining to the industry, as it is conducted elsewhere than within their own factories. Mr. Gavin Graham, maker at the Warminster factory, expressed himself as being favorable as to having a holiday. He said, "We probably do not need a picnic as any one who makes cheese knows that we have picnic enough at home. We do need an outing somewhere. We do not get together enough for our best interests." Mr. E. Deyell, of South Monaghan, also expressed himself as being favorable as to the makers having a day off.

It was suggested by Mr. Gillespie of Peterboro, and reiterated by Mr. Publow, Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, that it would be a great thing if we could send makers down to Montreal, there to see their produce coming in, and having the privilege of comparing the cheese of their own make with that of different sections of the country. Many objections, however, arose to this, and such an undertaking had it would seem almost impossible.

Practically all present were greatly in favor of the cheesemakers having a holiday. How to arrange it was the difficulty. Many suggestions were offered by many present. It was finally decided that it was necessary should write to each maker in the district and get his views from the subject. A committee was appointed to receive these ideas and consider what should be done.

GARDNER OBSERVES THE EFFECT OF SOME OF BALLINGER'S ORDERS

The False Plea of "No Funds" Paralyzes New Reclamation Projects and Opens the Door Wide to Private Exploitation.

(By Gilson Gardner.

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 8.—As I go about the government irrigation enterprises I find many evidences of Secretary Ballinger's unfriendliness to the reclamation service. They are mostly small things, but they are significant.

In one place, for example, Ballinger gave orders that the engineer in charge dismiss the "irrigation farmer." This man has, in the past, been carried on the rolls of every irrigation project. It is his duty to show the newly arrived settler how and where to run his ditches. He gives him the "dip" of the land and other advice that requires knowledge of engineering. If there is no government expert, the settler must hire a man and pay $20 or $30 for this advice, for it is work he cannot do himself. There is enough work on each government project to keep one man busy, and the officials of the reclamation service have always proceeded on the assumption that to get the water actually upon the land was just as much a part of the government's undertaking as building a dam or constructing the big ditches.

But Ballinger again finds "no warrant in law."

Inspired apparently by the same spirit, Ballinger has left orders at various projects that "ditch riders" shall not be carried all the year on the pay rolls, but shall be discharged when winter comes on, leaving the engineer in charge of hire new men in the spring.

"But," said one engineer, "that is not so easy. I don't know where I can get competent men for such uncertain employment."

Ballinger's "reclamation" policy might possibly be justified if there were any lack of funds. The contrary, however, is the fact. In spite of all the work done under the reclamation law this fund has gone on increasing. There is now between 35 and 40 millions available for new work.

The reclamation law provides that the irigation works shall be paid for out of the proceeds of the sale of public lands. But the money is not really invested; it is merely loaned without interest to the prospective settler, who pays back the cost of the engineering works when he pays for his land.

The consequence is that as each project is opened to settlement the money begins to pour back into the fund. And at the end of 10 years each project will have paid back its full cost.

Ballinger has indorsed the conclusions of Senator Carter's "investigating" committee and the order has gone out that NO MORE NEW RECLAMATION PROJECTS SHALL BE UNDERTAKEN UNTIL THE ONES IN HAND ARE COMPLEED.

There is tremendous significance in this order. It means that the government is to open up no more new lands until all the present undertakings are completed, AND IN THE MEANTIME the railroads and the private water companies can select and seize any lands not withdrawn from entry.

Such private exploitation usually includes a ditch and a power company. Water is brought to the land just as it is under the government reclamation department and is then sold to settlers, BUT

The private company charges twice as much as the government does for the same land.

The private company charges water rent FOREVER, the government turns the system over to the settlers (after they have paid for it by paying for their land).

The profits from this sort of thing are enormous and the land boomers hate to see the government reclamation service open a tract which in private hands would mean a big melon cutting now and a perpetual revenue—enough to pay interest on a fine lot of "water-bonds."

Also where there is a fall of water the company puts in a power plant and thus runs another pipe line (forever) into the settler's pocketbook. And this furnishes forth an edition of "power-bonds" for the settlers to pay interest on.

And all these things mean much to me as I go about this country and read the speeches about "keeping within the law."

"Peterborough The Best City Of Its Size," Says Inspector

At Meeting of Prudential Insurance Company—People Here are Most Courteous—Important Meeting of District Representatives.

A TALK TO THE AGENTS

A meeting of the Prudential Insurance Co. of Peterborough district, comprising Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay, Oshawa, and surrounding towns, was held in the Company's offices at 435 George street, Peterborough, on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Burkett, superintendent of Toronto, No. 1, gave a very able and which cannot be anything else but profitable address to the twenty-five agents assembled there. While Mr. Porter, chief Canadian agent and one of the most successful men in the service of the Company, gave a short sketch of the "Prudential's" career since organization, stating how the company started the Industrial Insurance business under very adverse circumstances, and how that grand old man, John F. Dryden, slaved night and day to make the concern that he had started, and the business upon which he had pinned so much faith, successful.

Mr. Lefevre, superintendent of Kingston, was present and gave an address, stating that he firmly believed that in working for the Prudential Insurance Co., that he was serving one of the very best insurance companies in all the world. This assertion brought forth much applause and looking over the record for the past five years, one can hardly come to any other conclusion. Dr. Tichener, of the Medical Department, from the Home office, was also present, as well as Inspector Pirrett, who has been in town for the past two weeks. An interesting feature of Mr. Pirrett's address was that of all the cities he had as yet visited, Peterborough was the best for its size; the people, too, were most courteous.

Dr. Cameron, of this city, was also present, and delivered a most appropriate address, and advice, which was most cheerfully received and appreciated.

Asst. Supt. F. F. Bradley of Port Hope, and Asst. Supt. F. H. Cornelius, of Lindsay, Asst.-Supt. H. Kingscote, of Oshawa, Assistants. Leadbetter, and Graham, of the Peterborough staff, all spoke a few words of appreciation in view of the fact that the Home office so kindly sent Messrs. Burkitt, Porter, Pirett, Le Fevre, and Dr. Tichener to address the meeting. Supt. J. I. Allen closed the meeting with a few very complimentary remarks and good sound business talk to the agents.

Mr. J. I. Allen left here yesterday morning for Kingston, where he will address the agents and officers of that district.

THOMPSON-STEER

Lasswade, Oct. 8.—A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Steen, on Wednesday, October 6 at two o'clock, p.m., when their third daughter, Lucinda was united in the Holy bonds of matrimony to Robert Thompson of "The Ridge."

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. L. Softley of Toronto.

The bride who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of sky-blue nun's veiling, with white silk yoke and collar trimmed with white applique. She carried a bouquet of white roses tied with white ribbon. She was assisted by her sister, Ellen, who was also attired in a gown of blue nun's veiling and carried roses.

The groom was assisted by Andrew Buchan of Apsley. They entered the room to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Wm. Snelgrove of Oak Cliff Lodge.

The guests were chiefly relatives of the contracting parties.

After the ceremony, the wedding party sat down to a sumptuous tea.

The bride received a great number of handsome gifts, showing the esteem in which she was held.

Toronto, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Mabel Turner, alias Gmelin, was found guilty of murder of the Authers' infant by the chief coroner's jury at the morgue last night.

The verdict was as follows:

That the Authers' infant came to her death in the City of Toronto, in the County of York, between the dates of Saturday, Sept. 11, and Thursday, Sept. 16, by strangulation at the hands of Mrs. Mabel Turner.

And that the aforesaid Mabel Turner did so kill and slay the aforesaid infant Authers.

And the jury further would suggest that the authorities establish a home where foundling infants may be cared for.

This is the second time that this crime has been laid at her door in a coroner's court. Mrs. Turner had been taken back to the jail before the jury returned with their verdict, after less than half an hour after the taking of evidence was closed.

Chief Coroner Johnson outlined the evidence briefly, but graphically. He said: "There is seldom a case where the police have succeeded in forging so complete a chain of evidence. There seems to be no missing link.

"Mrs. Turner is shown to have bargained for the adoption of the child. She is shown to have got it at the hospital on the day of its birth. Cries like to those of an infant being strangled were heard in her room by not one, but two people. They were described as the cries of a strangling infant, even before there was the least shadow of suspicion against this woman.

"She was seen leaving the house with a parcel like that in which the child was found. She is traced to the place where the parcel containing a bundle was found. She told strange and varying stories of her reasons for going there. The very box in which it was found is shown to be a box which was in her possession.

"You jurors may have thought it impossible to believe that any woman could commit such a crime against a harmless infant for money, but let me tell you gentlemen such things have been done.

"It is a very large case. We know that this sort of thing has been made a trade in some countries and I have for years pointed out not only to the police, but to other authorities interested in the matter that many infants were found strangled and that no one could find out who had placed them where they were found.

"What are any the worse of these people. There may be others that are making their living out of just this thing."

Mrs. Turner was in court during the greater part of the hearing. All the life has gone out of her face and the whimsical smile which has made her face so attractive, was not seen for black and her eyes were sombre and brooding.

Mrs. Annie Authers, the mother of the murdered child, was also in court and was frequently moved to tears. She was attended by her friend, who strove to shield her from prying eyes, but she seemed to be fascinated and did not leave the room until after the coroner had closed his address.

The important evidence of the sitting was given by Mrs. Goldie, with whom under the name of Mrs. Miller, the prisoner had lived at the Wood street house. Mrs. Goldie was very nervous, but when she began to speak she gave her evidence clearly and convincingly, hesitating only when she strove with almost painful honesty to speak only of those things of which she had an exact and personal recollection.

Evidence was also given by the clerk in the Eaton store who had sold a pair of shoes to Mrs. Turner a few days before the murder. This witness by the recognition of her own handwriting upon the label on the box in which the body of the infant was found completed the absolute identification of that.

Jury Fix Value.

Cobourg, Oct. 8.—In the suit of Bigelow v. Powers and the Pioneer Threshing Syndicate of Clarke Township, the jury fixed Bigelow's loss at $6,301 for his burned barn. The fire was due to a spark from the threshing outfit, and the insurance companies declined to be held responsible for the full amount.

"Look Out For That Little Cold"

The wise physician says "cure it before it grows large and dangerous. To-day is the time to commence treatment." The remedy, the best one, which doctors say surpasses all others, is "Nerviline." Rub it on the chest and throat; use it as a gargle, and then take 20 drops in hot water—cold will disappear.

"Last spring I caught a severe cold," writes George A. Smart, of Gibson P.O. "Every cough racked my throat, which became perfectly raw. When almost in desperation I was advised to try Nerviline. I rubbed it on and used it as a gargle. Immediate relief followed. For breaking up colds it's the great remedy of to-day.

Use "Nerviline" It Cures Colds

Nerviline will surprise you. It's the best household remedy for coughs, colds, sore throat, croup, and internal pains of every kind. Large bottles have been sold by all druggists for nearly fifty years at 50c. Don't forget Nerviline when you go to the druggists.

TAKE OFF THE FAT WHERE IT SHOWS

Most women suffer much humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, no matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are abnormal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street or in public places make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but it is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most there in where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. This season's dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her slightness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apparatus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken even after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are sold at all drug stores at 75 cents a case, or if you prefer you may write the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich.

He recommended seventeen men there instead of the ten. The Japanese native pastors lacked incentive.

SHIPYARD FOR CANADA

Harland & Wolff, One of the World's Biggest Shipbuilding Companies, is Expected to Establish Yards at Halifax and Prince Rupert—Dominion Will Borrow Two Obsolete English Cruisers.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Harland & Wolff of Belfast, Ireland, the greatest individual shipbuilding firm in the world, have decided to establish in Canada.

Their arrangements are not perfected, but plans are so far forward that in a week or two, or possibly in a few days, a definite statement will be made.

Harland & Wolff are the premier warship builders, not only of the British, but of other empires, and although no contracts have been made and nothing further than correspondence and verbal communications have passed between the Canadian authorities and the great Irish firm, it is understood that Harland & Wolff will build in Canada the first warships for the new Canadian navy.

It is probable that the first dockyards will be constructed and the plants laid down at Halifax.

Not only in the Maritime Provinces, but also on the Pacific Coast, will Canadian war vessels be built. The belief has prevailed that Vancouver will be the favored city, but in view of a statement made in London by the Canadian representatives to the imperial naval defence conference, it is believed that the building of the Pacific section of the fleet will take place at Prince Rupert.

This has caused some heart-burning in British Columbia, and possibly the Government view may be altered, but the present idea of the Government is that Canada will borrow two obsolete second-class cruisers as a beginning. These will be of the Bristol type. Of course they are not obsolete in the common acceptance of the term; it is merely that in the British navy they have been superseded as a standard type by vessels of a later class. The proposal is to place one on the Pacific Coast to serve in the dual capacity of training ships and fisheries protective cruisers.

This much only is really definite, that Canada will build a navy, and that it will cost a good many million dollars.

Capt. Newton, who has been A.D.C. at Government House for some years, has been appointed Canadian representative for Harland & Wolff.

May Mobilize Entire Force.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—It is stated here yesterday that when Gen. Sir John French comes to Canada next year, there will be a mobilization of all the Canadian troops at Petawawa military camp, and a grand review.

The exact date of the arrival of Gen. French has not been decided, but it is expected that he will be in Canada early next summer. His special mission will be to inspect the Canadian land forces, and to take an inventory of equipment and capacity for mobilization. The military establishment of Canada is 57,000 men.

On inquiry at the Militia Department yesterday it was stated that there had been no official communication regarding the matter.

A team of cadets from Great Britain will visit Canada next year at the time of the D.R.A. matches.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 9.—In the arrest of John Short, the police believe they have a criminal unique, for he has systematically robbed Christ Church, one of the largest edifices in this city, during the past ten months.

ANNUAL FIELD DAY OF THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE WAS MOST SUCCESSFUL EVENT

Large Crowd Watched the Games at Riverside Park---M. O'Brien the Senior Champion---Harold Hill Wins the Junior, After Most Exciting Contest, by One Point

Three records broken, two equalled and two new records set up were featur ensof the most successful field day of sports in the history of the Collegiate Institute. The annual meet was held yesterday afternoon at Riverside Park in the presence of a very large crowd of pupils and friends of the school, and was in every way a grand success. The weather conditions could not have been improved upon. The air was balmy and warm, hot enough to allow the ladies to wear their summer garb and yet not too hot to be unpleasant for the contestants. Good fortune in the shape of fine weather always seems to smile upon the Collegiate Institute in connection with the annual games but yesterday the weather man seemed anxious to assist in the record breaking and he picked out the finest brand available.

Hitherto the games have been held at Nicholls' Oval but after the success of yesterday's meet there can be no question as to the wisdom of moving down to the pretty park across the river. The fact that there is a grand stand there and that the spectators can watch the events in comfort without crowding out on the track to the inconvenience of the athletes is sufficient reason for the change.

Naturally, the chief interest in the meet is the disposal of the senior and junior trophies, the winners for 1908 being M. O'Brien in the senior and Harold Hill in the junior. The senior winner obtained his honours without much of a struggle. In the jumping events which were held on Tuesday he made a clean sweep, winning all four and fracturing five records. This allowed him to start yesterday with 20 points to his credit. When he went out and took third in the 100 yards and followed up by winning the 220 and the high jump there was no chance of his start being headed off. Incidentally in winning the high jump he broke the record, doing 4 feet, 11 inches, a very creditable performance.

Far greater excitement attended the race for the junior trophy finally captured by Harold Hill after a hard fought battle in which Nagle Phelan was beaten out by a single point, the last event deciding the contest. Phelan was greatly handicapped by not being able to take part in the four jumping events held earlier in the week and started out yesterday afternoon fourteen points behind. He made a most gallant effort to overhaul the lead but just failed to do so. His work yesterday afternoon was the most brilliant individual feature of the day as he started in seven events and carried off five firsts and two seconds, a really grand performance. He made a clean sweep of the running events, cleaning up the 100 yards, 220 yards, quarter mile and one mile and also annexed the big hjump and was second in the vault and half mile walk. A win in either of these last events would have given him the cup or a single point in the jumps would have resulted in a tie.

Hill also made a grand showing, winning the pole vault and being second in all the other events he entered. These points with his win in the road race on Monday and his good work in the jumps on Tuesday gave him the cup by the narrow margin of one point.

O'Brien's chief rivals for the senior honours were Vivian Fessenden and Ray Scott, each of whom secured 21 points, just ten behind the leader.

The 100 yards senior, the first event on the programme resulted in one of the best races of the afternoon. Fessenden, who gives promise of developing into a splendid sprinter won the event by a foot with Scott second and O'Brien third. The winner's time was 11 1-5, a pretty classy performance for a fifteen year old boy over a grass track.

Phelan made a runaway fight of it in the junior 100. He won his heat by a yard, looking back at the field and gathered in the final just as easily Hill was second.

The 220 yards senior fell to M. O'Brien, who showed in front from the gun and held his lead all the way winning by a yard. Fessenden tried hard to overcome the lead by a stretch sprint but could not quite get up.

Phelan gave another classy performance in the 220 yards, junior, in which he clipped a fifth of a second off the record. He shot ahead at once and running a pretty race won without much trouble.

The walking races were one sided Scott winning the senior and Laing the junior without much opposition.

In the quarter mile Scott and Fessenden had a hard argument, the former beating his room mate out in a good finish.

Phelan again showed his class by romping away with the junior quarter. As usual he went right out with the first gun and led his field all the way. He had the heels of the bunch and was never in much danger. Roy Dixon won the mile senior event in clever fashion. Sprinting away from his field like a 220 yards man in the first lap he set up a lead of 150 yards and after that it was a stern chase for the men behind. Elmer Brown, who is a very promising little runner, was the only one to give the leader a chase, but the lead was too great. Brown gained steadily after the first two laps and showed a splendid brust of speed in the last 200 yards out he could not overhaul Dixon.

The mile was one of the best events of the day. Phelan once more showed his calibre by carrying off the honours. The little fellow ran a heady, well judged race. He took the lead from the first, shook up his field with a sprint, a la Alfie Shrubb, in the first lap that gave him a good advantage and then settled down to the comfortable gait that kept him in front. There were four other starters, Hill, Laing, Reid and Hatrick. The last two quit early, but the other pair stuck. Hill who did the trailing for most of the distance moved up into second place in the second last lap and challenged Phelan at the beginning of the last 220 yards. The leader however, was game and had too much left in him to be beaten off in the final sprint, crossing the line a winner by a safe margin.

The feature of the high jumps was the work of M. O'Brien, who jolted the record by doing 4 feet, 11 inches. The old mark was an inch less.

Wallace Armstrong did some things to the record in the senior pole vault boosting the mark nearly a foot by doing 8 feet, 2 in. It was a clever exhibition and the winner was loudly applauded for his work.

George Minorgan won the ball throwing contest with a heave of 86 yards. O'Brien hurled the sphere 98 yards nearly two yards more than the record but his throw fell outside the boundaries and could not be counted.

The girl's race, 75 yards was an amusing feature while brought out a very large field and had to be run in three heats and a final. Miss Kell won her heat decisively and also captured the final.

The obstacle race in which the contestants had to run 75 yards, correctly solve a question in arithmetic and run back to the starting point resulted in an easy victory for Marion Pearson.

Only one team entered the Inter form relay race, a trio from Form 3b, Scott, Fessenden and Conroy. They ran against time doing a lap in 41 2-5 seconds and will hold the flag for this event until next year.

"THE BACHELOR"

It was the good fortune of a very large number of Peterborough people to see "The Bachelor," Clyde Fitch's last play which was given a most artistic interpretation at the Grand by Charles Cherry, Ruth Maycliffe and the original New York oCmpany. As anticipated the comedy was one of the most enjoyable, brightest little plays that has ever been seen in this city, and the company which staged it proved themselves worthy of the play. The characters are clean cut and life like, the dialogues at once sparkling and natural, the situations strong and well worked out and altogether it is a typical Fitch play. Unfortunately perhaps, Peterborough people have had little opportunity of seeing the work of the great playwright who recently died in New York, the only other play of his to be given here being "The Climbers," in which Miss Amelia Bingham was seen to the best advantage. "The Bachelor," hinges upon hte relationship between George Goodale, a New York business man and "Jenny," his stenographer. The bachelor is in love with the stenographer and does not know it while the stenographer on the other hand is infatuated with him and does know it.

Her cub brother brings things to a climax by informing the Bachelor that he has compromised his sister that the girl loves him and that he must marry. Startled by this state of affairs, Goodale does propose and is accepted. Then Jenny finds out from her brother what has happened and her injured pride forces her to break off the engagement. The Bachelor instead of being delighted as he expected to be finds that he is really in love with the girl and finally everything works out all right.

Mr. Cherry made an instantaneously favourable impression upon the audience and his graceful and effective interpretation of the title role, demonstrated that the Shuberts made no mistake when they decided to star this clever actor. Miss Maycliffe shared the honours fully with Mr. Cherry being as pretty and charming an ingenue as has ever graced the boards of the Grand. The rest of the company was most capable. Charles Laite giving a capital interpretation of the part of an office boy, while Annie Buckley as a German maid made a big hit.

Messrs. Turner & Sons deserve the thanks of local theatre-goers for their enterprise in securing "The Bachelor" for Peterborough.

The next attraction at the Grand is Geo. M. Cohan's big summer show, "The Honeymooners," which comes here after a four month's run at the New Amsterdam theatre, New York, where it has been playing to capacity business throughout the warm weather. It is a typical Cohan show with comedy of the laugh-a-second variety, pretty girls gorgeously gowned and music and lots of it, the kind that has made the youthful play-wright a rich man.

Young Minister Declares That Cabinet Will Not Make Any Overtures to House of Lords Nor Consider Any Amendments Made by the Upper Chamber — King and Premier Asquith Consulted.

London, Oct. 9.—At least some members of the Cabinet are opposing any compromise, such as has been suggested by King Edward, to prevent a constitutional crisis over the budget.

Winston Spencer Churchill, President of the Board of Trade, speaking last night at the National Liberal Club, declared that the Government would make no overtures to the House of Lords, and accept no compromise, and that no amendment to the finance bill by the Upper House would be entertained. The House of Lords, Mr. Churchill added, had no right to interfere in any way with the financial features of the Government, directly or indirectly, and that the Liberals having a united party, and a resolute Prime Minister, were ready for the conflict if it were forced upon them.

Lord Loreburn, Lord High Chancellor, who followed Mr. Churchill, said he refused to believe that the House of Lords would take a step which would lead to a most grave conflict, and at the same time place the finances of the country in a state of disorder, so far-reaching, so serious, that few persons who had not studied the subject really appreciated the extent of the evil.

Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in a speech at Bristol, declared that the Irish land bill was as important as the budget, but he believed the House of Lords would pass the budget.

Premier Asquith left Balmoral Castle last night for London for a lenthy consultation with King Edward.

No Change in Style.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 9.—It is officially stated that a report which says that the Postoffice Department intends to substitute R. G. (Dominion of Canada) for E.R. in a cipth, beard for the first time last night by the Department.

Funds For Suffragettes.

London, Oct. 9.—Under the auspices of the Women's Social Political Union a large and very enthusiastic meeting was held in Albert Hall Thursday night. Its purpose was to give a farewell to Mrs. Pankhurst, who is leaving for the United States on a lecture tour in behalf of women's suffrage.

Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, who presided, invited a donating of funds. She said that 50,000 pounds ($250,000) were needed, and that 48,584 pounds had been already subscribed. Within ten minutes an additional 3,000 pounds had been raised.

Does Germany Want War.

Berlin, Oct. 9.—Count Reventlow, after reading extracts of speeches made in the United States by Lord Northcliffe, Motprly Bell and Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, in which they expressed the belief that war between Great Britain and Germany was inevitable, said:

"War is certain if England declares it. Otherwise it is not at all certain. On the contrary, Germany will do everything to avoid it." Count Reventlow is a retired naval officer of Germany.

"The less prior standard may be logical if the two enemies thru here in Europe come together, but it fails of efficiency if, for example, one enemy is here and the other in the orient.

"That raises for England the question of Indian and Japan. Who knows but that the United States might not some day be taken into consideration in some complex international difficulty? In this connection let me say I believe that many oratorical Englishmen sometimes slay Germany when they mean the United States."

Death Was Accidental.

Orangeville, Oct. 9.—The jury investigating the death of Joseph Paul of Toronto, killed while uncoupling a freight train, returned a verdict of accidental death, but repeated that the handles by which the angle-cocks on the airbrakes were operated were too short for safety. The jurors suggested the railways equip each car with a lever, which would enable a brakeman to operate the angle-cocks.

"It is stated by the railway officials that the said appliances are standard and approved by the Railway Commission, so that the company is not liable for negligence in using them. While the said order of the commission is not before us, we think that the efficiency of which appliances can best be studied by a petit jury in the light of an accident which brings out the defects, and that the jurisdiction of the petit jury was both estranged by its transfer to the Railway Commission."

Why Port Arthur Fell.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 9.—The Government yesterday announced the personnel of a court of ten members, five military and five civil officials, who will try the engineers who superintended the fortification of Port Arthur. The decision to try the engineers is the result of an official investigation just completed. The investigators discovered that the fortress was not one-tenth as strong as the St. Petersburg authorities had been led to believe it was.

The engineers, the investigation indicated, received enormous sums of money, which they pocketed, either doing nothing at all to strengthen the fortifications, or throwing up defences which generally had little more than scenic value.

Suffocated as She Slept.

South Norwalk, Conn., Oct. 9.—While in bed at her home Mrs. Joseph O'Brien yesterday met a tragic death from suffocation, caused by the fumes from a bottle containing smelling salts. Mrs. O'Brien had been complaining of headache and in the afternoon she went to sleep with a bottle of smelling salts at her nose. The ammonia from the bottle was spilled and ran over her face and nose, the fumes producing death while she slept.

Is Northcliffe Stung?

New York, Oct. 9.—Men expert in the manufacture of news print paper threw further illuminating information yesterday upon the experiment into which Lord Northcliffe, a leading publisher of British periodicals, has entered in establishing his $6,000,000 wood pulp and paper-making plant in the wilds of Newfoundland. It was further asserted by paper producers who were in Washington when the problem as to the tariff on pulp and paper was threshed out that the English publisher, through influences inspired by himself or his associates, was among those who endeavored to force the nation's lawmakers to knock off all duty on those commodities.

According to an official of a large pulp and paper corporation, who knows the place well, Northcliffe's new company "is indulging in a dream from which it must be aroused at a comparatively early period with a rude awakening."

"Our company," said this official, "had the opportunity years ago of establishing a paper plant in that very wilderness, but after careful study of all phases of the proposition we dropped it in a hurry. We ascertained with absolute exactness that the locating of a mill in that territory would within a few years result in a sweeping financial loss."

Suffragettes After Lloyd-George.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng., Oct. 9.—Last night found this city, where David Lloyd-George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, will deliver two important budget speeches this afternoon and to-night, invaded by the suffragettes. The Chancellor was escorted from the station by a strong force of police.

The suffragettes attempted last evening to hold a meeting in the drill hall, but students and the noisy element of the city raised such a din that the speakers could not be heard, and they finally broke up the meeting by throwing fireworks on the stage. The suffragettes then proceeded to the Liberal Club, through the windows of which they threw stones. Four of them were arrested.

FUGITIVE SAFE BLOWERS IN A BRUSH WITH POLICE POSSE

Post Office Robbers Who Eluded Police Near Ottawa Enter Small Village and Secure Supplies---Escape in the Dark---Appear to be Exhausted.

Arnprior, Oct. 11.—The pickaroon safeblowers have again evaded the clutches of the law by the use of their revolvers. This time it was the village constable of Galetta, a small village six miles from Arnprior, who, with three assistants, endeavored to capture the bandits. Since last Monday morning, when the safe was blown, the men have been hunted by posses of police in the Gatineau Hills. Last Wednesday one of the quartette was arrested at North Wakefield, up the Gatineau in Quebec, but the other three by ready use of their revolvers, got away into the bush.

They were seen by two boys on the following morning on the top of a hill, three miles from the scene of the fight.

On Saturday evening they put in an appearance at Queen, having tramped almost entirely through the thickly wooded hills for thirty miles. It was thought that they might appear there, but no special constables had been placed on guard, when the burglars, about six o'clock, there were many who said here they were the most caught desperadoes, but none attempted their arrest. Instead, they facilitated their departure by giving all the information asked, and selling them supplies.

To the people they talked to, the men said they had been hunting and had lost their way. Only one of the men had a rifle, but this they explained by saying the other two had lost theirs in the bush.

They went boldly in to the village, purchased shaving soap, tobacco and other supplies at the stores, and then they went to Doyle's Hotel where all three had supper, and several drinks in the bar. There they enquired how to get across the Ottawa river, and were directed to the ferry which goes from the Quebec to the Ontario side of the river.

They crossed over shortly after six o'clock to the landing, which is about four miles above Fitzroy Harbor, and there took the main road which leads to Galetta passing over a quarter of a mile back of the Village of Fitzroy Harbor. In the meantime Fitzroy Harbor had been notified by telephone, but no one thought Queen fellow-citizens, Dr. Orale, a farmer, observed a rig to one man walking some distance from the other two, but was told that all three were together going to Arnprior. Orale's rig would not hold all, and so he drove on. At Fitzroy Harbor, Heman Kody, hotelman, was notified by Orale and the operator of the ferry, and he passed the word on to Galetta.

Constable Johnson abolished his fear and loaded his Winchester rifle and then swore in three villagers to help him. Two of these he armed with 38 calibre revolvers and the fourth with a rifle. The plan was for two to lie beside the road at one place, and the other two a couple of hundred feet away, thus getting the men between the two divisions. But while they were waiting, the constable got anxious for fear his two assistants, who were not with him, might get excited and fire on the first three men they saw approaching. He went back to make sure and was lying down in the grass when the trio arrived, walking on the opposite side of the road. As soon as they passed the constable quietly approached to within thirty feet — at least that is how Constable Johnson figures the distance.

"Halt, boys, hold up your hands," commanded the constable, as he raised his weapon. But two of the burglars blazed away with their revolvers, one firing one shot and the other two, and all three ran. The constable and his assistants used all their charges without effect. It was now a few minutes to 8 o'clock, and quite dark.

One man darted up a side road, another vanished, the constable did not know where, and the third continued along the road, through a garden to another street and along past the general store, where the usual Saturday night crowd were getting Sunday provisions. They heard the shots and knew who had been expected; they saw the fugitives with the constable after him, and then they suddenly had an irresistible impulse to see the inside of the store again.

Yesterday morning Wm. Kay, night operator at the G.T.R. station found two empty and two full cartridges near the water tank. Apparently, Mr. Burglar reloaded his revolver and prepared to resist attack.

Constable Johnston remained around for the rest of the night and phoned Ottawa, and a squad of eight city and Dominion police arrived early yesterday morning. All day barns and outbuildings were searched in vain. Last night man were stationed along the railway and on roads leading to Arnprior, Fakenham and other villages. Men who saw the fugitives say they appeared all fagged out. Last night Dr. Groves of Carp telephoned that he had seen the trio.

Young Woman Is Suspected Of Slaying Her Infant

Bracebridge, Oct. 11.—Eva Suter, aged 21, of the Township of Draper, is arrested under suspicion of doing away with her child of about two years of age.

The girl left her home on September 20, after having had words with her father the night before, with a valise, and with the child in her arms. On passing a neighbor's a short distance away, she was alone. As nothing more was seen of the child, some of the neighbors insisted on an investigation.

County Constable Armstrong of Bracebridge questioned the girl, who at first refused to answer, but afterwards said the child was at the home of John Sherwood, Gravenhurst. Then she stated that her father had overtaken her on the road shortly after her leaving home, knocked her down and killed the child in her presence, and disposed of the body in a swamp on their own farm, and threatened to kill her if she divulged anything.

Armstrong took the girl out to the swamp on her father's farm, and, after getting the father, who protested his innocence, a search was instituted. The girl was the only one who seemed to know where to look, and the body was found buried under several inches of moss and mud, and ankle deep in water at the root of a turned up tree. A narrow piece of cotton was tied tightly around the neck.

An inquest will be opened Monday night.

Has Recovered Horse That Was Stolen Three Years Ago

Valuable Filly Disappeared From Its Pasture July 28, 1906, and Owner's Efforts to Find Her Were in Vain—How He Finally Got a Clue.

SUSPICION HERE ONCE

After perserving three years, undaunted by continued set backs, Jas. J. Foran of Wiarton, Ont., has found trace of a bay filly which with a jogging cart was stolen from pasture on July 28th, 1906. The case is an unusually interesting one and to a slight extent has local connection. It was the night after a meet that the mare disappeared and in spite of the efforts of detectives and police the thieves eluded their would-be captors. Dr. Johnston received a communication from the Pinkerton Detective Bureau notifying him of the theft and asking him to keep an 'eye open,' in this district as $300 reward had been offered for the recovery of the mare and information that would lead to the arrest of the guilty party. Suspicion was entertained against a horseman, who at that time was residing in Peterborough.

No trace of the missing mare was found but Foran refused to forsake the trail. A short time ago an advertisement appeared in a Toronto daily, describing a bay filly for sale. Mr. Foran saw it and communicated with A. W. Green who offered it for sale. He wrote back a complete description which tallied so closely with the mare he had lost that Mr. Foran decided to see her. He did so and was satisfied that it was the missing filly. He said nothing however, but visited his lawyer who advised him to make an affidavit setting forth the circumstances and on the strength of this he obtained an order for the replevin of the horse, and forwith issued a writ for its recovery and for damages.

The mare is now five years old and is valued by Mr. Foran at $400. He estimates that he has spent over $300 in an endeavour to recover the animal, but is fully satisfied with his palated success.

One Hundred and Three Children in This Year's Class at St. Peter's Cathedral

One hundred and three children received their first communion yesterday morning at the Children's Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral. In the afternoon the children returned to the church where they renewed the vows made at baptism by their sponsors. These children will receive the Sacrament of Confirmation next May with the class of that year.

THE NEW LODGE IS MAKING PROGRESS

The Duke of Manchester L.O.L. Organizes New Fife and Drum Band.

Duke of Manchester Lodge of the Loyal Orange Association, among the many fraternal lodges in this city, is a very progressive body of young men, organized about eighteen months ago, as a lodge of young men, with eight on the roll. Since then the membership has increased 300 per cent., and is rapidly going up. A few weeks ago it was decided to have once every three months a degree meeting for the purpose of confirming the R. A. P. only. The first of these meetings takes place on Thursday evening, in the Orange Hall on Queen St. The members of the Orange Association throughout the country have been invited, and during the evening the boys will serve refreshments. A fife and drum band has been organized, and the instruments have arrived, and the Lodge expects to let the citizens of Peterborough see that there is room for more music on its streets. A social Club is also under consideration, and may, in the near future be added as an additional attraction.

Speaking of Orange matters, all the lodges are increasing in membership fast. They are arranging to celebrate by a grand concert and fowl supper on Nov. 5th, in the Foresters' Hall, on Simcoe street. Strong committees have been appointed and a first-class programme may be expected.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 11 1909

A NOTABLE ANNIVERSARY.

One of the most notable moral movements in the history of Peterborough is represented by the work of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society. Renewed interest is aroused, by the announcement that the society will, on January 16th, 1910, celebrate the tenth anniversary of its organization. In emphasis of the announcement Rev. Dr. O'Brien, if not the founder, at least the foster father of the society, gave yesterday in St. Peter's an earnest addres upon the benefits of total abstinence in its bearing upon the church, society, home and individual relations of those who practice its principles. In sympathy with the working spirit of the society, the celebration of its decennary will not consist of horn-blowing, but take a practical form—an organized effort to advance the total membership from 900 to 1,000. To this end the city is divided into districts, corresponding in number to the number of past presidents available, and these will undertake a house-to-house canvass for members. This work began to-day, and should meet with speedy accomplishment for the work of the society in the past and the great good it has accomplished, commends it more strongly every year to those who should benefit by membership. Nothing succeeds like success, and the measure of success St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society has gained, is an earnest of general continued success, and of especial success in its present membership propaganda. The society has won the warm sympathy of all creeds and denominations outside the pale in which its operations specifically lie, and the effort to reach its millenary membership will be followed by the good wishes of all who sympathise with the work of creating and maintaining sobriety and all it implies.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS

The more intimate political trade and social relations that have developed between Canada and the Mother Country, has created in this country a greater interest in British politics. Canadians, follow with a great deal of interest the movement of the present political crisis or revolution and the general election which will probably to the outcome will be watched with solicitude, therefore in view of this some information regarding the parties in the last election will assist in gauging the prospects of the Liberals retaining power, which it is generally conceded they will do, if they, do not return to power with greatly increased strength. The London Post gives some figures as to the result of the election of 1906 and they may serve in a measure as a basis of calculation of the possibilities of a general election in 1910.

The figures show a remarkable disproportion in total votes and party representation. Excluding Ireland, the votes for 598 mebers of the Commons were as follows:

	Votes	Members
Unionist	2,385,318	139
Liberal	2,580,166	373
Labour and Socialist	324,184	54
	5,429,668	566

According to an analysis prepared by the New York Times, it will be seen that the average of votes to each member elected was a little less than 10,000 and that the Labour and Socialist members had about this average. The Liberals, on the contrary, received an average of only 6,900 votes, while the Unionists had one of over 17,000. While the aggregate number of votes received by the Liberals was less than 10 per cent. larger than the number received by the Unionists, the number of seats secured was two and one-half times as large. This was due obviously to the smaller average majorities by which the Liberals carried their constituencies. There were, indeed, some 145 seats held by a majority of less than 1,000, and of these eighty-two were held by a majority of less than 500. Since the general election there have been fifty-nine bye-elections in which the Unionists' vote has increased 33,073 and that of the Liberals has decreased 28,178, a net change of 63,191 votes, giving the Unionists eleven more members.

THE FARMERS' OPPORTUNITY

A splendid opportunity to supplement the regular revenue of the farm is offered to those who can compete for the large cash prizes which will be given at the Ontario Provincial Winter Fair to be held in Guelph on December 6th, to 10th, 1909. About $14,000.00 will be offered as prize money in the different departments which include the principal breeds of horses, dairy cattle, beef cattle, sheep, swine, and poultry, and also seeds. The Fair comes at a convenient season when the fitting can be done during the slack time of fall and early winter, while the few days spent in Guelph with the exhibits is a pleasant and profitable outing.

During the past summer about $50,000.00 was spent on an addition to the Fair building. Besides providing increased and improved accommodation for the former departments of the Fair, a large judging arena and about one hundred and fifty horse stalls have been placed in the new part, which give splendid facilities for a magnificent horse show. Special attention has been given to providing accommodation for the judging of the different classes of stock and besides the ring for horses and beef cattle there are now separate judging rings for swine and sheep, each with adequate seating.

The following is a brief summary of the prize list. Our readers who are interested should apply to the Secretary of the Fair, Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Toronto, for a complete list.

In the horse department there are classes for Clydesdales, Shires, Hackneys, Standard breds, thoroughbreds, ponies, and heavy draught horses, for which there is offered $5,0000.00 in prizes. The $9,000.00 offered for beef cattle goes to Shorthorns, Herefords, Aberdeen-Angus, Galloways, Devons, and Grades or Crosses. The Dairy Shorthorns, Ayrshires, Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys, and Grades Compete for $1,200.00. Exhibitors of sheep can show Cotswolds, Lincolns, Leicesters, Oxfords, Shropshires, Southdowns, Dorsets, Hampshires, Suffolks, and Grades or Crosses, and win $2,000.00 in prizes. The swine exhibitors get $1,400.00 for their exhibits of Yorkshires, Berkshires, Tamworths, Grades or Crosses and Bacon Hogs. All pure seed is now recognised as necessary to successful farming, growers of these are offered $900.00 as an inducement for them to make a good display. The poultry department has grown to be the biggest poultry show in Canada, and breeders show great enthusiasm in competing for the $3,000.00 prize money.

We look to the farmers of this county to uphold their reputation as successful breeders and feeders of good live stock. The financial inducements offered are certainly worthy of their best efforts.

MAKE THE NAVY A NATIONAL ASSET.

Ottawa Free Press.)

If we are to spend millions upon a navy and there now seems little doubt that this is to be our case, should we not, right at the outset of our naval career, make up our minds that the bulk of the money which is to be expended upon cruisers and torpedo destroyers shall give us some return in the form of population?

We are to embark upon a career of naval construction. We want the ships. We can find the money to pay for them, but where will we find the men to build them? Are we to send the millions of dollars invoved in the construction of the ships of our navy out of the country or are we to expend them here? That is the question now before the people of Canada.

The Old Country papers tell us every week of distress on the Tyneside and in Belfast, owing to the large number of skilled mechanics who are out of work, and who, under present conditions, have no future before them except an occasional spell of work and a frequent spell of idleness.

Why should not Canada make an endeavour to secure these people? We can give them steady work under conditions which will assure them and their children a comfortable home and a prosperous future, whereas if we send the millions across the sea to be expended by the ship-building masters of Newcastle, Greenock, and Belfast we derive no material benefit at all from the expenditure of the millions and the ownership of the ships when they are constructed.

A policy of building Canada's navy in Canada will keep the money in circulation in Canada. It will do more than that. It will fill our provinces by the sea with an energetic population, whose wants and those of their families will have to be supplied by the farmers of those provinces and by the manufacturers and the factory operatives of all Canada.

Imperialists tell us that what Canada wants is to have "more British blood pumped into her," in order to offset the "American invasion," of the West. Here is the chance of the Imperialists. They can, by supporting a policy of having Canada's navy constructed in Canada secure both the navy and the British population.

By all means let Canada's navy be constructed in Canada, and if we have not the skilled labour here to do the work, let us bring it in from England, Scotland, and Ireland, and when we have finished the navy we will have a substantial addition to our population of the very best class of British subjects.

Canada's navy should be built in Canada.

WEST PETERBOROUGH.

(Orillia Times.)

Liberals throughout Ontario will be pleased at the collapse of the trial to unseat Hon. J. R. Stratton, member for West Peterborough in the Dominion House. The election contest was fought out with a great deal of bitterness, and when Mr. Stratton was returned it was determined if possible to secure his downfall. The petition was filed and the petitioner persisted in his determination to the bitter end. Thorough preparation was made by both sides for the trial, which occapied the greater part of last week, at an expense of about one thousand dollars per day. From the start the petitioner was handicapped. Gates, who was not a voter, and yet made the sworn declaration upon which the petition was prepared, was ordered out of the witness box by their Lordships. Other important witnesses were told from the bench that they would not be believed. The main charges were summarily dismissed on Saturday morning, and Mr. DuVernet, the Counsel for the petitioner, at once acknowledged that he saw no object in pressing the remaining charges and asked permission of the Court to withdrawal, so as to save expenses to his client. The Court consented, and Mr. Stratton, who was in the Court, was at once showered with the congratulations of his friends.

Mr. Stratton's many friends will not soon forget the mean stab below the belt which he received when he filled the position of Provincial Secretary, and member for West Peterborough of the Ontario Government. The truthfulness of the accusations against him may be measured by the suspicion with which the leaders of the Ontario Conservatives regard his assailant. Notwithstanding his splendid abilities compared with the Ontario Government party, the word has gone forth and is frequently repeated by the leaders that he must not be placed in position of trust. Ontario will ere long undo the wrong done him, and show unmistakably that he has the confidence not only of his friends but of the general public.

FIVE DOLLARS FOR HIS SUNDAY SPREE

Young Man Was Drunk and Disorderly Last Night—In Court To-day.

Two young men were arrested last night by P. C. Newhall, in the alleyway at the rear of the Bank of Montreal. Their conduct was not of the orderly kind, and just at the hour when thec itizens were returning from church it was not desirable. They had a large flask of whiskey.

In court this morning before the acting Magistrate, City Clerk Armstrong, one of them pleaded to having been drunk and disorderly yesterday. Sunday drunks cost five dollars, but the prisoner did not have that amount and had to take the only alternative, ten days in gaol.

His "pal" pleaded not guilty and the evidence being not sufficient to make a conviction, he was discharged.

A third drunk was arrested on Saturday night by P. C. Newhall. He pleaded guilty, but it being his first offence he was allowed to go.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Should a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

[redacted], Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three [illegible] of them."—Mrs. S. A. [redacted], R. F. D. No. 14, Box 32, [redacted], Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which took much [illegible] has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable friend and preserver of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States have written testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give the trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

MR. O'SHEA IS MAKING A HIT

Well Known Local Boy Favourably Impresses the Theatre-Goers of Davenport, Iowa.

Mr. O'Shea, the well known local boy who has been making a name for himself on the stage in this season identified with the permanent Stock Company of the Princess Theatre, Davenport, and has made a most favourable impression upon the theatre goers of that city. The Daily Times of Davenport speaking of his work in the "Belle of Richmond," which was the second week's offering of the Company says:

Oscar O'Shea, a talented artist in every respect is assigned to a semi-villainous part, which he plays with the same display of talent which marked his efforts last week. The Times also refers most favourably to Miss Esther Evans Mrs. O'Shea) as follows: "Esther Evans appears to good advantage as the Belle. Mr. O'Shea will remain with the Princess Stock Company at Davenport for the remainder of the season."

THE FIRE SALE GREAT SUCCESS

Startling Bargains at Millburn's Brought Out Enormous Crowd of Buyers.

The fire sale which opened at Millburn's jewellery store on Saturday attracted enormous crowds to the establishment and once there the remarkably low prices made a record day's sales. People found that the advertised prices were strictly lived up to and that there were countless opportunities of choosing suitable Christmas gifts at the lowest possible prices. A specialty was made of brooches many pretty designs being sold for 14c. Another sensational bargain was in the alarm clock department where clocks that usually sold for $1.25 were disposed of at 25c. The store was crowded all day with eager buyers.

The sale will be continued for an indefinite period and there are some remarkably cheap articles offered that should continue to attract the same big crowds as attended the opening. Everything is as advertised and people who intend to purchase can make no mistake by calling at Millburn's. For to-morrow there are some remarkable bargains offered, a feature being the sale of belt pins which up to the time of the fire have been selling at $1 for 39c, and hat pins formerly $1.75 now going at 45c. These articles are as good as new and will be eagerly snapped up.

In "The Honeymooners" at The Grand next Wednesday, the following songs are introduced:

"Let's Take an Old Fashioned Walk"
"I'm a Popular Man"
"Make a Lot of Noise"
"Honey Babe"
"Nothing New Beneath the Sun"
"The Hat My Dear Old Father Wore"
Honest Little Girls I'm Strong for You and 9 others.

SPORTING COMMENT

The Goold-Shapely and Muir team of Brantford, with whom Dubbie Shea of Brantford, is playing, defeated the West End Pleasure Club of Hamilton, by 3 to 0 on Saturday, and are now winners of the second round of the Inter-City Baseball League. They will now play off with the St. Patrick's Club for the championship.

Bert Cameron, the old Peterborough player, was at outside wing for Montreal on Saturday, in their Inter-Provincial game with the Argos, and distinguished himself by a forty-yard run through a broken field for a try after Norcross, of the Argos, had fumbled a punt.

Ben Simpson, who this year is captain of the Tigers, played his usual magnificent game against Ottawa Saturday, a despatch saying that Simpson gave a grand exhibition of generalship and that he outkicked his opponents.

They Keep The Brakes Set

And So Can Never Be Their Best

Many men, and more women, go through life like a train with the engine tugging, but the brakes hard on. They never get anywhere near top speed, because they are never really well.

Probably they do not own even to themselves that they are sick, but they scarcely known what it is to really "feel good". Always there is Headache, or that "dragged out feeling" which makes good work, either mental or physical, utterly impossible.

The most common trouble with all these people is that they have Constipation. Their systems are poisoned with the waste matter, which stays in the blood, instead of being promptly removed by the bowels. Harsh purgatives are worse than no treatment at all, because they weaken and irritate the bowels, instead of curing the trouble.

The natural and permanent cure for Constipation, is "Fruit-a-tives".

"Fruit-a-tives" combines the well-known laxative principles of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. So perfect is the combination, that "Fruit-a-tives" acts like the fresh fruit, by stimulating the sluggish liver to supply the proper amount of bile to move the bowels regularly.

The most stubborn cases of Constipation promptly yield to the curative and corrective effects of "Fruit-a-tives".

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c.—at dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CURE FOR WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. William Bell, Branchbridge, Ont. writes: "My three boys had whooping cough and we could get nothing to help them until we used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It arrested the coughs at once and they kept on improving until they were cured on the sum of one dollar. This was not a large bill for so dangerous and distressing an ailment."

GUELPH ROAD RACES

Bigger Prizes Than Ever Have Been Arranged for This Year.

One day recently, Thos. J. Hannigan and J. P. Downey, M.P., two well known sports of Guelph, waited on the Executive Committee of the C.A.A.U. in Toronto and made of them some very important requests, with respect to the holding of the big Annual Thanksgiving Day Meet of the Guelph Cross Country Run and Road Race Association in their city.

What Mr. Downey and Mr. Hannigan wanted was the permission of the Union to give prizes at their meet of a considerably greater value than those which are allowed for in the rules of the Union. Owing to the fact that it has always been the failing of the management of the Guelph meet to be lavish in their dealings with prize winners, the C.A.A.U. Executive granted their request.

So it is that this year, as for the past fourteen years, the Guelph Road Race Association are preparing to put up the biggest list of valuable prizes ever offered for an annual athletic event. The prizes last year totalled in value about $800, and the number and value of them will likely be increased this year.

Thos. Hewer is the President of the Guelph Association this year and W. R. Watson is the Secretary.

The list of races they have arranged for this coming Thanksgiving Day is as follows:

Morning Programme
Boys under 12 years of age, 1 mile, local.
Boys over 12 years and under 15 years of age, 2 miles, local.
Five mile factory race, local.
Poosties race, 5 mile walk, local.
Afternoon Programme
15 mile run, open.
10 mile cross country run, open.
10 mile walk, open.
5 mile run, open.
Ladies' 3 mile walk, open.
Athletes make their entries with Secretary W. R. Watson of Guelph.

INDIGESTION GOES IN FIVE MINUTES

Heartburn, Dyspepsia, Gas and Other Stomach Misery Vanishes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach troubles or indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and, tastes like candy; though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

The city will have many Diapepsin pranks, as many people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too if you ever try a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

Have you had your seats reserved for "The Honeymooners" at the "Grand" next Wednesday? Seats now on sale. 1d-85

DRUNK FALLS THROUGH PLATE GLASS WINDOW

After apparently kicking a large plate glass window in the building on Water street just south of Mason's greenhouse, a South African War veteran lost his balance and fell backwards shattering the glass into a hundred pieces. He was loosely and uncertainly picking his way along Water street this afternoon about three o'clock attracting no particular notice until there was the sound of breaking glass, followed by a more prolonged sound of the same nature and looking in the direction an Examiner reporter saw the stranger disappear through the window. How he escaped cutting himself is more than the eye witnesses can explain. The man was intoxicated, which probably rendered him immune, according to the theory popularly held.

A woman at the second-story building remarked as P. C. McGinty collared the one-time soldier, "I thought some one was knocking the house down."

A wit explained that the stranger likely saw himself reflected in the pane and not recognizing the individual made a "saving" at him. At any rate the window was utterly destroyed, and the stranger a few minutes later was found asleep, lying on the pieces with his legs dangling over the jagged edge of the sash. He objected to P. C. McGinty's suggestion that they go for a stroll, but finally saw it in the same light and was placed in one of the cells.

Missionary's Earnest Appeal To Help The Inland Sailors

Are the sailors in our own inland waters neglected? That they are given the missionary aid they required from the churches and religious workers was most convincingly brought home in an appealing and earnest address last night at St. Andrew's curch by Mr. J. S. Porter, of Toronto, father of Rev. J. G. Potter, pastor of St Andrew's. At the morning service of the Muray Street Baptist church Mr. Cottar addresed the congregation on the same subject. On the chain of great lakes and the St. Lawrence and her tributary waters there are 25,000 sailors, with but four missionaries to grapple with the great work of bringing religious teaching to them, which is most essential in their lives when they are so. Unrestrained by any immediate ties of home or family and are confronted by the greatest temptations. Four missionaries among a restless, moving congregation of 25,000 souls makes the ministration an arduous and trying one, but despite the innumerable difficulties they have to face the missionaries are doing a splendid work, and their labours have fruitful with wide-reaching and encouraging results.

In the course of his address Mr. Potter outlined very fully the different phases of endeavour among the sailors, and told many touching, lively stories in connection with his long experience as a sailor missionary.

The splendid work of the distribution of the library boxes among the ships and the lumber camps, by means of which the men are supplied with interesting and helpful literature.

Financial aid is greatly needed for the carrying on of the work and when the appeal is made to them it is to be hoped the people of Peterborough wil contribute substantially to a highly commendable cause.

Gold Medal Awarded The G. T. R. Co. For Their Exhibit

The Grand Trunk Railway Company secured the gold medal for their building and exhibit at the Alaska Yukon Pacific Exposition. Mr. W Buntin, city ticket agent, received word to that effect last night. This distinction is much coveted by the transportation companies and the success of the G. T. R. in this matter is quite in keping with the way they do all things they undertake.

A reference to the Grand Trunk building taken from a pamphlet to hand, is as follows:

Besides the Canadian exhibit to represent its wealth, industry and commerce of Canada, the Grand Trunk Railway system and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway have installed a valuable and attractive exhibit.

A special building has been erected for its purpose with a structure being modelled after the lines of Greek architecture, making a very handsome building. The interior has been turned into a veritable art gallery and the collection of photographs that have ben placed on the walls, depicting scenes on the Grand Trunk Railway System, are works of art and will attract a great deal of attention. The decorations of the interior are principally of grains and grasses from the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta and are placed for exhibition purposes to show the wonderful development of the lands through which the Grand Trunk Railway passes, and the opportunities that are offered to the agriculturist in Western Canada.

In addition to these, valuable specimens of fish and game native to Canadian forests and waters enhance the genral effect of the interior, and exhibits from Northern British Columbia add to the interests of this handsome display.

PARKDALE CANOE CLUB BEAT THE T. A. A. C.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—T. A. A. C., who tied the Argonauts for the city Rugby championship last year, and who were billed to secure their entry into the interprovincial senior series by winning the O. R. F. U. championship, went out to Diamond Park on Saturday afternoon to play the Parkdale Canoe Club in the opening game of the season. When it was over Parkdale had a score of 15 points, while T. A. A. C. had failed to tally. Parkdale's wing was an all-round surprise. As a junior team last year they were away the best in Canada, but their jump into senior ranks was looked upon with doubt. Saturday's result proved their right to play in senior company. T. A. A. C. had it on the paddlers in weight both on the line and back division, but in speed and the fine points of the game they were outclassed. Parkdale scored first on a kick to the dead-line by Beddoe. At half-time the score was 5 to 0. In the second half Meagan went over for a try and in the last quarter Leonard bucked over another. T. A. A. C. were only dangerous on one occasion, when, with the ball in their possession and but 15 yards to go, they failed to score.

Beddoe, of Parkdale, who was moved up from the juniors last week, was the most effective man on the field. He kicked repeatedly for gains and on many occasions sent the ball too far for the Parkdale wings. The Parkdale backs played splendidly and the wing line was altogether too much for the T. A. A. C. men. Grant and Holden were the best men on their team, with McGiffen a close second. T. A. A. C. plainly lacked condition, the pace telling on them severely in the second half. Beddoe's misfs were very costly.

A smart style for winter wear.

STATISTICS FROM THE ANNUAL REPORT OF PETERBOROUGH JAIL

236 Prisoners Were Received During the Year From Sept. 30th, 1908, to Oct. 1st, 1909—Interesting Facts From the Report.

COST OF MAINTENANCE

The annual report of the Peterborough County Gaol has been recently prepared and was filed by Sheriff Hall on Saturday. The statistics for the past year are given in detail and may be considered, on the whole, favourable to a city of nearly 17,000 inhabitants. Two hundred and thirty-six prisoners were received during the year which closed on September 30th, when only six persons were left to eat at the County's expense and to break the stones and saw the wood, the only occupations generally believed to be carried on behind the portals of Castle Nesbitt. Of the 236 offenders, 16 were women. The majority of the sentences were for short terms, the favourite being "thirty days." Six months is also a popular "hand out," some eighteen having done time to that extent. Fourteen unfortunates destined for Central Prison passed the interim on the hill until they could be accommodated in the Queen City institution. Prisoners fared at the expense of the Government for 479 days while those who were maintained by the County were recorded for 5023 days, making a total of 5502 days. The daily cost per prisoner for rations was 8 3-4 cents which according to a fundamental rule in arithmetic means that the cost of feeding the prisoners during 1908 was about $481.42.

Methodist	73	3
Other religions	9	1

The married men have conducted themselves much better than those who are classed single, at least the record is better, thus demonstrating, probably that "little wifie's" influence is for the better, or that a man realizes his responsibility to her and their children. The figures are:

	Male	Female

Gaol Expenditure

Food, Clothing, etc.	$985
Salaries	$1,400

To those who have never been incarcerated within the four gray walls it may be news to know that there are 18 cells. The greatest number of prisoners recorded on any day was 25 which day if a guess is permissible was the occasion of the reception of the swarthy Mexicans during the latter part of June. They did not remain long, having secured their liberty immediately took steps to entertain the citizens of Peterborough at the beautiful park the city has provided in the South Ward.

On the 30th of September 1908, there were 15 prisoners in the gaol and on the same date this year there were only 6 all of whom were serving sentences under two months.

Young Potato-Pickers Form Union And Set Their Price

Examiner Special.

Fraserville, Oct. 11.—The youngsters in and around this village have formed a Potato Pickers' Union, and have refused to pick potatoes for less than seventy-five cents per day. The youthful unionists, about ten in number were engaged to pick some potatoes the other day, by a prominent farmer of this vicinity, and when they arrived for the days' work, were offered fifty cents for the day, they immediately dropped their pails saying they would go ohme before they would take less than seventy-fice. Th farmer was unable to get other help and was forced to come up to the requested rate. The boys have admitted since, however, that a seventyfive cent day is harder than a fifty-center, to put it in their own words.

City's Gain In Population Compared With Other Places

When the assessors' returns just received by City Clark Armstrong are compared with those of other Ontario towns and cities the record is a very encouraging one and should increase the citizens' confidence in Peterborough. The increase in population here was 416 while Hamilton had only 301, St. Catharines 5, Stratford 290, Brantford 78 and Lindsay 47.

The population of the Scugog town, according to the last roll is 7861; Brantford has 20,711; Stratford 14,779, Hamilton 67,398 and Peterborough numbers 16,902.

POTATO PRODIGIES KEEN COMPETITION

The City and the North and South Heard From—South Monaghan So Far Lowers the Beam.

If the big potato rivalry keeps up we shall soon have enough stock dumped on "the editor's table" to provision a small family for the winter. According to the returns the potato crop this year is an immense success.

SOUTH MONAGHAN MONSTERS.

Mr. Joseph Byers, South Monaghan, struggled into the Examiner sanctum this morning under the burden of the really, truly biggest potato. This tremendous tuber, which looks not unlike a flattened pink pumpkin, is called in the catalogues the "Mammoth Wonderful," and it well deserves the name. Mr. Byers' specimen weighs two pounds, nine and one-half ounces, and is probably the largest potato ever grown in this country. It is an early ripening, good yielding potato of good quality. A potato of such size, if produced anywhere in the country, should very properly be grown in South Monaghan, which will not have much trouble with such a witness to prove its claim to be the most fertile township in the province. This big potato is another evidence of the growing time in Canada under Liberal rule, which Mr. Byers, as a good Grit, helped to bring into existence and keep going.

MARK SPENCELEY'S SPUDS.

Mr. Mark Spenceley has left with the Examiner a trio of tremendous tubers. These potatoes were grown by him on his estate, corner of Smith and Downey streets, and their weight is respectively 18 1-2, 20 1-2, and 21 ounces. And they are not selected big ones, either, just the run of the row, fair specimens of the whole crop. Any one who has any doubt can inspect the potatoes stored in his cellar.

McGregor's Money-Makers.

Hall's Bridge is the next "county heard from." Mr. William McGregor has enterd two Brobdinguagian tubers in the informal competition. These potatoes, grown near Hall's Bridge, weigh respecively, 1 lb. 15 os., and 1 pound, 13 ounces, the two aggregating 3 pounds and three-quarters. They are named "Money-makers," and certainly, if value goes by bulk, they deserve the name. They are a pendenous evidence of the fertility of the north, whose reputation hereafter need not rest only in big lunge.

TO BUCKHORN

Two Gentlemen From Cincinnati on Annual Fishing Trip.

Messrs. N. A. Lloyd and Chas. Cogrove of Cincinnati arrived in the city yesterday morning on their way to Buckhorn where they will spend the next week or ten days fishing. This is Mr. Lloyd's eighth annual trip to the Northern fishing grounds for the sport which he keenly loves. He has previously met with encouraging results in the vicinity of Buckhorn and is hopeful of again landing some of the best of the finny tribe. A number of years ago he hooked a thirty-five pound lunge which he had mounted and which now adorns one of the walls of his den in his home in Cincinnati.

THE KING AS MEDIATOR

All Britain is Busy Discussing the Phases of the Fiscal Problem—Government Will Depend on Unemployed For Their Campaign Object Lesson — Lloyd-George Says Bill Must Go Through.

London, Oct. 11.—The past week has been one of great political excitement, culminating in Prime Minister Asquith's sudden visit to the King and the announcement that the House of Commons would adjourn for a week from Saturday.

There is no longer any seriousness in the attempts to keep up the pretence that the visits of Lord Rosebery, the Earl of Cawdor and Mr. Asquith to Balmoral were not connected with the political crisis. The official and reasonable explanation of the week's adjournment is that fully a week is required for drafting alterations to the budget, but there is no doubt that these visits to the King and the week's adjournment have one object, that of affording an opportunity to ascertain whether the constitutional crisis cannot be averted.

It is not suggested that the King is giving the weight of his personal aid to either side, but rather that he is acting in home politics, as he has so consistently done in international politics, in his favorite role of peacemaker. Meanwhile, nothing is said or done to throw the slightest light on the situation. What finally will be the action of the Lords and the Government remains a mystery.

Mr. Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, declares that the Lords must pass the budget as it stands, but despite assurances such as this from responsive Ministers, there is a strong tendency to revert to the first idea that a general election will come in November. It seems almost impossible that the point of dissolution can be reached in such a short time, but The Spectator fears it. The Outlook warns the Unionists against a sudden dissolution. The Saturday Review admits that it appears absurd, but says if the Government thinks the psychological moment has come, then dissolution will occur in November.

Speculation on these points and interest in the constitutional crisis have put the budget itself, free trade, tariff reform and other planks in both political platforms into the background, but the Unionists evidently intend to play unemployment, which is expected to be greater than ever during the coming winter, as their chief card.

Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a speech at Newcastle Saturday afternoon, made a vigorous defence of the budget and a bitter attack on the House of Lords. He declared that the bill was now practically in the form in which it was to become an act of Parliament. He said that instead of the measure being an attack on industry and property it was a fact that since its introduction in the House of Commons, trade and industry had increased.

The only stock which had gone down since the introduction of the bill, said the Chancellor, was that in dukes, in which there had been a great slump. A fully equipped duke cost as much to keep up as a couple of Dreadnoughts. So long as dukes were content to be mere idols and preserve that kind of stately silence which became their rank and intelligence, said the Chancellor, all went well. When the burgot came, however, they stepped down from their perches because the measure knocked a little gilt off their stage coaches.

What the Lords would do with the budget, declared the Chancellor, concerned themselves more than it did the Government. The more irresponsible and featherheaded among them wanted it thrown out. What the others would do depended in the first place on reports from the country.

The Chancellor went on dramatically: "What our fathers obtained through centuries of struggle, strife and bloodshed we will not lightly give up. The constitution is to be torn to pieces. Let them realize what they are doing. They are forcing a revolution.

"The Lords may declare a revolution," said the Chancellor, "but it is the people who will direct it. Issues will be raised that they little dream of."

The Chancellor concluded by declaring that the Government was going to have all the taxes in the budget or none.

Lloyd-George Attacked.

Newcastle, Eng., Oct. 11.—David Lloyd-George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, received a popular welcome Saturday afternoon at the palace theatre here, where he gave to an audience of 4,000 what he called a "plain talk on the subject of a budget." "We are going to send that bill up to the House of Lords and get all the taxes or none," said the Chancellor.

When Lloyd-George was leaving the theatre a crowd of suffragettes made a dash toward his car. Lady Constance Lytton, who was armed with a hatchet, Mrs. H. N. Brailsford and Miss Davison were arrested.

Earlier in the day, four other sympathizers with the suffragettes were sentenced to fourteen days at hard labor for indulging in a window smashing campaign at the local Liberal club.

GAMES NOW EVEN.

Detroits Beats Pittsburg In Second of Series.

Forbes Field, Pittsburg, Pa., Oct 11.—Detroit on Saturday evened up the count in the world's championship series by defeating Pittsburg 7 to 2, in a one-sided game at Forbes Field. The Detroit players batted Camnitz hard in the early innings, and he was succeeded by Willis in the third inning. Willis was also hit hard in the fifth inning, and Detroit scored two more runs off him.

The first inning was all Pittsburg, but after that the National League champions were never in the running for a moment. Two two-baggers and a base on balls off "Wild Bill" Donovan, in the first innings, was the end of their ability to hit him. After this he became better every inning, and the hard hitting Pittsburg men were absolutely helpless before his brilliant twirling. Only three hits were made off Donovan after the first inning.

One of the sensational features was a brilliant steal of home by Ty. Cobb in the third inning on the first ball pitched by Willis. Gibson was so surprised at the unexpected feat of Cobb that he dropped the ball as Cobb slid under the plate.

Big Mission Campaign.

New York, Oct. 11.—Unique in the history of religious movements is the national missionary campaign which will be launched this week by the laymen's missionary movement, representing the laymen of all the Protestant churches in the United States.

In 75 principal cities, east and west, north and south, men's missionary conventions will be held, at which an aggregate attendance of more than 100,000 men is expected.

Ten thousand men are now serving on local committees in preparation for the meetings. President Taft heads the list of over 200 speakers, who will be heard throughout the winter. This list includes prominent public men, officers of army and navy, newspaper men, bankers, business and professional men, ministers, mission board secretaries and missionaries.

The campaign will open at Buffalo, N.Y., on Dec. 16. In November, the circuit will swing along the eastern coast and include Providence, Boston, Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. It will swing as far west as Detroit in December. Three or four days will be spent in each city.

Milliner Guilty of Murder.

Gustrow, Germany, Oct. 11.—A verdict of guilty was Saturday handed down in the case of Auguste Zobel, a Berlin milliner, charged with the murder last March, of Friedo Bertbold, a young opera singer. The motive of the crime was jealousy. The accused woman was sentenced to death.

She testified that a Berlin commercial traveler had cast her off and become engaged to Frauleln Bertbold. Although she pleaded guilty, Frauleln Zobel averred that she intended only to shoot the singer in the throat to ruin her voice, and that it was by accident that the bullet penetrated her left eye and killed her.

Czar to Avoid Italy.

Rome, Oct. 11.—The Czar's visit to Italy has been abandoned, at least for the present, owing to the illness of the Czarina, which is due to nervous excitement and worry. Apart from every other consideration, the Czar cannot risk a hostile reception, which would affect the Czarina's health.

The above is the official explanation, but it is well-known that the visit would have been abandoned whether the Czarina was ill or well, because the Government, though willing to guard the Czar's life, knew that it would be impossible to exclude hostile demonstrations.

C.P.R. Men Charged With Theft.

Owen Sound, Oct. 11.—John Johns, assistant foreman at the C.P.R. steamship freight sheds, and two employes, George Christie and James Ferris, are under arrest, charged with theft from goods in transit. Stolen articles include hose worth several hundred dollars, ladies' gloves and shoes, soap, chocolate and creams, and were found, it is stated, at Johns' home. He comes of an old and respected family. The adojurned hearing takes place next Saturday.

Saved From Drowning.

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 11.—Constables Harry Filson and Marshall Armstrong saved James Elliott, Elginburg, from drowning at midnight on Saturday.

Elliott was under the influence of liquor and fell into the slip at the foot of Queen street. He cried for help and the constables, who were a block away, heard and found Elliott almost exhausted. He will have to answer a charge of drunkenness in the Police Court.

Methodists Celebrate.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 11.—The eighty-fifth anniversary of the foundation of the Methodist Missionary Society of Canada was celebrated last night in the Dominion Methodist Church.

Henry Woodruff of St. David's was killed on the G.T.R. tracks at Stamford early yesterday morning. The body was terribly mangled. Deceased left his home Saturday and went to Niagara Falls. He left there that night, walking home on the tracks.

The horribly mangled remains of an unknown man, about 28 years of age, were found last night on the Grand Trunk tracks about a quarter of a mile east of the Hyde Park station. In the pockets were street car tickets from Toronto, London and New York.

International Trades Unionism.

New York, Oct. 11.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, landed Saturday from the steamer La Savoie from Europe.

He said that at the International Trades Union Conference in Berlin, to which he was a fraternal delegate, he had strongly favored the formation of an international trades union. "The question as given much consideration," Mr. Gompers added, "and was finally tabled and will be discussed at the next international conference in Budapest."

Convicted of Manslaughter.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11.—The jury has returned a verdict of manslaughter against Capt. Ralph Pringle, well-known as a navigator of the great lakes, who was tried for the killing of George Birrell McKinnon in the "Hole in the Wall" saloon in St. Clair last winter. The verdict carries a penalty of from 5 to 10 years in prison.

Pringle's plea was that McKinnon had invaded the sanctity of his home.

"Dead" Man Greets Mourners.

St. Catharines, Oct. 11.—Friday afternoon a number of people from this city took the electric car to Fonthill to attend the funeral of Rev. William Teeple, a retired Methodist minister, who had been making his home in that village. The mourners were received at the house by Teeple himself, who seemed to appreciate the joke on the local paper which had printed the obituary. He had been seriously ill.

Body Found in Whirlpool.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Oct. 11.—The body of an unidentified man about 45 years old, was taken from the whirlpool. It had been in the water several weeks and was in a bad state of decomposition. On a finger was a ring bearing the initials "P.J.K." in monogram, and the same initials on a locket held with a chain. The man was about five feet nine inches and weighed about 150 pounds.

Cody Fails to Fly to London.

Aldershot, Eng., Oct. 11.—Captain F. S. Cody, the American aeroplanist in the service of the British army, started on a flight to London at 7.25 o'clock Saturday morning. He had not made more than half a circle of the plain when he came down, and it was learned that the engine was flooded with oil, one of the taps having been left open all night.

Dies After 16 Years.

New York, Oct. 11.—Mrs. Mary G. Baldwin, wife of Homer E. OUR EXHIBIT of Pianos and Organs at the Fall and at our Show Rooms attracted great attention and admiration for their beauty of design, perfect action and purity of tone.

ONE MUSICIAN a graduate of one of the best Conservatories of music in Canada remarked that "The Newcombe Piano is one finest tone Pianos I ever heard.

OTHERS admired the tone of the Heintzman Pianos.

AND SOME others praised the Sherlock-Manning—both said they grudge perfect tones but of different qualities.

WE WOULD be pleased to discuss tone quality and Piano construction with you. There are reasons for different qualities and there are good, best and heretible Pianos. Let us tell you about them before you buy.

STRATHCONAS BEAT OLD BOYS IN LAST BALL GAME OF SEASON

City Leaguers Won an Interesting Game by 5 to 3--Harry Burridge and Jerry Edmonds Were in the Game---Sheridan's Running Catch Was the Calcium Feature.

The last ball game of the season was played in perfect baseball weather at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, when the Strathconas defeated a team of local old boys, headed by Harry Burridge and Jerry Edmunds, by a score of 5 to 3, in a 7-innings' game. Considering that the teams have had no practice for weeks the game was a good exhibition, marked by classy fielding on both sides. Considerable interest was taken of course, in the work of Edmunds and Burridge, who have just returned after a season in the Northwestern League, Edmunds with Winnipeg and Burridge with Edmonton. They alternated behind the bat and at second and both did classy work.

Gorman was on the slab for the Straths, and the three-fingered artist was in great fettle, holding the Old Boys down to four hits. In only two innings was he hit hard, and he was given great support. Flaherty did the artillery work for the Old Boys, and was also in form, so that the game was a hard-fought one all the way. Dooley Sheridan had the feature play in the third when he corralled Kendry's long drive after a hard run. Ray fielded splendidly at third for the Straths.

M. O'Brien carried off the batting honours, getting three clean hits in the same number of times at bat.

In the first innings Parnell, who was first up, was retired on strikes; Burridge drew four bad ones and stole second; Edmonds was safe at first, when M. O'Brien dropped Ray's throw, Burridge scoring. Dobson threw high to second to catch Edmonds stealing, the ball going to centre fielder, while "Jerry" completed the circuit. Flaherty grounded out Quinlan to O'Brien, while Graham was retired; Ray to O'Brien, two runs.

M. O'Brien opened for the Straths, by taking one of Yebber's shoots in the side. Shaw dropped one over second and O'Brien was forced out; Edmonds to Sheridan, at the middle station. Shaw stole second and was sacrificed to third by H. O'Brien. Quinlan singled over second, scoring Shaw, Kendry fanned.—One run.

The Old Boys went out in order in their half of the second, while the Straths accummulated three more. Dobson flew out to Flaherty, Ray was hit by a pitched ball. He stole second. Curtis fanned; Graham got life on Graham's fumble. Ray scored. Graham stole second; M. O'Brien singled to centre, sending Gorham over the plate. O'Brien stole second and third; Shaw bunted down the 3rd base line. O'Brien going home; H. O'Brien ended the innings by grounding out, Flaherty to Graham.—Three runs.

In the first of the third, Doherty went out, Graham to O'Brien, Parnell fanned; Burridge singled; Edmonds tripled to left; Burridge scoring. Flaherty struck out.—One run.

In the Straths portion, Quinlan was safe on Sheridan's fumble. He stole second; Kendry flew out to Sheridan. Dooley pulled down the drive, after a great run. Edmonds threw to catch Quinlan, stealing third, but Parnell let the ball get away and Prunes raced home. Dobson was hit. Ray fanned, while Curtis grounded out to Flaherty, to Graham.

This ended the run getting as each side was retired in order during the last four innings.

THE COLLEGIATE TEAM BADLY BEATEN AT PORT HOPE SATURDAY

T. C. S. Senior Team Won the Return Game by 22 Points to Nil, Showing a Complete Reversal of Form Over Their Showing Here a Week Ago---Game Was Harder Fought Than the Score Would Indicate.

By a Staff Representative.

T.C.S. 22, Collegiate 0.

Such was the score at Port Hope on Saturday in the return game between the Trinity College School team and the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. Beaten here a week ago the Trinity team showed a complete reversal of form on its own grounds and won handily after an interesting game that was far more vigorously contested than the score would indicate.

The Collegiate team was beaten and well beaten but they fought with every ounce of strength in them to avert that beating and were in possession of the ball just as much as their opponents. Fate would not permit them to score and although on several occasions they had by persistent, steady play worked the ball to within scoring range the timers' whistle killed their chances.

Allan Campbell of Peterborough, an old T.C.S. captain has been coaching the Port Hope team for the past week and their improved form was a striking testimonial of the efficiency of his training methods. He has grounded them in the principles of straight foot ball and that was what they showed Saturday. No trick plays were attempted, the team instead depending upon the speed of their halves and the kicking of Conyers to win for them. The half line played a splendid combination game, all three often handling the ball in one play and as their passing was fast and accurate and all three men speedy and good dodgers these tactics gained vast stretches of ground for them and the efficiency of the play was increased by the fact that the Collegiate team did not tackle with their usual accuracy, often missing the man by going too high when a proper tackle would have averted a long run. As a result the T.C.S. backs got away frequently for thirty and forty yards dashes and only the brilliant diving tackle of Capt. Gibson averted touches on several occasions when every one else had been passed.

The Collegiate on the other hand relied more on mass play and it did not prove successful. The T.C.S. had a good system of defence and the line plunging of the Collegiate backs was stopped in effective fashion on most occasions, while the wings came through on Richardson so fast when kicking was adopted that the centre half had very little time to get rid of the ball and his punting was therefore not nearly as effective as usual. The Collegiate team made their greatest gains by runs around the end. Gibson getting away for several pretty dodging runs. Despite the score however, the Peterborough team acquitted themselves well, holding T.C.S. down to 11 points for the first three quarters and working like demons all the way. Although defeated they made a most favourable impression and their work was most creditable. They have not the same opportunities for practice as have the winners and were handicapped in other ways.

The weather was rather on the warm side for Rugby but otherwise the conditions were ideal with scarcely any wind.

Gibson was the star of the Peterborough team. In addition to his clever tackling he tore off a number of sensational runs one for forty yards and made good gains through the line on mass plays while he caught splendidly. Burritt was also in the limelight. He was cool and accurate in his handling of punts and ran back the kicks in splendid fashion. He had one of the feature plays of the day just before time was called when taking an on-side kick from Richardson he dodged half the T.C.S. team and carried the ball forty-five yards, passing to Kelly four feet from the line. Kelly was nailed a yard out and time was called before Peterborough had a chance to score.

Geale played his usual reliable and effective game at quarter and Rankin did everything he was called upon to do in splendid fashion, his tackling being very effective. All the wing line worked hard and it would be unfair to specialize.

Conyers and McAuley were the bright lights for the T.C.S. team, Conyers' punting was a treat and he further distinguished himself by dropping a goal from the forty-five yerd line at a most difficult angle. McAuley had the star play of the day when taking a long pass from Laing, he skirted the right end of the Collegiate and ran sixty-five yards for a touchdown. Gibson and Burritt each missed the flying half back by inches and Harstone pulled him down after a long chase but not before he was behind the magic line.

Laing at quarter back backed nicely and hit long passes to the outside halves were as accurate as from Man McGinnity's "cross fire."

The wing line was a shade heavier than the Collegiate and a little more than held their own in the mass plays.

The officials, Mr. Ingles of T.C.S as referee, and Allan Campbell as umpire were entirely satisfactory.

T.C.S. forced the play from the kick-off and soon had the Collegiate on the defensive. Capt. Gibson's men fought them back to centre but they came on again and a couple of Collegiate offsides carried the ball close to Peterborough's line. Two backs failed to gain but Innis went around the right end for a fifteen yard run for a try which Conyers converted neatly. Score Port Hope 6, Peterborough 0.

There was no further scoring during the quarter.

In the second quarter the Collegiate team rallied and had a little better of the play all the way, Conroy got around, the chances looked good for a try but he was called back for going outside. Peterborough fought hard but could not score and finally Conyers added to Trinity's total by dropping a brilliant goal from the forty-five yard line. Half time score, Port Hope 10, Peterborough 0.

The third quarter was the most even and bitterly fought of the game. Neither team could score although they were both in a position to do so. On their long passing game Trinity carried the ball to within a yard of the Peterborough line. It looked like an easy try but the Collegiate team made a gallant stand and held the visitors for downs, three bucks in succession failing to gain an inch for T.C.S. Then Collegiate commenced a march down the field that carried them within scoring distance but time was called before they could register.

T.C.S. kicked more in the final quarter and the score was quickly increased. Two kicks to the dead line by Conyers brought the total up to twelve and then Martin scored a try by fast following up of a drop kick by Conyers which went wide of the mark. The fullback followed the ball and dropped on it before the Peterborough backs could clear. The try was not converted. Soon after McAuley got away for his sixty-five yard run for another touchdown which Conyers failed to convert. Then came Burritt's sensational run and the timer's whistle cutting off Peterborough's last chance to score.

Full time score, Port Hope 22, Peterborough 0.

Savage, the Port Hope middle wing had his ankle badly sprained in the first quarter and had to retire his place being taken by a substitute.

HIAWATHAS MADE HIGHEST SCORES

The Hiawatha Gun Club paid a visit to the city on Friday last, coming up by the way of the river, through the kindness of Mr. Wedlock, who brought them up on his yacht. During the afternoon a match was shot with the Peterborough Gun Club. A finer day for a shoot could not have been and some excellent scores were made. Mr. M. Howard made the high score of twenty-three, winning the hat presented by Mr. Cyril Lech for the highest individual score.

Being all crack shots, among them Mr. F. Simpson, Peterborough's champion runner, the competition throughout the match was most exciting. It resulted in a victory for the visitors. The following are the scores at 25 birds each:

SENIORS HAD GREAT PRACTICE SATURDAY

The Peterborough Rugby Club had its best practice of the season on Saturday afternoon, when a big squad of men were out in uniform and were put through a hard drilling by Coach Dr. MacPherson. The team showed good form and went at their work in a manner that indicated that their heart is in the task, and they will undoubtedly give a good account of themselves on Saturday when they are called upon to go up against the Parkdale Canoe Club. New signals were used Staurday and the team has already mastered them and they should work out nicely. Among those who were out Saturday were the following: O'Connor, Lundy, Dickson, Davidson, A. Quinlan, H. Quinlan, Corkery, McKnight, Turner, Dorris Staunton, Fitzgerald, Moore, Ecclestone, Thornton, Clarke, Cannift, Hickey, and others.

The practice was featured by the appearance of "Tick" Thornton, the old scrimmage player, who has been out of the game for a number of years, but who jumped back into harness on Saturday and cavorted around like a youngster.

PARKDALE CANOE CLUB HERE ON SATURDAY

The first game in the senior O.R.F.U. series will be played here on Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park when the fast Parkdale Canoe Club, last year Dominion junior champions will clash with the Peterborough seniors. The paddlers are evidently a very strong team as in the first O.R.F.U. game in Toronto on Saturday they cleaned up Peterborough's old rivals, the T.A.A.C. by 15 points to nil. They are fast and tricky and will prove worthy foemen on Saturday when they appear here for the first time. They will come down here confident of victory and will take a lot of beating.

The local seniors will be represented by a strong team, which under Dr. MacPherson's able coaching is rounding into great shape. The boys will practise nearly every night this week and will be in the pink of condition for the game which promises to be one of the best seen here in years. There will no doubt be a big crowd present as great interest is being taken in the appearance here of the paddlers and the local talent are anxious to get a line on the Peterborough team. It will be a game well worth seeing.

LAWN BOWLING.

A meeting of all interested in bowling will be held at the Peterborough Alleys, George street, on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of reorganizing the Bowling League.

OBITUARY.

WILLIE GALVIN.

Much sympathy is extended Mr. and Mrs. John F. Galvin, Downie street, in the loss they have sustained by the death of their son, William, who passed away yesterday at half-past one. He was ten years of age, and was a very bright little fellow. He was a great favourite among his playmates, and much sorrow is felt among them at his death. He had been ill with typhoid fever.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock from the family residence to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

LAID TO REST.

The funeral of the late Miss Bridget Cosgrove took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, Ennismore, to St. Martin's church, and thence to St. Martin's cemtery. The funeral cortège was one of the longest that has ever been seen in that township, over one hundred and fifty vehicles being in attendance. At the church and at the grave, Rev. Father Bretherton, of Hastings, conducted the services.

WM. J. JOHNSTON.

The death occurred early this morning of William J. Johnston, 635 Water street, early this morning from a visit to his mother at Neche, North Dakota. He had been suffering from a complication of diseases. He was 50 years of age, and had lived here a number of years. He was a man well known and highly respected, and his death will be learned of with deep regret.

His wife, his mother, three sisters, and two brothers are left to mourn his loss. The sisters are Mrs. Oakman, Hastings; Mrs. Wm. Hall, Le Roi, N. D.; and the brothers are Robert, of North Dakota, and Matthew in California.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday, at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

TUB TALK No. 1

First get some Taylor's Borax Soap (1 cake will be about enough if you have been accustomed to using 2 of the ordinary kind). Do the woollens first because they take longer to dry. Make a strong suds, using lukewarm water, and put in the flannels. Let them soak for a few minutes, then rub gently by hand. Don't rub the soap on the flannels and don't use a wash board. Rinse in lukewarm water, wring out and dry as quickly as possible. Woolens washed with Taylor's Borax Soap never shrink, feel softer and look better. 5c a cake at all grocers'. Try one. It softens the water and won't hurt your hands.

PROMINENT JURIST DEAD

Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench and Member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, Succumbs to Bladder Ailment—Was Knighted in 1902—Was Only Sixty-Seven Years Old.

Montreal, Oct. 12.—A cable received last night announced the death at Montmorency, France, yesterday, of Sir Henri Taschereau, Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench of the Province of Quebec. Deceased had been in poor health for some time, and his death was caused by bladder trouble. The remains will be brought to Canada for interment.

The late Rt. Hon. Sir Henri Elzear Taschereau was in his 68th year. He was called to the Quebec bar in 1857; appointed K.C. in 1867; sat in the Legislative Assembly for Beauce County, 1861-7; was appointed judge of the Quebec Superior Court in 1871, and a judge of the Supreme Court in 1878. In 1902 he was appointed to the Privy Council, and was a member of the judicial committee. In 1902 he was created a knight. His publications included several law books. He was twice married.

Farmers Must Change.

Montreal, Oct. 12.—F. W. Thompson, vice-president of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., arrived yesterday from the west, and says that his former crop estimate of 115,000,000 bushels will be fully maintained, and that 90,000,000 have already been delivered at the elevators.

Only the very best weather saved millions of bushels from ruin, and farmers will certainly have to modify their farming methods and go in more for mixed farming, as it will be quite impossible to secure adequate help. By mixed farming, they will be able to keep their help all the year round.

There is no such a thing as scarcity of cars, and everything is going like clock work. Mr. Thompson says that there will be another large city somewhere in the middle west, viz., between Winnipeg and the Rockies, and wherever the Ogilvie Co. decide that city is to be located, there they will build their big additional elevator.

New Rules For Bishops.

Rome, Oct. 12.—New rules affecting the bishops throughout the world were made known at the Vatican yesterday. Bishops shall be allowed two years, following their appointment to arrange the canonical visitations in their dioceses. Five years after that they must visit the Pope, such visits to be repeated once in every five years.

Children's Strange Malady.

GIRL GETS BIG FORTUNE

Young Toronto Woman, Who Married Foremost American Lawyer of Paris In New York Four Years Ago, is Left Large Estate at His Death—Income is Estimated at One Hundred Thousand Per Year.

New York, Oct. 12.—The will of Edmond Kelly, a famous New Yorker, who became the foremost American lawyer in Paris, representing nearly every American litigant who sought justice from French courts of law, discloses that nearly all his large fortune, including the magnificent Kelly home in France, has been left to his youthful wife, formerly Miss Edith Thurreson of Toronto, to whom he was married August 22, four years ago, at the "Little Church Around the Corner" here, by Rev. Dr. Houghton.

The place, with one of the most extensive private libraries in the world, and filled with art treasures in pottery, bric-a-brac, antiques, paintings, etchings, engraving and sculpture, is called Coucy Le Chateau. It is very near Paris and is noted as a great show place, with extensive grounds, meadows and gardens.

His American home in this city and also at Nyack on the Hudson, contains over a hundred thousand volumes, which goes with the rest of the estate to his widow, after other bequests are paid. His income was over $100,000 a year. His fortune was invested in securities, largely American railroads.

May Be Truro Robber.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 12.—One of the robbers who at noon May 19 entered the office of the Canadian Express Co. in Truro, N.S., and with a revolver compelled the clerks to deliver cash and money orders amounting to about $9,000, is believed to be safely behind the bars here in the person of W. L. Burgess, a real estate speculator of 636 Pender street.

Burgess arrived several weeks ago and cut a wide swath, spending money like water. This aroused the suspicion of Supt. Walsh of the Canadian Detective Bureau. In the meantime 13 stolen money orders, each of $50, were received by the express company after being cashed in this city, and still a closer surveillance was kept on the suspect in an endeavor to secure a copy of his handwriting. Finally a detective bandaged his right hand and talked over with Burgess a real estate deal, and Burgess was prevailed upon to write his name and address. The writing appears identical.

Jumps From Balcony.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—When her husband came in their door at 155 University avenue at 11.40 last night, Mrs. James Barnes, who had been quarreling with him during the evening, crawled out of the front window upstairs and crossed from their balcony to that of their neighbor, J. E. Armstrong, 157 University avenue.

She tapped at the window and being refused admittance she threw herself to the ground some fifteen feet below and was there picked up unconscious by Policeman Phillips, who summoned the ambulance and sent her to St. Michael's Hospital.

Prefers Death to Asylum.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—With the papers of his committal to an asylum as a lunatic complete, and under a continual watch to avoid just such an act, Harry J. Orpen, for years a familiar figure down town, shot himself in his rooms at 773 West King street yesterday morning.

George S. Orpen, his brother, who was sleeping in the next room, heard the shot and rushed to find the man lying upon the floor before his mirror with a bullet hole in his left temple just over the eye. Dr. John Eadie, 889 West Queen street, was called, but could do nothing.

Prohibit Public Execution.

Paris, Oct. 12.—Premier Briand has promised a number of his friends, according to statements made by the latter yesterday, that when the chamber convened on Oct. 19, he will demand the repeal of the law making execution public. Several executions have been reproduced by moving picture concerns.

Militia Changes.
